SAIGH TAX CASE AMONG MANY TO BE RE-EXAMINED BY GRAND JURY

Ramifications of May Company Claim Also to Be Studied in Obstruction of Justice Inquiry.

Ramifications of a $10,000,000 tax claim by the May Department Stores Co. against the Government, and tax aspects of some business deals of Fred M. Saigh, former owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, are among many cases expected to be re-examined in the Federal grand jury investigation of the handling of tax cases in the Truman Administration, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

The jury last week indicted two former officials of the Truman Administration and an attorney in a tax case on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States. When the jury reconvenes Dec. 12, it will seek to determine if there was obstruction of justice in the cases being reopened, through interference by high Government officials, the Post-Dispatch was informed.

Matters to be re-examined, in addition to those involving the May Co. and Saigh, are expected to include:

The income tax case of Frank H. Niehaus, undertaker and head of a machine company, termed the "worst tax case" by United States District Judge George H. Moore.

Manne H. Mandel, St. Louis garment manufacturer, who escaped criminal prosecution in a tax evasion case involving about $150,000.

Marienfeld Case.

Arthur H. Marienfeld, president of Mar Meat Co., sentenced to prison following conviction of evading $23,968 in Federal income taxes.

Martin A. Shear, jewelry store operator, who pleaded guilty of tax evasion.

Further investigation of the $128,000 income tax case of Irving Sachs, St. Louis shoe broker, is indicated. The case, first one growing out of this inquiry to lead to formal charges of bribery and corruption of high Government officials, resulted in the indictment of Theron Lamar Caudle, former chief of the Justice Department's tax division, and Matthew J. Connelly, who was former President Truman's appointments secretary, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the United States.

Harry I. Schwimmer, attorney for Sachs, was indicted jointly with Caudle and Connelly, and separately for perjury. The perjury charge followed his testimony before the grand jury.

May Co. Rejected Scheme.

Re-examination of the May Co. tax claim was expected to have top priority with the grand jury. Ramifications involving reported efforts of politicians and office holders to profit through the claim have never been fully explored. The scheme collapsed when the department store company, operators of Famous-Barr, flatly rejected the proposals.

Lee B. Schumacher, former Kirkwood metallurgist, and George C. Bolz, a Clayton dredging contractor, suggested that the May Co. hire William M. Boyle Jr., then chairman of the Democratic National Committee, to represent the company in the tax claim. A 10 per cent fee, about $1,000,000, was suggested.

Had the proposal been accepted, the group, including Boyle, Schumacher and former Collector of Internal Revenue James P. Finnegan, reportedly expected to use the $1,000,000 as down payment in the pur-

FTC Assails 'Bait Advertising' As a Menace to Public's Purse

Federal Agency Pinpoints Practice of Luring Customer Into Buying Higher-Priced Article Through Cheap Come-On.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission today denounced "bait advertising" as a menace to the public's pocketbook.

It was understood that the statement was the first of several in which the commission would pinpoint trade practices which it considers especially undesirable.

Bait advertising is the practice of advertising a cheap piece of merchandise with the idea of luring the customer into buying a higher-priced article. The FTC regularly orders firms it discovers using such advertising to stop. If they violate the order they are subject to a $5000 a day penalty.

The FTC said many poor people are victimized by the practice, including aged persons living on small pensions.

The agency said bait advertising cannot be spotted by any single warning sign but that a combination of the following should put a buyer on guard:

"1. A product priced at a startlingly lower price than that charged for the same kind of product at other stores.

"2. Reluctance on the part of salesmen to show the advertised product.

"3. Disparagement of the advertised product, and insistence by the salesman on showing more expensive types.

"4. Explanation that the advertised product on hand is only a floor sample and that long delay will be encountered in getting others like it.

"5. A sell-out of the 'bargain' in a suspiciously short time, 'but let me show you something else even better.'"

COLD WEATHER RETURNING AFTER BALMY SATURDAY

Fair and cold weather was forecast for today by Meteorologist Harry F. Wahlgren, with the temperature near 30 this morning and changing little during the day. Low tomorrow will be in the low 20s, he predicted.

Nothing tomorrow is likely to match the reading of 66 degrees yesterday, he said. The mark, registered at noon, was just below the record high for the date, 67.8 degrees, set in 1916.

A snowstorm hit the western section of the Midwest yesterday with falls up to eight inches in some areas. The storm was whipped along by strong winds with gusts 25 to 30 miles an hour.

Heavy fog caused by contact of warm moist air with the cold ground, reduced visibility to less than 100 feet yesterday morning in parts of the St. Louis area.

ROCKET CHIEF SAYS MANNED MOON SHIP IS POSSIBLE SOON

TROY, N.Y., Dec. 3 (UP)—Launching a manned space ship to travel in a 10-day orbit around the moon will pose no more difficult problems than those involved in sending up small artificial satellites, a noted rocket expert said last night.

Dr. Werner Von Braun, addressing the Rensselaer polytechnic Institute Astrophysical Society and the Troy Astronomy Club, said the flight of "small artificial satellites announced for 1957-58 will be followed by larger ones with more elaborate measuring and telemetering equipment.

"Soon thereafter man himself will attempt orbital flight," he predicted.

"The task of projecting a crew into an orbit amounts essentially to replacing the relatively small rockets envisioned for the first minimum satellites by larger ones. It is thus more or less a scaling problem of well-proved design principles and it does not pose any fundamentally new problems."

Von Braun was one of those chiefly responsible for developing German rocket warfare during World War II. He now heads the Army's guided missile development division at Huntsville, Ala.

JUDGE ORDERS IMBIBING SANTA TO TURN IN SUIT

CHICAGO, Dec. 3 (AP) — Santa Claus appeared in the Monroe street court today as a defendant.

He was listed as Sam Persons, 53 years old, but he was recognized at once as Santa because of his costume. He was accused of imbibing too much bottled merriment and formally charged with disorderly conduct.

Santa told Judge Jacob M. Braude he had been assigned to solicit contributions for a charitable organization and had been stationed in front of a Loop department store until the spirit moved him to Skid Row Friday.

The judge dismissed the charge but stated sternly: "You let down a lot of kids. Turn in your uniform."

DEPOSIT BOX KEPT SECRET BY BANKRUPT FIRM

Once Held $50,000 — Auditor Criticizes Bookkeeping of Loan Company.

Officers of the Pat Walsh Loan & Finance Co. failed to reveal the existence of a safety deposit box, which once contained $50,000, when the firm went into receivership April 29, 1954, an auditor's report filed yesterday disclosed.

F. B. (Benny) McGovern, former head of the company, made a final visit to the box in the Mercantile Trust Co. on July 23, 1954—almost three months after the receivership began—and closed out the account, the report said.

Discovery of the box was made shortly after McGovern's final visit by A. E. Bell, the auditor who wrote the report, which was filed in the court of Circuit Judge Ivan Lee Holt Jr. Bell said he made the discovery in an examination of the firm's general ledger accounts.

McGovern, a former professional prizefighter who headed the McGovern Brewing Co. before becoming head of the loan company, deposited fifty $1000 bills in the safety deposit box in April 1950, the report said, in part payment for 3750 shares of loan company stock.

McGovern and members of his family held a total of 5755 shares of company stock valued at $112,595.

The report criticizes the company's bookkeeping practices, pointing out in a number of cases that money advanced to McGovern and other individuals was charged to the "credit and collection" expense account without substantiation.

Bell traced two $400 checks issued to McGovern in 1953, the report stated, discovering that the firm's auditors removed the $800 from the asset account by a journal entry and charged the amount to "general expense" account.

A duplicate copy of the corporate tax returns for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1953, labeled the $800 a "political contribution." Financial statements disclosed the $800 charged as "general expense," the report said.

During the early days of the company, the report said, a large amount of loan business originated with the McCall Novelty Co., a distributor of coin-operated machines headed by Andrew McCall, Irving J. Lee and Charles Haehle.

The McCall Co. signed as comaker on a large number of loans, Bell pointed out, but no effort was ever made to collect from McCall when the borrower defaulted. The report lists $10,686 in loans on which the borrower defaulted but McCall was not sued.

A receivership suit, charging mismanagement of the company, was filed March 23 by six stockholders against the company, McGovern, two other directors and the American Finance Corp., McGovern, who lives at 8039 Venetian drive, Clayton, was named April 8, 1954 in a $124,571 federal tax lien alleging unpaid income taxes, interest and penalties covering the period 1943-1946.

Humane Society Loses Its Cat; Offers 600 Pct. Reward---In Cats

A reward of six cats—or six dogs—was offered yesterday by the Humane Society of Missouri for the return of King Peter, the society's unofficial mascot.

King Peter, a gray-striped kitten of the alley-cat variety, had been the pet of employes since it came to the shelter of its own accord two months ago. Undernourished and suffering from a stomach disorder, it was nursed back to a semblance of good health by daily dosages of vitamin pills and cod liver oil.

It made its home in a box in the office of Fritz Grolock, director of the society at 1210 Macklind avenue, and roamed through the administration offices. Although the cat readily made friends with human visitors, it refused to associate with other animals in the kennels.

"If King Peter is returned, there will be no questions asked," Grolock said. "We will trade six-for-one or for anything in the place. We've got a lot of cats here, some pedigreed animals. But we want our King Peter back."

HIGHWAY PATROL ON LOOKOUT FOR GAMBLER INFLUX FROM ILLINOIS

The Missouri Highway Patrol has been keeping a close watch for signs of gambling operations in eastern portions of the state because the large number of recent raids on such places in Illinois might tend to force gamblers across the river into Missouri, Col. Hugh H. Waggoner, superintendent of the patrol, told the Post-Dispatch yesterday.

A state police raid Friday night on the Hollywood Beach Club in Jefferson county disclosed that one of the owners of the establishment was John Augustus Wilson of Cape Girardeau, one of the owners and operators of the plush Thunderbird gambling casino in Alexander county, Ill. The Thunderbird was raided by Illinois State Police Nov. 9 and Wilson was arrested. He and two other men opened the Hollywood club Nov. 18, officials were told.

On a Private Road.

The club is on a private road one-fourth mile east of U. S. Highway 61 on the south shore of the Meramec river. Twenty-eight customers, three owners and two employes were arrested by the troopers, who confiscated two dice tables, other gambling material and $358 in cash which was on the single dice table in use at the time of the raid.

In addition to Wilson, those who told troopers they owned the place gave their names as Robert Earl (Doc) Knupp and Russell Miles Hill, both of McClure, Ill., in Alexander county. It is in McClure that Wilson faces charges of operating a gambling establishment at the Thunderbird. At the Hollywood club troopers found book matches and ash trays with the name Thunderbird on them.

Officers said the Jefferson county club apparently was having financial difficulties. A ledger carried a notation that on the opening night, Nov. 18, the house lost $6361. Total losses in the two-week operation was listed at $9991 with winnings carried at $5943, a deficit of $4048.

Information about the club's operation was received almost simultaneously by Prosecuting Attorney Stuart O'Brien of Jefferson county and the highway patrol headquarters at Kirkwood. O'Brien and patrolmen planned the raid.

'Dirty Trick,' Sheriff Says.

Sheriff Leo Church of Jefferson county, who was not notified by the patrol or O'Brien of their plans, said yesterday:

"I don't know who engineered this deal on the highway patrol, but I think it's a dirty trick. After all I'm sheriff of this county."

He said he had not known the establishment was operating.

O'Brien said he received information that the club was being operated as a gambling establishment on Nov. 13 from a friend. The next day, he added, he called Highway Patrol Sgt. R. E. Butler, a friend, and while they were talking about the place in his office, Butler got a call from the Kirkwood headquarters.

Troop commanders wanted to talk to Butler about reports they had received that the club was a gambling house.

O'Brien accompanied Butler to headquarters and they conferred with Butler's commanders and decided then not to inform Sheriff Church that a raid was contemplated.

Col. Waggoner said the patrol at Kirkwood kept his office informed of progress in the plans for the raid and he conferred with Gov. Phil M. Donnelly about it. The Governor ordered the patrol to make the raid at the propitious time.

"We worked closely with Prosecuting Attorney O'Brien," he added.

Twelve troopers, three of them in civilian clothes, led by Sgt. W. L. Hutchings, made the raid. In addition to the dice tables, money and ledger they found packets of advertising cards bearing the legend: "Come to the Hollywood Club and see Doc and Miles;" a .22 caliber pistol and a .45 caliber automatic pistol in a mattress in a second floor bedroom, which they said was used by Wilson. Also they discovered a promissory note for $1000, apparently from an unlucky gambler.

Those arrested were taken to the county seat at Hillsboro where they posted bond. The customers' bonds were for $300 and the gamblers and employes' bonds were set at $2000 each. They are returnable Jan. 6 in the court of Magistrate H. Glenn Weber of House Springs.

The employes of the place gave their names as Glenn J. Lewis Jr., of Cape Girardeau and Jack L. Priest, 4900 block of Miami street.

BERLIN SQUEEZE THREATENED BY EAST GERMANS' BARGE CONTROL

Supply Lines to West Could Be Cut — Russians Yield Authority Over Waterways to Puppet Regime.

BERLIN, Dec. 3 (AP)—A new squeeze on West Berlin threatened tonight from East Germany's control of inland waterways traffic.

The Russians have turned over control of permits for canal traffic between the city and West Germany, it was disclosed, and the German Communist regime appeared determined to use its new authority to wrest some kind of recognition from the Bonn republic.

West German officials said the problem may be acute when all old permits expire Dec. 31 and applications are made for new permits at the beginning of the year.

These officials said East Germany is insisting that problems concerning the canals be handled between the transport ministries of the two rival Germanies, and not on the level of lesser agencies. The object thus appeared to win quasi-recognition.

Transfer of authority over barge traffic by the Russians to the East Germans was agreed upon in Moscow, Sept. 20, after the Soviet-East German "sovereignty" treaty was signed.

Applications Returned.

Subsequently, West Berlin transport officials said, the Russians returned several British applications for canal traffic permits with word that East German officials were now responsible for issuing permits. When the West German waterways administration at Hamburg, a liaison office, sent the applications to the East German shipping administration, it was told the Bonn Transport Ministry must make application to the East German Ministry.

The West regards these permits as a technical matter, to be dealt with on a lower level.

Canal barges carry virtually all of Berlin's coal and about one-third of its other supplies. However, city officials said West Berlin already is supplied for coal for the winter. The East Germans, too, would suffer from a barge stoppage inasmuch as about a fourth of the goods brought eastward by barges is for East German delivery.

(The United Press said the squeeze on barge traffic was viewed by some Allied officials as a possible step toward a new blockade of Berlin. They believe that attempts to interfere with highway, railroad and perhaps air traffic may follow if the Russians succeed in their present move.)

Berlin is an enclave, under American - British - French - Russian occupation. It is separated by 110 miles of Soviet occupied territory from the West German government.

Argument Began Week Ago.

The current argument over the city had its beginning in an incident last Sunday. Two American Congressmen—Representatives Harold Ostertag (Rep.), New York, and Edward Boland (Dem.), Massachusetts—were detained in East Berlin by Communist police.

When United States authorities protested to the Russians, Maj. Gen. P. A. Dibrova, the Soviet commandant in Berlin, replied that East Berlin is considered part of East Germany, which was given "sovereignty" last September by the Soviet Union.

The West Berlin city government appealed to the Western Allies, asking that Berlin not be forsaken.

James B. Conant, United States Ambassador to Bonn, hurried to Berlin after Sunday's incident and asserted the West will remain in the city until Germany is unified.

Although most Germans prefer the idea of "free and sovereign" territory, the Soviet declaration carried little weight with the average German.

Military Forces Remain.

First of all, Russian military forces remain in and around Berlin. Gen. Dibrova didn't pack up and head for Moscow. But he did stop using the title "Berlin commandant."

The Western Allies gave their part of Germany — the Bonn Republic—sovereignty last May. But West Berlin, since it was isolated inside East Germany, was not affected. It remained "occupied territory," an important technicality. This permitted western military traffic to move through East Germany to —United Press Telephoto.

REPRESENTATIVE JOSEPH MARTIN listening intently to PRESIDENT EISENHOWER at meeting yesterday in Gettysburg, Pa.

Two G.O.P. Leaders Visit President to Discuss Legislative Program.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Dec. 3—The two top Republican spokesmen in Congress differed today on whether President Eisenhower would run for re-election in 1956.

After an hour-long conference with Mr. Eisenhower, Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland of California told reporters he did not think the President had made up his mind yet.

But House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts, emerging from an earlier meeting with Mr. Eisenhower, predicted the convalescing Chief Executive would seek a second term if his health permits.

Tax Cut Differences.

Martin and Knowland appeared also to disagree a little, at least in emphasis, on prospects for a tax cut in the new session of Congress convening next Jan. 3.

The House leader said he was hopeful of tax reductions for the benefit of "the so-called little fellow." He added, however, that this would depend on whether the budget could be balanced.

Knowland was somewhat more cautious. He agreed that a tax cut was contingent on a balanced budget, but he said he also wanted to see "some" provision for reducing the national debt first.

Continuing his feud with the Eisenhower Administration on some aspects of foreign policy, Knowland said he personally would favor using the United States veto to bar Outer Mongolia from the United Nations.

He acknowledged that the Administration "is not prepared to use the veto" to exclude Outer Mongolia, key nation in a package proposal to end a U.N. dispute over admission of new members.

Martin and Knowland held separate conferences with Mr. Eisenhower at his Gettysburg office. It was the first time either man had seen the President since his Sept. 24 heart attack.

Legislative Business.

The talks centered around the Administration's legislative program for the forthcoming session of the Democratic-controlled Congress, and in particular the State of the Union Message in which Mr. Eisenhower will outline his principal recommendations.

Knowland refused to tell reporters whether he brought up the President's political plans. But he said his "personal opinion" was that Mr. Eisenhower has made no final decision on whether to run again.

Martin, on the other hand, told reporters he thought Mr. Eisenhower would make himself available for a second term "for the sake of the world," if his doctors give him encouraging reports on his health.

Like Hall, Martin said he was expressing only his personal

BURGLARY VICTIM SETS UP CAMERA, TRAPS NEIGHBOR

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3 (AP)—Richard Bianco was arrested last night on a charge of burglarizing his neighbor's home on the basis of a photograph taken of him standing in his victim's bedroom, police said.

After his home had been burglarized six times in a year, Joseph Bjuak bored a hole in a closet door big enough for a camera lens. Then he rigged it to a flash attachment which would take a picture of anyone entering through a window.

Knowing a burglar would seek to destroy the photographic film, he placed a dummy camera on a ledge attached to the closet door and adjoining the flash mechanism.

It worked. When Bjuak returned to his second-floor apartment after another burglary, the dummy camera was gone. The film in the hidden camera was developed and it showed Bianco, police said.

Bianco said he was merely in the room trying to trap a burglar who had already been there.

NOT ENOUGH SAFE DRIVERS TO TAKE PRIZES OFFERED

FARGO, N.D., Dec. 3 (UP)—A shortage of safe drivers left Fargo police with 290 gallons of gasoline on their hands today.

The police had made arrangements to award 10 gallons of gasoline to five safe drivers on the 10 days up to and including Safe Driving Day Thursday—a total of 500 gallons.

But they could find only 21 safe drivers, leaving the police with a surplus.

Captain Edwin Anderson philosophized, "Still, we did pretty well. I understand in Kansas City they offered to pay $100 for one safe driver and couldn't even find one."

BRITON YAWNS SO HARD HIS EYELID IS PARALYZED

HEREFORD, England, Dec. 3 (AP) — Farmer Jim Langford yawned today and then discovered he couldn't close his left eye.

"It was a big yawn," he explained, "and something seemed to snap in my face. Then I found I couldn't close my eye. The lid simply wouldn't budge."

The farmer hurried to a doctor and was told a nerve had snapped and that he was suffering from a temporary form of paralysis of the eyelid.

"The doctor said it'll be about six weeks before my eye returns to normal," said Langford.

6 CANADIANS KILLED, 8 HURT AS PLANE FALLS IN FRANCE

MONTMEDY, France, Dec. 3 (AP)—Six Canadians were killed and eight injured when a Canadian transport plane flying soldiers home for Christmas leave crashed in eastern France today. Three of the 17 on the plane escaped unhurt.

Today's Post-Dispatch contains 264 pages and almost 400,000 lines of paid advertising, a record for a St. Louis newspaper.

There are 160 pages of black-and-white, 56 pages of rotogravure, 12 pages of rotogravure color comics and 36 pages in Parade Magazine.

ASSEMBLY URGES BROAD PROGRAM TO ACHIEVE GOAL WITHOUT DELAY

Russia Goes Along With Plan but Differs With U.S. on How It Should Be Related to the U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Dec. 3 (AP)—The United Nations General Assembly today put a unanimous stamp of approval on plans for the creation "without delay" of an international atoms - for - peace agency. It approved a broad program to achieve this goal next year.

The Soviet Union voted with the United States for the program. The Russians served notice, however, that they will push their proposals to put the agency within the framework of the U.N. when the negotiating powers meet to work out an agency constitution.

The United States, which favors a loose connection between the agency and the U.N., announced the negotiating conference will begin Jan. 23. It is expected to be held in Washington, where the planning for the agency has centered since President Eisenhower put his historic atoms-for-peace proposal to the U.N. Assembly Dec. 8, 1954.

The Assembly also by unanimous vote established a scientific committee to study the effects of atomic radiation. This wound up for this year the Assembly consideration of proposals dealing with using the atom for peace. The U.N. still is debating control of the atom as part of disarmament plans.

Job at Hand Now.

Some delegates privately pointed out this scientific committee will be especially useful in view of wide-ranging reports of radiation resulting from the gigantic nuclear blast set off by the Soviet Union recently.

The committee will consist of Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, France, India, Japan, Mexico, Sweden, Britain, United States and Soviet Union.

The Assembly asked all governments to co-operate in making available reports and studies relating to effects of radiation upon man and his environment.

Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, delegate of the Philippines, challenged the Russians to admit members of this scientific committee to their tests as the United States permitted foreigners to view the Bikini tests in 1946. The Russians made no reply.

In its final action on the atoms-for-peace program, the Assembly noted with satisfaction that substantial progress has been made toward negotiating a draft statute establishing this agency and that this draft has been circulated to governments for their consideration and comment.

Other Action.

The Assembly, in brief, also:

1. Welcomed the announced intention of the sponsoring governments to invite all members of the U.N. and the specialized agencies to take part in a conference on the final text of the statute.

2. Welcomed the extension of invitations to Brazil, Czechoslovakia, India and the Soviet Union to sit with the original eight negotiating powers. Those were the United States, Britain, France, Canada, Australia, Belgium, Portugal and South Africa. These 12 make up the negotiating group which will meet Jan. 23.

3. Recommended that the governments concerned "take all possible measures to establish the agency without delay, . . ."

4. Requested Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold and an advisory committee study the question of the relationship of the international atomic energy agency to the U.N. and to transmit the result of their study to the governments concerned before the big conference on the final text is held.

5. Recommended that a second international conference for the exchange of technical information be held in two or three years' time. This authorizes a second atomic session similar to that in Geneva last August.

Soviet first deputy foreign minister V. V. Kuznetsov said he voted for the resolution even though it omitted proposals favored by the Soviet Union. He renewed Moscow's demand for a bar on atomic weapons and said only prohibition of the production of atomic weapons can insure the truly comprehensive peaceful uses of the atom.

BITTER CONTEST ON ELECTING NEW ASSEMBLY UNDER WAY IN FRANCE

Aid to Catholic Schools One of Factors in Clash Between Premier Faure and Mendes-France.

By PRESTON GROVER

PARIS, Dec. 3 (AP)—France's election campaign began today with the prospect of one of the bitterest contests since the war.

Pierre Mendes-France, outmaneuvered in the recent assembly voting, has angrily accused Premier Faure of betraying national interests to force the country into an election six months ahead of schedule.

Faure replied that the procedure was constitutional, and that an appeal to the voters was necessary to replace the divided and deadlocked assembly. He said the old assembly was unable to handle the North African crisis, internal financial problems, and the growing social and labor unrest in the country.

These two men, with their allies, seemed certain to divide between them the bulk of the non-Communist members of the assembly to be elected Jan. 2.

Communists May Gain.

The Communists in turn seemed certain to hold some 100 seats in the 623-man assembly. With luck they might gain an extra 30 seats.

It will be the first election since the war where personalities have become so important that they tend to range the voters into relatively compact groups.

France normally has about 15 political parties, and will have at least that many in the forthcoming elections.

The quarrel between two former political buddies, Mendes-France and Premier Faure was the big factor.

Made Swift Maneuvers.

Mendes-France set out months ago to try to force a grouping of "left of center" parties. By two swift maneuvers he gained control of the Radical Socialist party of which both he and Faure were members. In a national convention a month ago he persuaded it to adopt a platform calling for a number of political and financial reforms. More pointedly, the party under his guidance pledged itself to support no other party which did not accept one part of the program of the Radical Socialists.

This calls for opposition to the present law under which Roman Catholic schools get a part of the public school money.

This is an old fight in France dating back to the revolution when the populace turned on the church with almost as much venom as it turned on the aristocracy. Mendes-France's aim was to attract the Socialists, who are anti-clerical.

Conflict With Faure.

The maneuver automatically brought him into conflict with Faure whose stay in office since last February, when he succeeded Mendes-France, has been largely due to the moderate Catholic party, MRP. It was MRP which, after the 1951 election, won the fight to get government money for Catholic schools.

To Faure will rally some of the Radical Socialists, all the MRP, and a large body of right-of-center independents.

There are a dozen odd slants to the contest. While Mendes-France is trying to keep the Socialists behind him in order to have a left-of-center group which can win labor away from Communist control, the Socialists are already reported teaming up in some sections with the Communists.

The Socialist party leadership, however, is 100 per cent allied with Mendes-France in this campaign.

'Popular Front' Possible.

Followers of Mendes-France, of Faure, and of Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay are worried about one possibility. If the Assembly elected in January becomes as hopelessly deadlocked as the recent one, they see a possibility that Socialists, Communists and other leftists may join in a "popular front," whose policy could easily jeopardize France's place in the whole Western defense scheme.

Faure today took personal charge of the interior ministry which makes arrangements for the election. Interior Minister Maurice Bourges-Manoury was one of five ministers of Faure's own Radical Socialist party who resigned because the Premier dissolved the old Assembly. Faure persuaded them to stay on to look after routine affairs of their departments but Bourges-Manoury refused to have anything to do with matters arising from the Assembly dissolution.

Eisenhower Goes Crow-Hunting On Farm; Luck Not Disclosed

Receives Letter From Society for Old Crows Urging Him to Go Easy on Them.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Dec. 3 (UP) — President Eisenhower went hunting today, presumably for crows. But his luck, if any, was not immediately disclosed.

He took to the fields on a bright, sunny afternoon even as the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Old Crows—in a good-natured letter—urged him to go easy on crows.

With his driver, Dick Flohr, and two other secret service men in tow, Mr. Eisenhower donned a plaid jacket, golf cap and tan pants, put his gun over his shoulder, and worked his way along a hedgerow separating two of his fields.

When he moved out across the fields, which recently have been dotted with crows, an observer who passed along a back road close by saw no crows at the moment. She did see, far down the road, a covey of pheasant. Pheasant, however, have been out of season here since Nov. 28. So have rabbits. Buck deer can be shot now, but the President isn't likely to find any on his well-tended acres.

Crows can be shot any time. But not every one, apparently, agrees on the merits of shooting them.

The S.P.C.O.C., in a letter made public today, commented on a remark by the President recently that "I'd like to go out and shoot some crows."

"Crows are a defnite help to the farmer in eating insects and grubs hundreds of times their own weight every planting season," the society reminded the President. "It has recently come to our attention that one farmer shot every crow for miles around his farm and later had his crops ruined by an unchecked horde of destructive pests. . . .

"We humbly request, sir, that you do not speak lightly of hunting for crows."

BRITISH EXPORTS TO RUSSIA RISE IN WAKE OF GENEVA

LONDON, Dec. 3 (UP)—Russia has made the "spirit of Geneva" pay off in its trade with the West, official British records disclosed today.

The trade records revealed that since the Geneva summit conference last summer, British exports to the Soviet Union have more than doubled.

Some exports of semi-strategic goods only recently taken off the embargoed list have risen as much as tenfold in recent months, the figures showed.

Copper, rubber, machinery and tools were the items Moscow has concentrated on most.

None of the British exports to Russia has conflicted with the strategic embargo, it was stressed. The Russians have merely stepped up their purchases of important industrial goods which Britain has since supplied.

GREECE DECIDES NOT TO SEEK U.N. HELP ON CYPRUS

Cabinet Takes Stand After Foreign Minister Has Talk With British Envoy.

ATHENS, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Greek government announced tonight its decision not to appeal the Cyprus issue to the United Nations.

Leaders of the Greek-speeking majority on the British-ruled island in the eastern Mediterranean who are clamoring for union with Greece have been urging that the question be taken to the U.N.

The government's decision was made at an emergency cabinet meeting that was preceded by a 45-minute talk between Foreign Minister Spyros Theotokis and British Ambassador Sir Charles Peake.

The announcement said the government had taken into "consideration advice given by responsible experts and has weighed other elements in its possession."

London reports have said Britain has been making undercover efforts to settle the crisis over Cyprus, its land and air headquarters in the Middle East, now that it can no longer use the Suez Canal base in peacetime. It is reported to be offering the Cypriots the principle of self-determination in the indefinite future when world tension has relaxed.

British authorities recently declared a state of emergency throughout the troubled island colony as the result of a growing campaign of terrorism and mob attacks against British servicemen and civilians.

Greece failed to get a majority to place the Cyprus issue on the agenda for U.N. Assembly debate earlier this year.

Zenon Rossides, member of the Greek National Council of Cyprus, who has been an observer at the U.N., announced today he was leaving for London. He said he believed eventually a solution would be found which would apply "the right of self-determination" to Cyprus.

Teen-Agers Burn Down Post Office On Cyprus.

NICOSIA, Cyprus, Dec. 3 (UP)—A gang of teen-age terrorists burned down the post office today in Lefkoniko, 20 miles east of this capital, after warning the postmaster to flee for his life.

The post office building was destroyed, along with letters, parcels and $476 in cash. The town hall next to the post office also was damaged by the flames.

Lefkoniko was the scene two months ago of a raid in which a masked gang seized a large quantity of arms.

Archbishop Makarios of the Greek Orthodox church said today that his people have demanded an end to British colonial rule on Cyprus within five years.

He said that "if the British government grants the right of the Cypriot people to self-determination, a reasonable transition period could be decided on. In my opinion this period should not be more than five years."

U.N. Again Calls on South Africa To Give Up Mandated Territory

U.S. Among 9 Nations Abstaining in Vote on Putting Southwest Africa Under Trusteeship.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Dec. 3 (AP)—The U. N. General Assembly called on the Union of South Africa for the ninth time today to place the Territory of Southwest Africa under the U. N. trusteeship system. The vote was 43 to 2. Nine countries abstained, including the United States, Sweden, and British Commonwealth countries.

South Africa continued its boycott of the Assembly, begun when the special Political Committee voted last month to continue inquiries into South African government racial policies.

Southwest Africa has been administered by the Union of South Africa under an old League of Nations mandate. South Africa has refused to report to the U. N. on its administration of the territory. Since 1946 the Assembly has vainly adopted resolutions each year asking South Africa to put the territory under the U. N. trusteeship system.

The Assembly also ratified a decision of its 60 - nation Trusteeship Committee which approved study of a statement by the Rev. Michael Scott about conditions in Southwest Africa. Scott is an Anglican missionary appointed by tribesmen of the territory to represent them in appeals to the U. N.

Among other actions the Assembly approved a decision to postpone any further consideration of French-Moroccan relations on the grounds that negotiations between France and its North African protectorate are to get under way soon and are expected to be successful.

In another decision, the Assembly voted to seek further aid from governments for some 900,000 Arab refugees of the Palestine war.

The resolution, approved 38 to 0 with 17 abstentions, appeals to all nations to continue to support the program by voluntary contributions and calls especially on governments in the Middle East to co-operate in "carrying out projects capable of supporting substantial numbers of refugees." Those abstaining were primarily from the Asian-Arab and Soviet blocs.

DEATH CALLED 16TH IN '55 FROM HIROSHIMA A-BOMB

TOKYO, Dec. 3 (UP)—A 50-year-old Japanese farmer, who was a mile away from downtown Hiroshima when the atom bomb fell on that city 10 years ago, died today of leukemia of the bone marrow.

Japanese press reports claimed Kichiroku Ekkyo was the sixteenth Hiroshima resident to die this year from the effects of atomic radiation.

TAIPEI REPEATS VETO THREAT ON OUTER MONGOLIA

TAIPEI, Formosa, Dec. 3 (AP)—A Foreign Office spokesman repeated today that Nationalist China would block Outer Mongolia's entry into the United Nations, by veto if necessary.

The statement came after United States Ambassador Karl R. Rankin met yesterday with Foreign Minister George Yeh for the fourth time this week.

Rankin was reported to have tried once again to persuade the Nationalists to withhold the veto and allow to go through a plan under which 18 nations would join the U.N.

"Our intention to veto Outer Mongolia, if necessary, remains unchanged," the spokesman told newsmen.

The spokesman expressed astonishment at one story carried out of Taipei that the Nationalists might consider a compromise. So did other officials to whom the story was shown.

Correspondents who sought an interview with President Chiang Kai-shek were told he was out of town.

VIRGINIA TO VOTE ON STATE AID TO PRIVATE SCHOOLS

Assembly Calls Referendum in Move to Circumvent Integration of Pupils.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 3 (AP)—Virginia's General Assembly passed emergency legislation today to let the voters decide whether the way shall be cleared for public aid to a child's private schooling. The action was designed primarily to avoid enforced racial integration.

Gov. Thomas B. Stanley signed the act a little more than an hour after its passage, thus putting into law immediately the legislation he placed before the Assembly Wednesday when it convened at his call for a special session.

The act provides for a referendum on the question of whether a limited constitutional convention shall be called to amend Section 141 of the State Constitution to allow tuition grants. The Governor announced he would call the referendum for Monday, Jan. 9.

Stanley appeared in the Senate and House of Delegates shortly before the two bodies adjourned in their respective chambers, to thank them for "the fine work accomplished here."

"As I have said before," he remarked, "this is the first step in a process designed to preserve educational opportunities for children throughout Virginia and to avoid enforced mixing of the races in the public schools."

Tuition grants are a vital part of the program worked out by a commission set up by the Governor which spent 14 months developing a plan to prevent enforced racial integration in the public schools. Its proposals were made public in mid-November.

Another vital part of the program is a plan of assignment whereby local school boards would assign individual pupils to schools for such reasons as aptitude or health, but not race.

And, as the first step toward later legislative consideration of its school program, the commission recommended the special session of the Legislature to consider the constitutional convention referendum bill.

RUSSIA TO FOSTER WORLD CONTACTS, MOLOTOV SAYS

MOSCOW, Dec. 3 (AP)—Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov said today that, although the Geneva conference did not reach positive decisions on the subject, the Soviet Union intends energetically to pursue cultural and scientific contacts with other countries.

"The Soviet government desires to develop and maintain contact of Soviet scientists, men in public life and men of art with representatives of other states, and we shall do this with all insistence and energy," he told an Austrian parliamentary delegation in a half-hour meeting at the Kremlin.

He said that the fact the Geneva conference failed in these respects "does not at all mean that that which was not achieved today will not be achieved tomorrow."

Molotov praised the neutrality policy adopted by Austria under terms of its independence treaty last spring and said "on this basis we are your friends in all spheres, politics, economic and cultural."

PERON ACCEPTS INVITATION OF FRIENDS TO VISIT MEXICO

PANAMA CITY, Dec. 3 (AP)—Argentina's former president, Juan D. Peron, has accepted an invitation from friends to visit Mexico, Hector Ponce Sanchez, wealthy Mexican lawyer and general on inactive duty, said today.

Ponce Sanchez, who came here to extend the invitation, said the exiled Argentine dictator had not yet fixed a date to go to Mexico. The Mexican emphasized that his coming to Panama had no official or military connections.

After Peron was ousted by a revolt in September he first went into exile in Paraguay and later came here. There have been recurring reports, which Peron has denied, that he eventually might go to Europe.

The storm lashed the southern Philippines Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, causing severe damage in northern Mindanao and Visayan.

The Philippine Red Cross said that relief aid has been given 48,875 storm victims so far.

It is the former French liner DeGrasse. A new liner named Empress of Britain will take its place.

DOWD HAS POLICE PAY-OFF LEADS HE 'CANNOT IGNORE,' INQUIRY TO GO ON

However, Prosecutor Says There Is No Fresh Evidence Ready for New Grand Jury Tomorrow.

Reports of pay-offs to some St. Louis policemen will continue to be investigated by the circuit attorney's office although there is no evidence ready for the new grand jury to be impaneled tomorrow, Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd said yesterday.

"We still have some investigative leads that cannot be ignored," Dowd said. "If they produce information of value, the evidence will be presented to the grand jury."

The September-term grand jury, which made its final report Friday, stated that it had disposed of all pay-off cases brought to its attention. It indicted three police officers and voted no-true bills in connection with another.

Two Phases Concluded.

Dowd said his investigations of disorderly houses operated by Ethel Clift and the late June Alma Lytz have been concluded.

Although persons who had been associated with Mrs. Lytz made many statements that she paid off police officers, the investigation failed to disclose evidence to substantiate the charges, the circuit attorney said.

The fact that Mrs. Lytz is dead made the inquiry all the more difficult, Dowd stated. The investigation began following her murder.

"We have made a determined effort to find persons present when payments were made or with first-hand knowledge of pay-offs by June Lytz," Dowd stated. "These efforts were not productive."

All information relating to the Lytz phase of the investigation has been turned over to the Police Board for whatever action it may want to take, Dowd said, pointing out there may be some activities of policemen warranting disciplinary action even though criminal prosecution could not be instituted.

Speedy Trial Planned.

Dowd said he hoped to give a speedy trial to the three police officers indicted as a result of the investigation into operations of a brothel operated by Mrs. Clift.

"We have information of other brothels which we believe should be investigated thoroughly before we can properly conclude this inquiry," he stated.

"I fully realize the public is interested in a quick conclusion and, for that matter, so is the circuit attorney's office. However, I feel that I cannot close this inquiry without running down all the unexplored leads in the investigation. We hope to do that promptly."

The circuit attorney stated that several persons who may be key witnesses in the inquiry remain to be interviewed, but they live in other cities and his office does not have funds to pay the costs of sending representatives to see them.

Dowd said this could be done if the city approves his request for $10,000 to continue the investigation.

Circuit Judge J. Casey Walsh, presiding judge in the criminal division, said he does not plan to give the new grand jury any specific instructions concerning the pay-off inquiry in his charge tomorrow afternoon.

Comment by Judges.

In reference to the jury's discussion of crowded criminal dockets, which were attributed chiefly to lack of courtrooms and judges, Judge Walsh told the Post-Dispatch the addition of a new courtroom presently being readied for the criminal division would help materially in relieving the dockets.

Presiding Judge John K. Regan said, however, that this courtroom alone would not solve the problem.

"The best way to get rid of the crowded docket is for Dowd's office to adopt a more realistic approach, in pre-trial conferences with judges, on the sentences to be imposed," Judge Regan asserted.

Customers and employes arrested Friday night in gambling raid by Missouri state troopers on Hollywood Beach Club near Meramec river and U.S. Highway 61 in Jefferson county. Most of those shown, including woman in front row holding coat over her bowed head, were patrons at the club. One of the club operators, RUSSELL M. HILL, McClure, Ill., is in second row, second from the right. Picture was made in circuit court at Hillsboro while bond was being set.

WILL PAY TO GET RID OF PIGEONS, WANTS GUARANTEE

Fred Berg has a pigeon problem at his home at 7639 Rosedale drive, Pasadena Park, and he's willing to pay to get rid of it—providing the remedy is guaranteed.

He placed a classified advertisement in today's Post-Dispatch which reads: "Someone to rid my house of pigeons, on a rid or no money guarantee."

Berg explained that the red tile roof of the front porch of his six-room brick house has been littered consistently by pigeons which have been camping there since he bought the house last March. His attempts to drive them off by throwing pebbles at them have failed to produce lasting results, he said.

Berg explained he does not believe in destroying the birds, but would like to hire someone to drive them away with a device like a high-frequency buzzer. He said he is interested only in a permanent solution, and would insist on at least a year's guarantee. After that period elapses, he added, "if I'm satisfied the pigeons are gone, the man will be paid."

70 HOGS ON LOOSE AT RANCH AFTER TRUCK TURNS OVER

An impromptu hog rodeo developed last night at Valley Mount Ranch, a mile west of Valley Park on U. S. Highway 66, as a result of a traffic accident. No one was hurt.

Seventy hogs weighing a total of 9000 pounds were spilled to the highway and invaded the 400-acre ranch. Twelve men, employes of the ranch and others, mounted on horseback and grabbed lassos and lanterns, only to discover that hogs, despite their weight, are unusually fleet of foot.

The animals got loose when an eastbound truck driven by Russell Palmer, Tipton, Mo., left the road and overturned. An eastbound automobile driven by V. H. Cordes, Pacific, Mo., also left the road.

"This roundup's going to be a tough one," said Ben Kraus, general manager of the ranch. "In addition to our 400 acres, there's an adjacent 1000-acre tract for those porkers to roam around in."

COUNTY JURY WILL RESUME WELLSTON INVESTIGATION

The St. Louis county circuit court grand jury will resume its investigation of operations of the city of Wellston Tuesday, Prosecuting Attorney Edward W. Garnholz said yesterday.

It will be the grand jury's first session on Wellston affairs since Nov. 17, when Wellston Mayor Leo J. Hayes was indicted on three charges of embezzlement. The grand jury previously indicted two Wellston policemen, John P. (Jack) Graham and Carl L. Howell, on burglary and larceny charges, and a civilian, Quentin Stewart, who was charged with receiving stolen property.

JUDGE PRAISES TIME SAVING WAY OF PICKING JURIES

New methods of impaneling a jury saved about two hours in each of three criminal trials last week, Circuit Judge Franklin E. Reagan said yesterday.

Prospective jurors were first questioned as a group as to their fitness for serving, instead of being questioned individually, the judge related. After the general questioning, attorneys for the defense and prosecution were allowed to interrogate those not eliminated from the panel.

Judge Reagan said it took only 37 minutes to impanel a jury for a grand larceny trial, 46 minutes for a grand larceny case and an hour for a manslaughter trial. It usually takes about two hours longer in each of such cases, he pointed out.

Procedures approved by the Supreme Court provide for group questioning of prospective jurors, he said, and he decided to adopt the new method.

Henry L. Stimson's Widow Dies

HUNTINGTON, N.Y., Dec. 3—Mrs. Mabel White Stimson, widow of Henry L. Stimson who was Secretary of State for President Herbert Hoover and Secretary of War during World War II, died here today. She was 89 years old. Mr. Stimson died in 1950.

FINAL REPORT TOMORROW BY UNITED FUND

New Tabulation to Be Given at Luncheon — Volunteers Still Busy.

The final report of the St. Louis area's first United Fund campaign, which began Oct. 21 with the goal of raising $8,245,925, will be made tomorrow at a luncheon at the Statler Hotel.

A tabulation of contributions on Nov. 22 indicated the drive at that time had raised 88 per cent of its goal.

Led by William A. McDonnell as general chairman, about 40,000 volunteer workers in city and county have taken part in soliciting funds for 114 health, welfare and character-building agencies.

Volunteer efforts were continuing as the final report luncheon, at which the First National Bank in St. Louis will be host, drew near. The drive had been scheduled to close Nov. 22, but was extended through tomorrow.

"It is amazing," McDonnell said, "to see the unflagging loyalty these volunteers are giving to accomplishing the job."

Mrs. Lee I. Niedringhaus, county division chairman, announced Friday that the section of the county that includes Clayton, Ladue and University City had exceeded its quota of $116,350. Pledges totaled 31 per cent more than was achieved in last year's Community Chest campaign. Mrs. William L. Desloge is section chairman, with Mrs. John R. Caulk as co-chairman.

Although the county division as a whole still was short of its quota, it has raised 27 per cent more than was contributed to the Community Chest drive at this time last year, Mrs. Niedringhaus said. Webster Groves and two sections in the northern part of the county, from Pagedale and Overland north and west to Florissant and Spanish Lake, were over the top.

In the city division, headed by Mrs. Edward M. Harrington as chairman, the first region to exceed its quota was North St. Louis. The region, under leadership of Mrs. Charles Polzin, raised $1644, or 112 per cent of its quota. This area is bordered by Grand avenue and Broadway, between Fairground and O'Fallon parks.

"Our workers," Mrs. Harrington said, "are in the process of making callbacks to see those who were missed and double-checking their territories to make sure every person is being given the opportunity to support his community's needs."

Girl, 8, to Be Symphony Soloist; She Hopes to Be Concert Pianist

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

TRUDI BUXTON at her piano.

Trudi Buxton, 8-year-old St. Louis girl who will be a piano soloist Tuesday with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, has already come a long way toward achieving her ambition.

For Trudi, the daughter of Mrs. Alice Buxton, 5453 Cabanne avenue, wants to grow up to be a concert pianist "who goes around the world." Her teacher, Lyndon Croxford, said yesterday he "would certainly predict" a concert career for her.

"She has a most unusual natural gift," he said.

Piano practice takes three hours out of every day in her week. Her chief spare-time hobby is playing with the numerous stuffed cats, dogs, pandas, and the like which occupy a place of honor in her bedroom. She told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday, with a giggle, that two tiny stuffed kittens were named "Bach" and "Tschaikowsky."

Trudi has had four piano recitals now as a soloist at the St. Louis Institute of Music, as well as one TV and several radio performances and other public performances.

"At each of the institute recitals, one of her animals came along as part of the audience," Trudi's mother said yesterday. "She insisted that I bring one along."

The young musician will play the first movement of Beethoven's Concerto No. 1 in C Major Tuesday. The concert, the first in the Symphony Orchestra's elementary school series, will be at 3 p.m. in Kiel Auditorium.

Mrs. Buxton had a professional career of her own as a ballet dancer before her marriage and Trudi came to the piano by way of ballet, at the age of 3.

Mrs. Buxton described it this way:

"When she was 2 years old, she preferred playing my symphony albums to playing with other children. I thought it would be wonderful if she wanted to dance, and so I started her in on ballet at the age of 3.

"Her interest lagged—until the girl came in to accompany the dancing on the piano. Then I took Trudi to the institute and asked if they had a class for children that young. They said no, but they would try giving her piano lessons to see how she would get along—and the thing has snowballed since then."

Here's a typical day in Trudi's life:

She arrives home at 3:20 p.m. from the Rossman School, where she attends the fourth grade. Then come three hours of piano practice, from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m., at which Mrs. Buxton helps as an observer and coach. After supper, Trudi colors pictures or plays "Skip-Across," a word game, "with" one of her stuffed animals. Bed-time is at 8:30 p.m.

Piano lessons are twice a week, Monday and Thursday. Saturday the practice schedule continues, except that it's split—from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.—which gives Trudi a chance to ride her new bike the rest of the day.

Learning to ride the bike, she said, was harder than any of her piano drills.

HEIFETZ IS SOLOIST WITH SYMPHONY

One of Season's Largest Audiences Gives Ovation to Violinist.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN

Heifetz and the Brahms Violin Concerto were a magnetic combination at last night's concert given by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in Kiel Auditorium. An audience of about 3000, one of the season's largest, heard the concert and reacted in much the same way as if it had been 20 years ago. It was an appropriate response, for Heifetz is still one of the world's musical marvels whose mastery of his instrument is best attested by the fact that other violinists are his most unqualified admirers.

Last night's performance, however, was much more than a demonstration of elegant style and finished technique. Heifetz identified himself with the best attributes of the Brahms concerto; its nobility of address, its depth of emotion, its broad-scaled architecture and sweeping lines. This was particularly true of the first movement which, though not too grateful for the violin, is a discourse that accumulates significance as it goes along. That same could be said for the interpretation. It underwent a steady growth from beginning to end and the concluding measure after the cadenza was like brief but somewhat sad backward glance at the road traversed.

Heifetz was given an expected ovation; but, though he was recalled five times, he declined to play an encore.

After listening to last night's concert, one again had the impression that Heifetz is at his best in the best music. At any rate it is in Beethoven and Brahms that his interpretations are commensurate with his superb technical gifts.

The orchestra was also at the top of form in the Brahms concerto, playing with depth and fluency and in close partnership with the soloist.

In the first half of the program Conductor Golschmann and the orchestra offered two novelties in George Antheil's ballet suite, "The Capital of the World," and Max Reger's Variations on a Theme by Mozart. The former is a recent work which Antheil composed to a libretto by Ernest Hemingway. The Spanish idioms were most suggestive of Hollywood than Madrid, but the scoring was bright in color and rhythmically dashing. It was effective, that is, for the moment, but guaranteed not to burden anyone's memory.

The Reger variations were written to the same theme Mozart uses in his most famous piano sonata and it was put through its paces with adroit craftsmanship. The orchestra played both works very handsomely.

The concert will be repeated this afternoon.

Harriman Scores Eisenhower On Agriculture, Foreign Policy

New Yorker Says His Name Will Be Submitted as 'Good Faith,' Not as Favorite Son Candidate.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 3 (AP)—Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, a "good faith" candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, tonight rapped President Eisenhower by name on agriculture and foreign policy.

Departing from his text, Harriman told a crowd of 2000 at the national convention of Young Democrats that Mr. Eisenhower, not Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, is responsible for the Administration's farm program.

Harriman said earlier that his name would be submitted as a presidential candidate at the Democratic national convention in "good faith," not as a "favorite son" candidate.

"Let's not talk about the Benson farm policy," Harriman declared. "Let's talk about it in its proper light—the Eisenhower farm policy."

Later he left his text a second time to declare:

"It was a very unhappy experience to me when the President let it be known at the Geneva conference he considered that the Russians equally with us, sought peace."

At a third point he declared "Eisenhower has done nothing" about protecting average families against high costs of major illnesses.

His advance text had not included direct references to the President.

In his address Harriman concentrated his fire on Republican policies concerning agriculture, small business, public power and foreign affairs. He called the G.O.P. the party of "big business and special interests."

Interests of People.

"Our party represents the interests of the people," he said, "whereas the Republican party still represents big business and special interests. While President Eisenhower has been trying to appease the dissident factions in his own party, his Administration has been taken over by special interests who always have their eye on the ball."

In the "give 'em hell" style of Harry Truman oratory, the one-time New Deal trouble shooter charged that the Republicans "belied its promises to labor," attempted to give away the nation's natural resources, "scuttled the public housing program," entered the "collusive and notorious Dixon-Yates deal" and came up with a "do-it-yourself" education program "that was such a travesty the Congress wouldn't consider it seriously."

Harriman used his biggest oratorical guns on the farm situation.

"During all the years of the Truman Administration," he said, "there was not a single year when the average price of farm products fell below 100 per cent of parity.

"But there has not been a single month of the Eisenhower Administration when they have been that high. They have fallen steadily month after month, and are now at 82."

The Republicans, he added, "are becoming concerned—not for the farmer but for themselves."

Harriman said he could agree with Vice President Richard M. Nixon that the Democrats are making a political football of the farm problem "if what he means is this: The farmers kick, the Republicans fumble and the Democrats pick up the ball and are off for a touchdown.

Must Restore Income.

"The fundamental thing is to restore farm income. We Democrats are pledged to do that and we're going to do it.

"We are going to see that the farmers achieve a fair share of the national prosperity and preserve the family farm as one of the great values of American life."

Harriman said that small business men, like farmers, "are not sharing in the good times of larger businesses. . . ."

"We know, too, that smaller companies have constantly been swallowed up by mergers. This is not healthy and we need to reverse those governmental policies which encourage monopoly and stifle competition and opportunity. It's high time we get back in the fight against monopoly."

Harriman was careful to pay his respects to Senator Robert Kerr (Dem.), Oklahoma, mentioned as a presidential possibility by many Southern Democrats and sure to be at least a favorite-son candidate.

Harriman, however, showed no disposition to seek a truce with Adlai Stevenson as he again made an indirect reference to the 1952 Democratic presidential nominee's recent remark that "this is a time for moderation."

"There has been talk in recent days," he said, "about the words 'moderation' and 'middle of the road.' Let's not fall into that trap. These are the words that have been used by the Republicans to try to put their inaction in a favorable light.

"Democrats don't tackle problems in a half-hearted way. I repeat, we are out wholeheartedly to conserve and expand the values of American life for all of our people."

Last night Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, also regarded as Democratic presidential timber, appeared with Stevenson at the convention and said he still was against the moderation approach but was not "in a state of war" with the 1952 loser.

In ticking off Republican faults and Democratic remedies, Harriman made no mention of foreign policy except to say that "we Democrats are ready to meet our opportunities and responsibilities for world leadership in the struggle to preserve and extend the values of freedom and a better life for all people."

In a speech to the New Orleans Foreign Policy Association last night, Harriman dwelt at length on world problems and charged that the Eisenhower Administration's handling of the Geneva conference enabled Russia to achieve a "major political breakthrough."

Instead of lessening tension, he said, the Administration wound up by lessening defense efforts in the free world.

MONTHLY AIR RAID SIREN 'GROWL' TEST TOMORROW

The regular monthly "growl" test of air raid sirens in the city and four county municipalities will be conducted at 11 a.m. tomorrow. The test will be supervised by John Hatch, superintendent of the city fire and police alarm system, and Charles R. Skow, county director of civil defense.

Tests are conducted to check the operational readiness of sirens. Each siren is to be sounded, at a low pitch. Volunteer spotters near the sirens will report any failures to the civil defense office.

University City, Brentwood, Maplewood and Ladue will join St. Louis in the testing.

SUFFERS FRACTURED SKULL WHEN HIT BY STREETCAR

Robert Durbin, 1213A Chambers street, suffered a fractured skull last night when he was struck by a Broadway streetcar near the intersection of North Broadway and Chambers.

Durbin, 55 years old, was taken to City Hospital in serious condition.

William A. Bannister, operator of the streetcar, said Durbin was standing in the center of Broadway when, apparently startled by the approach of a southbound streetcar, he jumped back into the path of Bannister's northbound car.

SHEAFFER PEN CO. DROPS ITS 'FAIR TRADE' POLICY

FORT MADISON, Ia., Dec. 3 (AP)—The W. A. Sheaffer Pen Co., long a champion of "fair trade," said yesterday that it "will no longer enforce its fair trade policy."

Under "fair trade," retailers are required to charge a minimum price set by the manufacturer. Fair trade laws in several states have been upset in recent months after having been challenged in the courts.

Sheaffer's change of policy was disclosed in a statement announcing that the company had decided to add "certain large-volume retail outlets" to its list of authorized dealers.

"In fairness to all Sheaffer dealers," the company said, "we are now permitting them to price our merchandise in accordance with their own local economic conditions and competitive practices. Sheaffer will no longer enforce its fair trade policy, but will continue the use of suggested retail prices."

Lebanon Pair's Strange Disappearance Sharp Contrast to Simple, Quiet Life

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Bullet holes in corner of living-room window of home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Smith near Lebanon, Ill. On newspaper is a woman's undergarment found near house.

Bullet Holes, Blood Stains Still Unexplained — Habits, Background Searched for Clues.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smith had always led the quiet and simple kind of life that is typical of an Illinois town of 2500 persons. Yet they suddenly disappeared last Sunday night from their modest home near Lebanon, leaving behind them blood stains in every room and five bullet holes in the house.

Were they murdered and their bodies removed? St. Clair county authorities have been unable to find out, and the more they have inquired into the case, the deeper the mystery has become.

A worthwhile clue to the Smiths' disappearance still has not been found. An investigation into their private life has shed no light on the affair.

Pair Seldom Went Out.

They had no children to keep them at home, but they seldom went out. Smith was especially fond of television and would spend hours at a time in front of the set in the living room of their four-room house, off U.S. Highway 50 one mile east of town. His wife, Arline, watched too and would not go anywhere at night without him. He was 29 and she 35.

Smith, a carpenter, had not missed a day of work in five years with the same employer, a building contractor. He was always on time, and had very little to say to anyone.

The living he made was a fair one, and he was not known to be burdened by debt. He owned a 1948 Chevrolet, which was found in its usual place in the garage at the side of the house after the Smiths disappeared, but let his wife do all the driving. He had not had a driver's license since being in an automobile accident several years ago.

He built the house himself, and was proud of a large picture window in the living room. Neither he nor his wife bothered to draw the curtains or the blinds after dinner. Neighbors across the road could see them whiling the evenings away at complete peace. They were not heavy drinkers.

Calls Sunday Unanswered.

Apparently some time Sunday night, three bullets went through the window, one through a storm door at the front and another through a bedroom window. The Smiths were not missed until Tuesday, but since they had not answered the telephone since Sunday night, it was assumed that that was when the shots were fired.

Mrs. Smith did the necessary mending of her husband's work clothes on a portable sewing machine. A pair of overalls was in the machine, in the kitchen, in the evident line of fire of some of the shots, and her house slippers were nearby.

Prints of a bare left foot, apparently that of a woman, were in the house and on the front sidewalk, but there were no signs of a fight and all of the furniture was in order. Only a bedspread and some throw rugs were missing. Eighty-five dollars was left in a dresser.

HAROLD A. SMITH

MRS. ARLINE SMITH

Wife's Early Background.

Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Dressel, live two miles north of Lebanon.

"We have been farming this land for 40 years," Mrs. Dressel told a reporter. "Arline was born on this farm and raised here. She went to Ridgewood country school here and finished the eighth grade. She quit then and began taking housework jobs around here.

"She got married about 1940, but domestic trouble led to a divorce, and in 1942 she took a job at the small arms plant in St. Louis. She met Harold about six years ago, and they were married after knowing each other for six months.

"They met at a dance at O'Fallon. They are just like kids, very happy. One wouldn't go anywhere unless the other went too. After they were married they stayed at home pretty much."

She said Arline "never wanted for anything," and last Sunday, when they had dinner with the Dressels, "they seemed happier than ever."

One of the nearest neighbors, Mrs. Charles Zuerline, who lives across the road, said:

"The Smiths moved here about three years ago, about the same time we did. We thought a lot of them. They were very fond of our children, and were always willing to lend us a helping hand.

"We last saw them Sunday morning when my husband and his brother saw Harold out in the corn field picking up corn to feed his hogs. They never talked of anyone they might have been afraid of."

Smith's mother, Mrs. William Reck, lives at Belleville.

"My Harold was born in Belleville and went to Jefferson School, then two years to Belleville High School," she said. "When he was 16 he quit school and did odd jobs around farms.

"From 1943 to 1946 he was in the Navy.

"He always was a good boy. You couldn't find a better one."

Meanwhile, bloodstains from the Smith home are being tested by St. Louis police to determine whether the blood was human and whether it came from more than one person.

The only clues so far are tire tracks from an automobile at the back of the house, a man's belt, a woman's underpants, a tooth and a broken piece of dental bridgework, all found in the vicinity.

BERLIN SQUEEZE THREATENED BY EAST GERMANS

West Berlin under the supervision of the Russians, and not the East Germans.

Last September, when East Germany acquired "sovereignty," the Russians said they would retain control of western military traffic for the time being. They omitted to say when the status might be changed. This was what gave the West jitters this week, and caused France, Britain and the United States to protest emphatically against ending the occupation status of East Berlin.

They thought it might be the forerunner of an attempt to strangle West Berlin by giving the East Germans full control over the railroad, water and air routes leading to West Berlin.

The West, particularly the United States, has poured hundreds of millions of dollars into West Berlin, and turned it into a showplace for capitalism. The drab, surrounding Communist territory is a dramatic contrast.

Despite the Soviet pronouncement, and similar ones from the East German Communist party, western military traffic is still being handled by the Russians.

When this will change, only the Russians know.

PATROLMAN COLLAPSES, DIES SITTING IN BARBER'S CHAIR

Patrolman William R. McDonough, a member of the St. Louis Police Department for 35 years, collapsed and died yesterday when sitting in a barber's chair in a shop at 3629 North Grand boulevard. He was 62 years old.

Officer McDonough had been assigned to the Page boulevard district and lived at 3947A Palm street. Funeral services will be at 9 a.m. Tuesday at St. Matthew's Catholic Church, 2715 North Sarah street. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Surviving are two brothers, Michael J. and Thomas F. McDonough.

Pre-release Program Started For Inmates of Missouri Prison

Men About to Go Free Put in Quarters With TV—Get Instruction on Table Manners.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Dec. 3 (UP)—Thirty Missouri penitentiary inmates were removed from the general prison population without warning early today and placed in a freshly painted room with a television set.

A pool table was available for their exclusive use. They were assigned individual beds with new mattresses. They ate their meals separately.

Thus, without advance fanfare, the inmates entered into the latest part of a reform program to result from the state's disastrous 1954 prison riots.

The plan was termed by prison officials a pre-release program. It could be compared to Navy's "boot" training in reverse.

The 30 men in the group all are due to be released from the prison within a week, some to assume civilian life for the first time in 20 years. The pre-release program was devised to aid them in the adjustment from a regimented life behind bars to an unfettered life in modern society.

For some in the group, it will be their first look at television. They will receive their first treatment in years as an individual rather than a number among some 3300 fellow convicts.

During their stay in the pre-release center, the inmates will receive lectures and view films on subjects ranging from freedom of expression to character guidance. They will get tips on table manners and advice on their rights and privileges, as well as their obligations as a citizen.

Col. James D. Carter, state Director of Corrections who launched the program, said he hoped eventually to extend the pre-release period to a month, but the first groups will get only a week's training. He said Missouri's prison was one of the few correctional systems to try such a program.

The freshly decorated room used for the program, supervised by J. O. Dotson, the prison's education director, is located in a part of one of the main cell blocks originally designed as a dining room.

One guard will be assigned to the prisoners at all times, to go with them from the dining hall to the lecture room and back to their quarters. The men will receive their pre-release assignments always without warning and will remain segregated from the general prison population until they walk out the front door of the institution.

DIGS MUD FROM FACE, SAVES MAN IN DITCH COLLAPSE

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3 (AP)—A rain-soaked wall of an 11-foot sewer ditch collapsed yesterday and buried William McKnight. He was saved by a fellow worker who leaped into the ditch and clawed the mud from his face so he could breathe.

McKnight's head was covered for 10 minutes and he was unconscious when Alfred Aicardi, a plumber, cleared his face. The victim soon revived and gasped, "I figured sure I was a goner."

Other workmen and firemen freed McKnight after 30 minutes. He suffered a fractured collar bone and bruises.

ARMY LIEUTENANT CONVICTED OF DESERTION, GETS 2 YEARS

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky., Dec. 3 (UP)—Army Lt. Allen F. Bentley, 22 years old, was found guilty of desertion by a court-martial board here yesterday and sentenced to two years at hard labor. He also was dismissed from the Army and ordered to forfeit all pay and allowances.

Bentley, a native of Vermont, disappeared from his New Providence (Tenn.) home the night of Oct. 6, and did not return for two weeks. He had stayed at home with his two children while his wife attended German classes the night of his disappearance.

On his return, he told Criminal Investigation Division agents that he had been kidnaped and held by a gang. He later admitted he went to the East without leave and without notifying his wife.

MUNICIPALITIES GET TAX REFUND OPINION

Advised They're Not Required to Return Overpayments on Acreage.

Thirty-seven of St. Louis County's smaller municipalities are being advised by the City and Village Tax Office, a private tax collection agency, that they will not be required to refund over-payments of taxes on acreage property, even though the levies were found excessive under a circuit court ruling.

John B. Clark, manager of the agency which serves the 37 incorporated communities, said yesterday information was being passed on to the municipalities on the basis of an opinion by the agency's attorney, T. Douglas Moore.

The lawyer cited a 1949 Missouri Supreme Court decision holding that taxpayers are not entitled to refunds even though payments were erroneous, unless the payments were made under duress or compulsion.

Clark said 25 to 50 per cent of the real estate taxes in the 37 communities had been paid, but he was unable to estimate the dollar amount.

County Collector Willis W. Benson has announced his office would honor applications for refunds of county taxes on acreage property which were found over-assessed under the circuit court ruling.

Judge Raymond E. LaDriere ruled Nov. 8 that assessed valuation of acreage property within municipalities should have been increased only 60 per cent, the urban rate, rather than the 85 per cent prescribed for rural areas under a State Tax Commission order.

IDLEWILD BARS BRITISH JET AIRLINER ON WORLD FLIGHT

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (UP)—A British jet airliner making a flight around the world will not be permitted to land at Idlewild International airport, an official said today.

A spokesman for the Port of New York Authority said the authority's board of commissioners had rejected a request to land. The authority does not permit jet landings at New York City's airports because the planes are too noisy, he said.

The plane, the Comet III, left Cairo, Egypt, today for Bombay on the second leg of its flight.

ARMY WILL OPEN CLASSES IN LOYALTY INVESTIGATING

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Army said yesterday it would begin classes next Monday to train officers and civilian employes in handling loyalty investigation cases.

The first of a series of two week courses for groups of about 15 will commence at the Army's intelligence center, Fort Holabird, Md., near Baltimore.

Those attending will be personnel whose duties involve investigation, analyses and decisions in cases where loyalty charges have been lodged against Army soldiers or civilians.

Defense Secretary Wilber Brucker disclosed at a press conference last October that as part of an overhaul of the Army loyalty check system he was ordering establishment of special classes for training and refresher courses.

DEPOSIT BOX THEFT ATTEMPT CHARGED

Priest Says Illinois State Employe Tried to Sneak Out $5500.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3 (AP)—A state treasurer's office employe was held on a grand larceny charge today, accused by a Roman Catholic priest of trying to sneak $5500 from a safe deposit box.

Joseph J. Esty, 40 years old, an inheritance tax examiner, was present in an official capacity when the safe deposit box fo the late Eugene P. Williams was opened at the suburban Oak Park National bank yesterday.

The Rev. Charles Williams, principal of Spalding High school in Peoria, and a nephew of Eugene Williams, told police Esty juggled an envelope from the box and then secreted it under his coat.

Father Williams, however, said he demanded that Esty produce the envelope containing the money and that Esty then pleaded with him to "forget about it" because "I'm destitute."

Police Lt. Fremont Nester said Father Williams asked the others present to overlook the incident but that Myron Wisch, the attorney handling the Williams estate, insisted the priest sign a complaint, because of Esty's position of trust.

Esty, who was walking with the aid of a crutch, was immediately suspended from his job. A hearing on the grand larceny charge was set for Monday. Esty denied he attempted to hide the envelope.

FILLING STATION HELD UP, ROBBER FLEES IN TAXICAB

A filling station at 1235 North Grand boulevard was robbed of $78 last night. The robber was being sought by police in the area of Sixth and Chestnut streets where he got out of a taxicab in which he left the filling station.

Attendant James Silvia, a Negro, of 3533 Page boulevard, said the man entered the station with a request to use the rest room. As he came out he displayed a revolver and helped himself to the money in the cash register.

He then entered the taxicab, which was traced to the downtown night club area. The cab driver told police the robber got out of the cab at Sixth and Chestnut.

RAY J. GARTLAND DIES; CHICAGO PRINTING OFFICER

TENANT FOUND DEAD AFTER FIRE IN HIS ROOM

Haze Mosby, a rooming house tenant, was found dead by firemen last night following a fire in his room at 1805 Cole street.

HELICOPTER STRINGS HOSE TO BURNING FISHING BOAT

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Dec. 3 (AP)—When a burning fishing vessel was driven aground 50 yards off Good Harbor Beach yesterday, a versatile Coast Guard helicopter played a new role and carried the business end of a fire hose out to the blazing craft.

With it, Capt. Eugene M. Naves, 35 years old, and his one-man crew of the 52-foot whiting dragger Veronica N. extinguished flames in the fo'castle.

Capt. Naves said fire broke out off Thatcher island and he beached the vessel as the quickest method to obtain aid.

Firefighters laid a 2½-inch line from a hydrant to the water's edge then reduced to a 1½ inch line. The 'copter carried the nozzle end of this out to the dragger and lowered it to the deck.

TEAMSTER BID TO JOIN CIO UNIT IS REBUFFED

Union Barred From Industrial Subsidiary of Newly Merged Labor Organization.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP)—A bid by the big Teamsters Union to join the CIO subsidiary of the newly merged AFL-CIO was rebuffed tonight by James B. Carey, a top leader of the former CIO.

The Teamsters were the biggest single affiliate of the old AFL.

Several officials of the 1,300,000-member Teamsters revealed their union planned to join the AFL-CIO's Industrial Union Department. That is a unit intended primarily for former CIO unions.

Carey, asked whether the Teamsters would be welcome, said flatly no. The former CIO secretary-treasurer and head of the electrical workers said:

"Number one, the Teamsters are not an industrial union. Two, they can't adhere to our objectives. Three, for other reasons they are not eligible. And four, we won't take them in."

Carey declined to elaborate on these points.

Teamsters Often Accused.

The Teamsters have been often accused by both AFL and CIO unions of organizing outside Teamster jurisdiction and for harboring alleged racket influences.

The Teamster move appeared to have stirred up the first major quarrel in the reunited labor movement on the eve of its first convention Monday.

Walter Reuther, who had been top man in the CIO and is due to head the IUD, was inclined to minimize the whole situation. He said the IUD would not actually be established until authorized zy the convention next week.

Others pointed out the IUD probably will act separately on the merits of each applicant.

Reuther told the CIO's last convention yesterday:

"The Industrial Union Department will, like every other department of the merged organization, be open to membership of every union in the CIO or AFL, if they have an interest in the department."

The situation was further aggravated by word that Teamsters officials that they have signed a mutual aid agreement with the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers union. This is an independent group ousted by the CIO some five years ago for alleged Communist influences.

The Teamsters similarly risked the ire of the AFL leadership recently by entering into a similar aid pact with the International Longshremen's Association, the awterfront union ousted by the AFL for alleged ganster domination.

Other Shifts Expected.

The Teamster move is the first of an expected series of union shifts within the federation which will have the effect of diluting the former CIO and mixing up alliances which had existed in the separate AFL and CIO.

The machinists with 860,000 members, meat cutters with 335,000, and retail clerks' union with 265,000, all major former AFL groups, are expected to enter the IUD in time.

Eventually unions with more than half the entire 16,000,000 AFL-CIO membership will affiliate with the IUD, it has been predicted. This would make the IUD the most powerful single alliance in the new federation. Craft unions of the building and construction trades department had been the dominant group in the old AFL.

Influence for Reuther.

Expansion of the IUD may herald growing influence in the new federation for Reuther, head of the 1,200,000-member auto workers' union. However, entry of the Teamsters in the IUD might represent a challenge to Reuther's leadership of the AFL-CIO's industrial union branch.

Reuther's auto workers and the 1,200,000-member United Steel Workers, another of the former CIO's major unions, also are reported to be considering joining the new AFL-CIO metal trades department. This would be a further shifting of former alliances.

David J. McDonald is president of the Steel Workers.

Leaders of two independent railroad workers unions, which have been considering joining the new merged federation, have been invited to attend the AFL-CIO sessions next week as official guests.

They are H. E. Glibert, of the 80,000-member Brotherhood of nLocomotive Firemen and Enginemen, and W. F. Kennedy, of the 200,000 member Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. Both groups have expressed interest in joining the new federation.

THREE KILLED, FOUR INJURED IN FREIGHT WRECK ON PENNSY

EBENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 3 (UP)—Two Pennsylvania Railroad freight trains coldided head-on near here today, killing two engineers and one fireman and injuring four other crewmen.

The crash occurred on the Cresson Branch spur, north of Johnstown, Pa. Twelve crewmen were riding the trains, one a two-unit diesel with 20 freight cars and the other a three-unit diesel with only a cabinet car attached.

Hospital attendants at Altoona, Pa., where the injured were taken, said one of the crewmen said both trains had been given a "clear track signal."

SEC DISCLOSES CUT RATE OPTION ON TRACK STOCK

West Memphis Men Offered Dollar Shares in Dog Race Firm for 10 Cents.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—Two civic leaders of West Memphis, Ark., have been elected directors of Southland Racing Corporation, a dog track at West Memphis, and given options to buy 20,000 shares of the track's common stock at 10 cents a share, files at the Security and Exchange Commission disclosed today. The stock is offered to the public at $1 a share.

The two are Bernard High, a real estate dealer active in the West Memphis Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the community's industrial council, and Charles J. Upton, a leading insurance executive also active in the Chamber of Commerce. He also operates a beer distributing company.

Two other residents of West Memphis, Charles J. (Rip) Smith, attorney and speaker of the Arkansas House of Representatives, and his law partner, Bernard Goldstein, president of the Crittenden County Bar Association, have been given options to buy 15,000 shares each at the bargain price, SEC files showed.

Promoter's Stock.

If the four West Memphis leaders exercise their options and buy the stock, it would come from the 500,000 shares held at present by Cecil R. Edmonds, former Chicago builder who was one of the principal promoters of the dog track, SEC records disclosed.

The track has been built at an estimated cost of $630,000, exclusive of the $40,000 cost of the 20-acre site. But the corporation's troubles are not over. The Arkansas Racing Commission has not yet issued a permit for operation of Southland.

A newly-appointed commission is scheduled to meet Monday at Little Rock to consider a permit for Southland and a horse racing track, Oaklawn, at Hot Springs, owned by John G. Cella, St. Louis capitalist.

Meanwhile, officers and directors of the old Riverside Greyhound Track at West Memphis have petitioned the commission to consider renewing that track's license. Riverside and Southland are about five miles apart. There is a law in Arkansas specifying that dog racing tracks must be at least 15 miles apart.

A Letter and an Opinion.

SEC files show that Edmonds' assets when he started building the dog track were a letter from the old Arkansas Racing Commission promising a license for the place, and an option to buy the land. The option was held jointly by Edmonds and Jules Singer, Denver lawyer and former assistant to former Mayor Quigg Newton of Denver.

Edmonds and Singer turned the option over to their corporation in return for 1,000,000 shares of stock, each taking 500,000 shares. Meanwhile they made a $2500 down payment on the land and Singer pledged 50,000 of his shares to guarantee payment of the additional $37,500 for the site.

A New York investment firm, General Investment Corp., agreed to sell, on a "best effort" arrangement, 1,250,000 shares of Southland stock at $1 a share to the public. The firm's commission was 20 cents a share. Officers of the investment firm were offered 300,000 shares at 10 cents a share, SEC files showed.

Edmonds and his associates will control 1,300,000 shares of Southland stock and the public will control 1,250,000 shares, if the entire stock subscription is sold.

WOMAN FAILS ON $100,000 QUESTION, TO KEEP $25,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (UP)—A 72-year-old great-grandmother missed a chance to become the biggest jackpot winner in television history tonight when she failed to answer correctly all parts of a $100,000 question on American history written for her by Kentucky Gov.-Elect A. B. (Happy) Chandler.

Mrs. Ethel Richardson answered five other parts of the question correctly but was unable to give the Indian name of the wilderness trail through the Appalachian mountains and to tell what the name meant.

Mrs. Richardson was making her fifth appearance on the National Broadcasting Company's TV show "The Big Surprise." She gets to keep $25,000, or half of the $50,000 she won by correctly answering questions about American folk songs on the show last week.

G.O.P. LOSES OUT ON SECURITY RISK FINDINGS

Democratic Investigators Say Only 342 Were Fired, Not 3586 as Reported.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—Republicans took heavy losses this week in their gamble on the numbers game.

Democratic investigators set out to show that certain Republican politicians, have been practicing a hoax in racking up for public consumption sets of numbers intended to show that that the Republicans inherited a government riddled with persons of doubtful loyalty and that they have been cleaning them out by the thousands.

That the Democrats may be nearing the payoff is seen in the testimony of a parade of Administration spokesmen who passed this week before a subcommittee on constitutional rights headed by Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. Missouri, and a civil service subcommittee over which Senator Olin D. Johnston, South Carolina, presided.

Charge of Irresponsibility.

Both senators are Democrats and both have charged irresponsibility by some Administration spokesmen such as Vice President Richard Nixon, Attorney General Herbert Brownell and Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield in exaggerating the extent of the Administration's achievements in catching subversives or security risks in the Government.

By inference or direct accusation, these spokesmen have given the impression a host of subversives or security risks were left undisturbed by the Truman Administration.

The major disclosures by the investigating groups this week was that the number of employes fired as "security risks" under terms of an executive order issued by President Eisenhower was 342—not 3586 as the public had been led to believe.

Moreover, a large number of these were employed after the Truman Administration went out.

More Data Promised.

A source close to the Johnston subcommittee said that that data not yet disclosed will show that more than 70 per cent of the employes dismissed as security risks and an even greater percentage of those who resigned and were lumped in with the security risks actually were taken into the Government by the Eisenhower Administration.

In addition, Philip Young, chairman of the United States Civil Service Commission, and an Eisenhower appointee, conceded before the Hennings subcommittee that there "has always been a great misrepresentation" of the Administration's security risk figures, both publicly and privately."

"As a matter of fact," said Young with alarming frankness, "I don't know how you determine what a security risk is."

This statement caused some raised eyebrows because it was Young's Civil Service Commission which had issued the figures on security risk firings, providing a political weapon for Republicans hammering at the Truman Administration as a haven for security risks, or worse.

In its fourth report on firings issued recently the Civil Service Commission stated flatly that 3586 employes had been dismissed since May 1953, "because of security questions falling within the purview" of the President's order.

Inquiry Findings.

The facts, however, as revealed by the Senate investigators, were that all but 342 were thrown out for offenses which would have cost them their jobs under civil service regulations and that it was under those regulations—not the security order—that they were fired.

An Air Force spokesman testified that 404 of its employes listed as having been discharged as security risks were not dismissed for that reason. A post office official said that of 350 postal workers reported by civil service to have been dismissed under the security program, only 58 were removed thusly.

These are samples of what the Johnston subcommittee uncovered as it painstakingly analyzed the dismissals in 24 government agencies and departments.

These facts, however, have not been available to the public and reading of a portion of a speech given by Summerfield on Jan. 21, 1954, in which the technique for subtly clouding the picture is apparent, may indicate why.

Summerfield was quoted as having said that "the Government has had a soul search" under the Eisenhower Administration which resulted in 2200 persons being removed from federal employment.

Then he added, according to the quotation:

"I am not amiably inclined toward people who make treason a preoccupation."

Campaign Issue.

The Democratic subcommittee chairmen are confident that their disclosures have destroyed the linking by Republicans of federal firings with treason or subversion as a campaign instrument for next year, a practice which was widely engaged

JEWISH HOSPITAL TO SET UP CHILD PSYCHIATRIC UNIT

Mark C. Steinberg's Widow and Daughter and His Trust to Finance Project.

A child psychiatric unit will be set up at the Jewish Hospital Medical Center, it was announced yesterday. The unit, which will provide both in-patient and out-patient care, will be constructed and its operation will be underwritten for eight years by a $600,000 fund made available to the hospital.

Donors are Mrs. Ellen S. Berkman, Mrs. Etta Steinberg and the Steinberg Charitable Trust. Mrs. Berkman is the daughter of Mrs. Steinberg and the late Mark C. Steinberg, investment broker who left an estate worth more than $4,000,000 to be used for philanthropic and religious purposes when he died in 1951.

The new unit will provide facilities for hospitalization of 15 to 20 disturbed children. The staff will be headed by a full-time child psychiatrist and will include occupational therapists, psychiatric nurses, psychiatric social workers and counselors.

Cost of the specialized service will average $30 per day per bed, it is estimated. Some income will be derived from parents of patients on a full or part-pay basis, and welfare agencies may help defray some of the expense, but it is anticipated that there will be a net operating deficit of $75,000 annually.

The donors have offered to underwrite this deficit up to $75,000 each year for eight years.

At present, no St. Louis hospital has bed facilities designed especially for disturbed children needing psychiatric care, Dr. David Littauer, executive director of Jewish Hospital, stated. When such children are hospitalized, they are placed in the adult division of a hospital.

The Social Planning Council has emphasized the need for expanding the community's psychiatric services for children.

Jewish Hospital proposes to take care of seriously disturbed children, with emphasis on treatment rather than on research and training. It therefore will concentrate on cases considered likely to benefit from psychiatric therapy.

The child psychiatric unit will be located on a floor separate from general patients. In addition to beds it will contain occupational therapy and play areas, classrooms and offices. An out-patient service is planned to provide psychiatric treatment for children referred to the hospital on this basis and follow-up service for patients who have been discharged.

In 1953 Jewish Hospital received $1,000,000 from the Steinberg Charitable Trust for construction of a seven-story unit for care of chronically ill patients. This building, the Mark C. Steinberg Memorial Hospital, is now going up on Parkview place near the main hospital at 216 South Kingshighway.

U.S., CZECHS OPEN TALKS ON ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (UP)—The United States and Communist Czechoslovakia have opened preliminary talks aimed at settling their long-outstanding economic problems.

Officials said yesterday this country wants Czechoslovakia to settle between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000 in claims and defaulted payments. Czechoslovakia wants more trade with the West, lower United States duties, and unfreezing of millions of dollars held by the United States Treasury.

American and Czech negotiators met in Prague last Monday to determine whether full-scale negotiating sessions could be arranged, officials said. Previous talks between the two countries on economic issues broke off in 1949.

WINTHROP ROCKEFELLER SEEKS SECRECY IN SUIT

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP)—Winthrop Rockefeller has asked that reporters be barred and all records sealed in pretrial examination of a $100,000 suit threatening to air intimate details connected with his divorce from "Bobo" Rockefeller.

Joseph Sax, a Boston attorney, is suing both Rockefeller and his former wife for legal fees he says are due him for services rendered prior to the divorce, in which Mrs. Rockefeller received a $8,000,000 settlement.

Sax contends that in 1952 as Mrs. Rockefeller's lawyer, he negotiated a settlement on the same terms adopted two years later.

G.O.P. LOSES OUT ON SECURITY RISK FINDINGS

in the congressional elections last autumn.

Senator Matthew Neely (Dem.), West Virginia, a member of the Johnston subcommittee boasts that the showing by the subcommittee has demonstrated the Administration's security firings were a "political hoax."

He protests bitterly that the Administration "has thrown a shadow over the reputations of a multitude of innocent people as free from Communist taint as George Washington ever was.

Saigh Tax Case to Be Re-examined by Jury

chase of a $33,000,000 war surplus nickel company in Cuba, the Nicaro Nickel plant.

Following failure of the scheme, Schumacher was found guilty of perjury and sentenced to prison.

"Gimmick" Used in Deal.

Saigh has told the Post-Dispatch a "gimmick" in the tax laws made it possible for him and the late Robert E. Hannegan, Truman's Postmaster General, to buy the Cardinals baseball club for $4,060,800 in 1947.

The "gimmick" involved transfer of a $2,500,000 surplus in the baseball club's treasury to National Sports, Inc., which Saigh and Hannegan created. The money was used to repay banks, whose loans enabled the pair to buy the baseball club.

The transaction was brought to Congressional attention in 1952 by Senator John J. Williams (Rep.), Delaware, who said he was told by a tax expert that Internal Revenue officials had not checked closely enough on the deal.

Last June the Government sought to withdraw its stipulation settling tax claims of $276,000 against Saigh and several associates. Indications were the Government wanted to delay the agreement pending the outcome of the Federal grand jury investigation here.

Saigh pleaded no contest to two charges of income tax violation in January 1953, and was sentenced to 15 months in prison and fined $15,000. He was released after serving six months of the sentence and paying the fine.

Caudle appeared in the case of Mandel, who escaped criminal prosecution by submitting psychiatrists' reports that he was emotionally unstable. The psychiatric examination was made at the suggestion of Caudle, then head of the tax division. Mandel paid for the examination.

Niehaus was sentenced to six years in the penitentiary and fined $20,000 by Judge Moore. The Government charged that Niehaus devised a scheme for concealing income totaling nearly $1,000,000 in the years 1931 to 1946, when $170,480 was shown on his tax returns. Agents said he should have paid taxes of $359,863, but paid only $72,588.

Shear, operator of jewelry stores at 303 North Seventh street and 3602 South Grand boulevard, was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $5000 on his plea of guilty of evading payment of $12,296 in taxes.

Marienfeld received a prison sentence of 15 months and was fined $5000 on conviction of evading $23,968 in federal income taxes.

Several of the income tax defendants have appeared before the grand jury since completing their sentences. Their testimony is an important phase of the jury's continuing inquiry.

Target of Judge Moore.

Ellis N. Slack, former Assistant United States Attorney General named as a co-conspirator in the Caudle-Connelly indictment was one of the officeholders Judge Moore referred to when he demanded recently that Federal officials who blocked income tax investigation should be brought to justice, the Post-Dispatch learned yesterday.

Slack was a central figure in the Finnegan "whitewash," reporting there was "smoke, but no fire." Subsequent investigation, spurred by Judge Moore, resulted in the conviction of Finnegan, who was sentenced to prison for misconduct in office.

In his remarks, made in open court Nov. 10, Judge Moore sharply criticized T. Coleman Andrews, who recently resigned as Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Judge Moore charged that Andrews, after promising to discharge some officials, had merely transferred them.

Some of these same officials were promoted "more than once," Judge Moore said.

Judge Moore declined to name the officials to whom he referred.

Scanlon and Holt.

The Post-Dispatch learned, however, that two of them are Thomas Scanlon of Boston, and Harold Holt, New Orleans, who originally were assigned to investigate Finnegan's official conduct and wrote a report described as a whitewash.

Scanlon, who was supervisor of accounts at Boston, was promoted to acting chief inspector there in 1952 and the same year was appointed district director. He later became district director at Brooklyn, where he is now serving.

Holt was transferred from his New Orleans post in 1953 to become special agent at Dallas. He then was promoted to assistant regional commissioner of intelligence at Omaha. Both Holt and Scanlon testified at the Omaha grand jury session last winter.

Another man Judge Moore referred to was Frank Lohn, who was special agent for intelligence at Kansas City when he became co-author of a second report, termed a whitewash, in 1950. He later became head of the Intelligence Division at Washington. In 1952, following the Republican victory, he was sent to Denver as regional Internal Revenue commissioner. Now retired, on pension, he lives on a farm near Brady, Texas.

Brown Indictment.

The indictment of G. Elmer Brown, veteran Internal Revenue official, on charges arising from the Finnegan investigation, was cited by Judge Moore in his denunciation of officials.

Brown was supervisor of accounts when he was sent here to audit Finnegan's accounts, and has been accused of urging retaliatory measures against Judge Moore. He was Assistant Regional Inspector at Philadelphia when he was indicted last December.

In refusing to name other revenue officials he said were promoted despite being involved in tax scandals, Judge Moore suggested that the Internal Revenue Service "read the reports of their own investigators."

"It is not up to me to make the names public," Judge Moore observed.

RICHMOND HEIGHTS COUNCIL MEMBER HURT AS CAR SKIDS

Frank D. DeBolt Jr., a Richmond Heights city councilman and an insurance adjuster, was seriously injured Thursday when his automobile skidded on ice on U.S. Highway 50, ran off the road and struck a tree, three miles west of Carlyle, Ill., it was reported yesterday. Carlyle is about 40 miles east of St. Louis.

DeBolt, who suffered fractures of both legs and chest injuries, was brought to St. Luke's Hospital here.

DeBolt, 54 years old, is an adjuster for Aetna Casualty and Surety Co. here and lives at 5 Chafford drive, Richmond Heights.

ULBRICHT GETS NEW TITLE IN GERMAN RED GOVERNMENT

BERLIN, Dec. 3 (UP)—East Germany announced today that Communist boss Walter Ulbricht was formally designated first deputy premier when the Red regime was reorganized 10 days ago.

A Communist announcement said also that planning chief Bruno Leuschner has been promoted to deputy premier.

Ulbricht, who is wanted for murder in West Berlin, has long been recognized as the real boss of East Germany although a renegade Socialist named Otto Grotewohl holds the title of premier. The Communist boss has been a deputy premier ever since Russia set up the Soviet-zone government, but the title "first deputy" is new. The appointment of Leuschner increased the number of Red Germany deputy premiers to 16.

APPOINTED TO BOARD

Dell B. Stafford, treasurer of the Post-Dispatch, has been appointed to the technical advisory board of the Institute of Newspaper Controllers and Finance Officers, it was announced yesterday.

The Institute, which serves the financial and accounting side of newspaper publishing, has more than 400 members throughout the United States and Canada.

JAPANESE REPORT DOUBLING OF RADIOACTIVITY IN SKY

TOKYO, Dec. 3 (UP)—Radioactive contamination of the sky over Tokyo has doubled since the first of this year, two Japanese scientists reported today.

Dr. Yasuo Miyake and Senjin Ishii, officers of the Weather Research Institute, said they had flown to an altitude of 10,000 feet to check the radioactivity. They said they detected "artificial" radioactivity from 8000 feet up. They said the density of radioactive dust was twice the amount detected last January.

The scientists said the current radioactivity was carried by winds to Japan from the northwest — Russia. There has been a flood of reports of radioactive rain and snow all over Japan following the recent Soviet announcement of new nuclear test blasts.

DEFENSE BUDGET BOOST EXPECTED FOR NEXT YEAR

Wilson Likely to Submit Final Dollar Estimate to Eisenhower About Dec. 15.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP) —The Defense Department expects its budget request to Congress for the next fiscal year will be somewhat larger than the projected $34,500,000,000 spending in the current year.

But fiscal officials said today that no specific figure on the size of the new budget, for the year beginning next July 1, would be agreed on until later this month.

Presumably that means about Dec. 15, when the Pentagon's budget must be ready for submission to the White House and budget director.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson conferred yesterday in Gettysburg with President Eisenhower, apparently to outline the trends in his budget-making up to now. But the comment at the Pentagon today indicated Wilson had asked the President to wait until more computations could be assembled before the defense chief submitted a final dollar estimate.

The Pentagon officials discussed the budget making in response to queries about a New York Times report that next year's request might run a half billion or more dollars above this year's spending.

Although the Pentagon had been aiming to hold total outlays to about $34,500,000,000 for the current fiscal year, recent monthly spending rates indicate the total may run to $34,800,000,000 or more.

At his most recent press conference, Nov. 16, Secretary Wilson was asked whether a "guideline" for spending which he had prepared might mean increased expenditures this year. He replied that "I don't see how we can save any money and still carry out our missions."

He commented that wage boosts in industry and rising prices for materials, such as steel, might push up some defense costs.

Wilson also discussed the theory of relating defense spending to gross national income of the country, which is increasing.

A reporter, referring to the possibilities for the next budget, asked if that would mean spending more dollars in fiscal 1957. Wilson replied that:

"Five hundred million dollars, a billion dollars is a good many dollars, so if you talk about it that way, why, that is so."

EGYPT, BRITAIN TO LET SUDANESE HOLD PLEBISCITE

CAIRO, Dec. 3 (AP)—Egypt and Britain announced today they have agreed to let the Sudanese settle their future by a plebiscite.

The choice will be of linking their 1,000,000-square-mile Upper Nile territory—hitherto governed as a condominium by Britain and Egypt—to Egypt, or of having complete independence.

Egypt and Britain have asked Sweden, Norway, Yugoslavia, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, India and Pakistan to serve on a commission to supervise the plebiscite and elections next March or April for a Sudanese constituent assembly. This assembly would have the job of drawing up a constitution as well as an electoral law for a permanent parliament.

Today's agreement supplants one signed in February 1953, under which the future of the Sudan would have been decided by a constituent assembly. Last August, the Sudanese parliament decided it wanted a plebiscite instead.

WAGNER WILLING TO RUN 'BUT NOBODY ASKED ME'

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP)—Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York said today he would be proud to run as the 1956 vice presidential candidate "with any good Democrat, but nobody has asked me."

Pressed as to whether he would be available for the nomination, Wagner told reporters "I should say I would be."

He added, "It would be a great honor, but it's all speculation — I don't take it seriously."

A few minutes earlier Wagner heard Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, tell a luncheon forum audience that Wagner would be "an excellent vice president on anyone's team and in anyone's league."

Wagner thanked Kefauver later and then said "With the people willing, I think I'll be around here in New York City for a while."

U.S. Looks to Supreme Soviet Meeting Dec. 23 for Policy Clue

Special Session May Give Indication of New Russian Strategy for Pushing Cold War.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP) —American officials expect to get a better line on Russia's post-Geneva strategy when the Supreme Soviet meets in special session two days before Christmas.

No reason was given for the calling of this second extraordinary meeting of Russia's national assembly this year. At the first, in August, Premier Bulganin reported on his summit conference with President Eisenhower, British Prime Minister Eden and French Premier Faure.

The regular Supreme Soviet meeting last February was the one at which Georgi Malenkov confessed failure as Premier and stepped down to a lesser role in the Soviet hierarchy.

Speculation here and in Western circles in Moscow is that the special session, set for Dec. 23 by Kremlin decree yesterday, will:

1. Hear a report from Foreign Minister Molotov on his Geneva talks with Secretary of States Dulles, British Foreign Minister Macmillan and French Foreign Minister Pinay. These talks ended Nov. 16 without a single agreement on cold war issues.

2. Listen also to Bulganin and Soviet party boss Nikita S. Khruschchev tell about their tour of India, Burma and Afghanistan. They will return to Moscow about Dec. 17.

3. Possibly—although this is frankly classed as crystal ball gazing—disclose a Soviet program geared to round two of the cold war.

There is no guessing at this stage on whether the Soviets will try to recapture the "Geneva spirit" of easier relations achieved at the summit conference, or tend further toward, as Dulles has put it, "the same hostility and animosity which so defiled the relations between us in the past."

4. Make some personnel changes. No sweeping reorganizations are looked for, however, and any real big bombshells in this department will more likely be saved for the twentieth congress of Russia's Communist party next February.

Special Bulgarian Assembly Session Set for Dec. 12.

VIENNA, Dec. 3 (INS) — The Bulgarian news agency announced today that the Bulgarian National Assembly has been called into extraordinary session for Dec. 12. The news agency made no mention of what would be discussed during the meeting of the Communist puppet state's Parliament.

Soviet Textbook Says Russians Defeated Japan Single-Handedly

Ex-Senator Benton Shows Book for Fourth Graders Which Presents 'Astonishing' Version of Recent History.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3—A new official Soviet textbook for fourth-graders, which tells youngsters that Russia defeated Japan single-handedly in World War II, was released here today by former Senator William Benton of Connecticut.

Benton, who picked up the textbook on his recent month-long trip to Russia, cited the lie about Japan—along with a series of other statements equally false—as part of a Soviet policy of "distortions of history." He called it "a daily and never-ending policy which involves the education of every Soviet child."

He forwarded a translation of a section of the book—"History of U.S.S.R."—to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. He urged UNESCO to undertake at its next conference to persuade member nations, including the Soviet Union, to make their textbooks "fair and objective." He also urged a "systematic study of existing history textbooks."

'Astonishing' History.

Benton, publisher of the Encyclopedia Britannica, went to Russia to get material for an article for the 1956 "Britannica Book of the Year." He said, in a letter to UNESCO, that I. A. Kairov, minister of education, gave him the book, along with three other textbooks.

Benton said he found the book's section on recent history "astonishing." He noted that "this is not a local or an out-of-date text. It went to press in June of 1955, about the time of the Geneva conference."

He added that it was fully approved by the Soviet government and that 1,000,000 copies were printed.

"This is the Russian child's first exposure to history," Benton noted.

Selections from the book:

"Defeat of Japan—Japan was Germany's ally in the Far East. The Japanese usurpers endeavored to enslave China and other countries and more than once attacked our fatherland. In order to secure our country's safety . . . to speed up the termination of the war, and to contribute to an immediate establishment of general peace, the Soviet Union entered into a war against the Japanese usurpers. On Sept. 2, 1945, under the crushing blows of the Soviet army, Japan acknowledged its defeat and laid down arms."

Allies Deprecated.

On the second front:

"The Soviet Union had borne the main burden of the war. In the course of three war years, England and the U.S.A. were postponing in every possible way the opening of a second European front against Germany. Only when it became clear as a result of great victories of the Soviet army, that the Soviet Union alone was able to defeat the enemy, occupy the German territory and liberate all of western Europe including France, did England and the U.S.A. open the second front in Europe. In June, 1944, English and American troops . . . crossed the channel . . ."

On the Soviet invasion of Finland:

"A terrible danger was hovering over Leningrad. The great city was close to the Finnish border and Finland was run by the Fascists. They dreamed of seizing Leningrad and other Soviet lands and started to fight us. The armed forces of U.S.S.R. broke through the Finnish impregnable fortifications and inflicted upon the Finns a crushing defeat. The border was moved away from Leningrad."

SHAD POLIER TO ADDRESS JEWISH CONGRESS COUNCIL

Shad Polier of New York, chairman of the national executive committee of the American Jewish Congress, will speak at a city-wide convention of the local council of the congress at 2:15 p.m. today in B'nai Amoona Auditorium, 524 Trinity avenue, University City.

Other speakers at the meeting will be Abraham S. Hvman of New York, executive secretary of the World Jewish Congress, and Will Maslow, also of New York, director of the American Jewish Congress's commission on law and social action.

Polier will analyze the current Middle East situation in terms of the threat to American security posed by the sale of arms by Communists to Egypt. Hyman will report on problems facing 500,000 Jews of North Africa, and Maslow will speak on "Current Attacks on Civil Liberties and How to Defend These Rights."

DRIVER ARRESTED, ACCUSED OF HITTING 5 AUTOS, TRUCK

James Eddings, a clerk, was arrested yesterday by police who said they trailed his automobile two blocks by marks on street pavement made by a damaged wheel after Eddings's machine struck five parked cars and a truck in the 2400 block of South Eighteenth street.

Eddings, 22 years old, of the 2300 block of South Thirteenth street, was putting on a spare wheel when police, who had been summoned to the accident scene, found him near Eighteenth on Sidney street. He was quoted as saying he remembered hitting one parked vehicle. He was booked for careless driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

2 DIE OF SEPTIC TANK FUMES AFTER SAVING MAN

ELMWOOD, Ill., Dec. 3 (AP)—Two men, overlooked by a fire department rescue squad, were asphyxiated in a backyard septic tank after helping save a neighbor from its deadly gases today.

David Schisler was cleaning the underground tank at his home when he was partly overcome by gas and screamed for help. Two of his neighbors, Clifton Clark, co-publisher of the Elmwood Gazette, and Keith Lucas, a linotype operator for the paper, ran to Schisler's aid.

Clark and Lucas jumped into the tank and pushed Schisler part way out before they, too, were overcome and slipped away from the tank opening. A fire department inhalator squad summoned by another neighbor, arrived, hauled Schisler the rest of the way out of the tank and began reviving him. Not noticing the other two men, firemen replaced the top of the tank.

It was not known that Clark and Lucas were in the tank until Schisler regained consciousness about 15 minutes later.

JUDGE EXPLAINS VOTER LAW, REALIZES HE IS AFFECTED

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 3 (AP) — Cole County Circuit Judge Sam C. Blair was helping deputies in the county clerk's office today on legal problems attending the new voter registration law.

He explained carefully that any voter who moved since he last registered would have to register again. His point-by-point explanation suddenly exploded in his own mind.

With a start he realized he, too, had moved recently. So he got a registration blank and dutifully filled it out.

House Group Studies $25-a-Day Job Organizing Navy Wives

Woman Consultant Received $870 Plus $262 Expenses for Helping to Set Up Clubs.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (UP) —The case of a woman who was paid $25 a day by the Navy to "organize" Navy wives came under scrutiny of House investigators today.

She is Mrs. Mary P. Paolozzi, national president of the Navy Wives of America. She was listed among hundreds of other consultants the Navy has carried on its payroll since 1953.

The Navy told the House Government Operations committee Mrs. Paolozzi was hired for "full time employment as a consultant to vital Naval installations on the east coast and promote the growth of Navy wives clubs currently functioning and to stimulate the organzation of clubs in those areas where none exists at present."

New Inquiry Pressed.

The case came to light as the committee pressed a new investigation of the Administration's use of dollar-a-year men (known also as WOCs—without compensation) and special consultants.

Mrs. Paolozzi was hired as a $10-a-day WAE (when actually employed) in 1954 and later was raised to $25 a day. She collected $870 in pay, plus $262 in expenses.

The committee, headed by Representative William L. Dawson (Dem.), Illinois, has asked federal agencies for a list of all WAEs and WOCs employed since January 1953. It also has asked for a list of all industry advisory committee and an explanation of their functions, together with special public relations and management consultants.

The Navy listed a "free lance" writer at $50 a day as a public relations adviser to the assistant secretary of Navy for air." He collected $2650 in 1954, plus $1100 in expenses. The investigators want to know why he was hired when the Navy already has a full time public relations staff.

Other Figures.

The Air Force has used 2481 WAEs, the investigators said and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has used 3454 WOCs and WAEs since Jan. 1, 1953. Figures for other agencies have not yet been compiled, they said.

Another thing the investigators want to find out why in some cases a man, who is working for the Government, quits his job and is rehired as a day-to-day "consultant" at a higher rate of pay.

Meantime, Representative Emanuel Celler (Dem.), New York, plans to resume hearings Wednesday by his anti-trust subcommittee which is investigating the use of WOCs and advisory groups.

VATICAN PAPER SAYS POLISH CARDINAL IS STILL PRISONER

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 3 (AP) —L'osservatore Romano said today Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, Roman Catholic primate of Poland, is still a prisoner.

A Warsaw dispatch published in New York recently said the cardinal had been released from internment and was living in a monastery in southeast Poland.

The Vatican newspaper said: "In reality there has been no liberation. . . . The only news is that today it is known where he is, or at least where he was a week ago. Cardinal Wyszynski is still a prisoner for the same reasons that in September 1953 brought about his arbitrary confinement."

Plenty of Choirs.

BELTON, S. C. (AP)—The First Baptist Church here has five choirs. There's the Cherub Choir for 6 to 8 year-olds, the Carol Choir for children from 9 through 12, the Vesper Choir for young people 13 through 17, the regular church choir for anyone over 18, and the Marshall choir, an all-male group.

E. ST. LOUISAN CITED IN EYE DISEASE FIGHT

Dr. Thaddeus S. Szewczyk Helped Cut Blindness in Premature Infants.

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—Dr. Thaddeus S. Szewczyk of East St. Louis has been credited with a part in solving a mysterious disease that caused blindness in prematurely born babies.

Restricted use of oxygen in incubators has virtually wiped out the disease, it was reported at the annual meeting of the Prevention of Blindness Society of Metropolitan Washington and in the current issue of the Scientific American.

First noticed in 1940, the disease reached epidemic proportions in the early 1950's in some hospitals, where as many as two of every 10 premature infants suffered some degree of blindness. East St. Louis was one of the cities with a high incidence.

There is no known cure for the condition, called retrolental fibroplasia, in which the tiny blood vessels that nourish the retina develop abnormally.

Dr. Szewczyk was mentioned in the Scientific American by Dr. Theodore H. Ingalls as one of 25 or 30 scientists who supplied clues that eventually led to solution of the medical puzzle. Dr. Ingalls is associate professor of epidemiology at the Harvard University School of Public Health.

The East St. Louis physician reported that infants given large amounts of oxygen appeared more likely to contract the disease.

A paradox remained, in that the eyes seemed to suffer from too little oxygen, Dr. Ingalls related, so that "the babies were starving for oxygen in the midst if plenty."

One of the final clues, he went on, appeared when someone recalled a Nazi Luftwaffe doctor's observation that high oxygen concentrations could damage the lungs of experimental animals and cause suffocation.

"Once the hazard was fully recognized, the epidemic quickly subsided," Dr. Ingalls wrote. "Physicians and hospitals are now aware that when oxygen is administered, it should be balanced carefully to the infant's needs and capacities. The accepted ceiling is an atmosphere with no more than 40 per cent oxygen."

At the meeting of the Prevention of Blindness Society, Dr. Joseph Dessoff, a Washington opthalmologist, said not a single case of the disease had occurred in more than a year at the District of Columbia General Hospital. Four or five premature infants each year were blinded by the ailment in former years. He attributed the change to the controlled use of oxygen.

The United States Public Health Service has recommended only emergency use of oxygen in incubation of premature infants.

FOLSOM BORROWS TENNESSEE GUARD PLANE FOR TRIP

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 3 (UP)—Already in the Air Force doghouse for questionable use of Alabama National Guard planes, Gov. James E. Folsom has borrowed a Guard plane from Tennessee to make a trip to Oklahoma, it was disclosed today.

Folsom yesterday took off from Brookley Air Force Base at Mobile and flew to Oklahoma City to attend the convention of the Young Democrats of America.

The Air Force announced earlier this week that it would investigate reports that Folsom used his National Guard C-47 to fly himself and a party of friends to the Alabama-Rice football game at Houston, Tex., in September, and used the same plane last month to fly a state senator and his friends from Dothan, Ala., to the Alabama-Auburn game in Birmingham.

Folsom replied to the announcement by stating that he would have all state National Guard planes fly a "special weather survey" mission to Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 31, when Auburn plays Vanderbilt in the Gator Bowl.

The Air Force said it would "intensify" its investigation if Folsom carries out his Gator Bowl threat.

ARMY SPEEDING UP RETURN OF SOLDIERS FROM KOREA

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 3 (UP)—The United States Eighth Army said today it was speeding up return of American soldiers to the United States so as many as possible can get home for Christmas.

"Soldiers due to leave Korea in December have been moving out at an accelerated rate since mid-November," an Army spokesman said.

The spokesman said 3850 United States troops have sailed from Korea so far in time to be home for Christmas. Another 1000, some of whom normally would not complete their Korean service until January, will sail for home in mid-December, the spokesman said.

SOLDIER FATALLY HURT IN LEAP TO CATCH FERRY

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (UP)—A soldier stationed at Fort Jay on Governor's Island made a fatal attempt to catch the ferry to Manhattan today as the boat was pulling from its slip.

Sgt. George O. Airhart, 37 years old, made a running jump for the departing ferry. He missed, hit his head on the ferry's rail and fell unconscious into New York bay.

He was rescued from the water, but died later at Fort Jay station hospital.

A-BOMB FALLOUT CAN BE MEASURED WITH NEW METER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP) —A new meter to detect and measure radioactive fallout from an atomic bomb explosion was announced by the Navy last night. It was developed for use by the public and civil defense workers.

The gadget is the latest in a series of instruments for measuring either cumulative dosages of radioactivity or the presence of contamination in the air. Produced in the Naval Research laboratory, it is about the size of a small candy box.

The Navy said the new meter, giving immediate information, should help people escape from a fallout area. Also it should help prevent panic in an area where there is little or no fallout.

The meter, battery-operated, uses a crystal of cadmium sulphide. Gamma radiation coming in contact with the crystal produces an electrical current. This current, passed through a type of amplifier, lights a neon lamp in a series of flashes. The frequency of the flashes indicates the intensity of radiation.

PHONE NUMBER FOR INSPIRATIONAL TALK SWAMPED

St. Louisans are showing a 24-hour-a-day need for prayer, the Rev. Dr. Paul S. McElroy reported yesterday.

A one-minute recorded inspirational message from the Rev. Dr. McElroy is given to anyone who dials VOlunteer 3-4222. First Congregational Church, 6501 Wydown boulevard, Clayton, where he is pastor, is sponsoring the service.

Three automatic telephone-answering machines, in the basement of his home at 83 Arundel place, Clayton, have been kept busy around the clock. He estimates more than 3000 persons daily are hearing a "Minute Meditation."

For every dialer who has received an inspirational message, seven havs received a busy signal, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. told the Rev. Dr. McElroy. A total of 21,026 busy signals were buzzed in the 24-hour period after the service went into operation Thursday.

The Rev. Dr. McElroy reports response has been highly favorable to the non-sectarian comments he makes on problems of everyday life. He is writing a new inspirational message each day.

Mrs. Gibson, 84 years old, died of a cerebral hemorrhage Friday at Barnes Hospital. She formerly taught at the old Beethoven Conservatory of Music here and was organist and choir director of the Clayton Methodist Church for 10 years.

Surviving are her husband, with whom she lived at 7806 Bonhomme avenue, Clayton, and a son, James H. Gibson, Port Washington, N.Y.

SOVIET LEADERS BEGIN TOUR OF BURMA INTERIOR

Moscow Radio Beams Khrushchev's Controversial Remark to Southeast Asia.

RANGOON, Dec. 3 (UP) — Russia's visiting leaders started a three-day tour of the interior of Burma today while the Moscow radio broadcast its version of their activities yesterday.

Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Russian Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev flew to Heho, in the hills northeast of Rangoon, and motored on festively-decorated roads.

Moscow radio, however, was busily broadcasting to southeast Asia the party line on Khrushchev's latest controversial remark.

Remark on 'Savages.'

"Great Britain didn't exist until William tne Conqueror," Khrushchev had said on a visit to the Shwe Dagon temple shrine yesterday. "Your temples are 2000 years old and theirs are only 1000. Yet they call you savages."

A British Foreign Office spokesman in London called this remark "ludicrous."

Moscow's version today attributed the remark about William the Conqueror to a Burmese diplomat and ignored the one about savages. It quoted the Moscow newspaper Pravda as reporting:

"Pointing to the majestic gilded steeple of the pagoda, a Burmese diplomat said that during their struggle for independence the Burmese would often say that when William the Conqueror landed in Britain, the pagoda already had been built. He said that Britain was not even a nation then but Burmese people were at the top of civilization."

Khrushchev, according to Pravda's dispatch, replied "quite right."

Welcomed by 60,000.

Sixty thousand persons welcomed the Russians to Heho. Pretty girls decorated them with garlands of flowers. An honor guard saluted and bands played the Burmese and Russian national anthems.

The visitors were cheered at each town they passed on their automobile tour which followed, and they were pelted with dahlias.

By the Associated Press.

Security precautions tightened as Bulganin and Khruschchev entered an area of profonged guerrilla warfare by Communists and other dissidents against Burma's armed forces.

Army patrols guarded the entire route. Soldiers in motor launches patrolled the lake area.

Communists have been responsible for recent violence. They were accused of blasting six bridges at Peju, 40 miles north of Taunggyi, the day the Russians reached Burma. One Burmese paper, discussing that attack, asked editorially: "Is it in celebration of your masters' arrival?"

Official sources reported that a Burma army patrol making a check along a parade route to be used by visiting Soviet leaders broke into the apartment of the security guard at the United States Embassy in Rangoon.

ARCHITECT TO LECTURE FOR 3 HOURS ON KETC

R. Buckminister Fuller, visiting architect at the Washington University school of architecture, will present a three-hour lecture starting at 8 p.m. Wednesday on educational television station KETC (Channel 9).

Fuller, who also is a designer, inventor and engineer, will discuss his principles and philosophy with the aid of slides and models of his workshop. He created the geodesic dome, a spherical shell that requires no internal supports, and the dymaxion house, a cylindrical living unit.

He currently is studying the suitability of a geodesic dome for use in the proposed Brooklyn Dodgers baseball park and stadium at the request of Walter O'Malley, president of the team. Among his creations are the geodesic dome covering the court of the Rotunda Building of Ford Motor Co., Dearborn, Mich., and the model dymaxion house at Wichita, Kan.

The Mercury Freight Lines Inc. was not in any way involved in the transaction, which was first announced Thursday. Mercury Express Inc., a subsidiary of the News, was the carrier involved.

G.I. GETS 5 YEARS; THREW FIRECRACKERS AT CIVILIANS

MUNICH, Germany, Dec. 3 (UP) — A 19-year-old United States military policeman was sentenced to five years' imprisonment today for tossing firecrackers at civilians in a joy-ride through Munich.

Pvt. John W. Gorham, of Whitesboro, Tex., was found guilty of aggravated assault, willful and wrongful damage of non-military property and breach of the peace.

Three civilians were reported injured last Oct. 8 by the firecrackers and slivers of broken glass. Gorham was ordered dishonorably discharged from the Army.

BOY, 11, DROWNS IN LEAP INTO PIT TO SAVE HIS DOG

LOMITA, Calif., Dec. 3 (UP)—Police said today an 11-year-old boy drowned when he leaped into water in the bottom of a gravel excavation pit in an attempt to save his dog.

Officers identified the dead boy as William J. Bonersback.

The victim and two friends, Tony Carstens, 12, Torrance, and Mickey Andrade, 11, were walking along the edge of the pit yesterday when the dog fell into the water.

Young Bonersback jumped into the water to rescue his dog, but soon was in trouble himself. Carstens tried to rescue his playmate while Andrade ran for help.

Sheriff's deputies pulled the two boys from the water, but Bonersback was dead on arrival at a hospital. The dog swam to safety.

MAX W. BISHOP

MAX W. BISHOP TO BE ENVOY OF U.S. IN THAILAND

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Dec. 3 (AP)—President Eisenhower today named Max Waldo Bishop to be ambassador to Thailand.

Bishop, originally from Gravette, Ark., is a career diplomat. He will succeed John E. Peurifoy, who was killed in an automobile accident in Thailand last August. The recess appointment will be subject to Senate confirmation after Congress reconvenes next month. Bishop now is a special assistant to Under Secretary of State Herbert Hoover Jr.

Mr. Eisenhower also made a recess appointment of Capt. Rawson Bennett II to be chief of naval research with the rank of rear admiral. Bennett succeeds R. Adm. Frederick R. Furth, who is retiring.

2 G.O.P. LEADERS DIFFER ON PLANS OF EISENHOWER

opinion, "as a country boy from New England," on the President's intentions.

'Has Confidence of Country.'

Mr. Eisenhower, he declared, "has the confidence of every country. Therefore it would be very essential, probably, for the free world, that this great leader, who can weld the thought of the free world into a unit, should continue.

"Personally, I think that that is what will happen."

The President, he said later, was trained at West Point. "And at West Point they teach you to serve your country when your country calls."

Martin said he believed Mr. Eisenhower "could be re-elected with a television campaign."

The President, he continued, is "held in such high esteem that two or three good addresses to the American people would be all he would need to be elected.

Martin and Knowland indicated that they were in broad general agreement on the major points of the Administration's legislative program.

Both listed a highway bill, school construction aid, farm measures and the twin issues of a balanced budget and tax relief as the major matters concerning Mr. Eisenhower as he steps up his work on the program.

Martin confirmed that the Administration is considering a compromise highway bill. He said that he thought Democrats who rejected the Administration bill this year, would accept some form of compromise.

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks has said the Administration now leans to a "pay-as-you go" plan for highway financing, rather than issuing bonds, as was originally proposed.

School Construction.

On school construction, Martin gave no details, but he said there was a "realization that it would be necessary to give more federal money than we have in the past."

The just-concluded White House conference on education has gone on record as favoring increased federal aid to states for school construction.

Martin said he hoped "we can get some farm legislation that will be helpful and constructive to the small farmer."

Knowland mentioned statehood for Hawaii and Alaska as measures he hoped to see recommended in the State of the Union message. He said he favored admission of both territories to the union.

Knowland, mentioned as a possible candidate for his party's presidential nomination, repeated his often-expressed belief that the President should make his intentions known as early as possible.

Mr. Eisenhower, he said, should give the party and the country "ample opportunity" to look over other candidates if he decides not to run again.

Knowland said again he thought the President should declare by the end of January whether he is available, so that other prospective candidates can file for early presidential primaries if he takes himself out of the race.

However, the Senator told reporters he did not mention his views on an early announcement to Mr. Eisenhower at today's meeting.

Martin Disagrees.

Without mentioning Knowland by name, Martin took issue with him. "I don't think we should put any deadline on the President," the House leader said. Mr. Eisenhower, he added, "will know how his health is, and he will know when he wants to speak out."

Asked by the Post-Dispatch if he would announce his own candidacy if Mr. Eisenhower delays making his plans known, Knowland replied that such a question was "premature until the President clarifies his intentions."

He said there might be "differences of opinion" at the G.O.P. convention next August if the President does not run, "but those differences will be worked out at the convention, and I think the party will unite behind the nominees."

Knowland said he would support Mr. Eisenhower "wholeheartedly" if he runs again.

In a cheerful mood on arriving, Mr. Eisenhower waved to a group of school children gathered outside his temporary headquarters in the Gettysburg postoffice.

Martin, a former Speaker of the House, conferred with Mr. Eisenhower for 45 minutes. A short time later, the President went into conference with Knowland.

Rides With Grandchildren.

Two of the President's three grandchildren, David, 7 years old, and Barbara Anne, 6, rode in from the farm with him. They remained inside the limousine, however, and were driven back to the farm, after David, with a broad grin, posed for photographers.

David and Barbara Anne were visiting their grandparents this weekend, but their parents, Maj. and Mrs. John S. Eisenhower, remained at Fort Belvoir, Va., where the major is stationed, with their third child, Susan, 3.

Shortly after Knowland left, Mr. Eisenhower went back to the farm. White House aids said he would stay there the rest of the day and tomorrow and was not planning to go to church.

B-29 CIRCLES 8 HOURS BEFORE IT CRASH-LANDS

TOKYO, Dec. 3 (UP) — The pilot of a United States Air Force B-29 weather plane circled an air base near Tokyo for more than eight hours following a mechanical failure before making a successful crash-landing on the field.

All of the 11 crewmen escaped unharmed, including two who parachuted before Capt. William W. West of Charleston, W.Va., brought the plane down at Yokota air base about 25 miles west of here.

The plane's right landing gear failed to retract after takeoff this morning. West chose to circle the field until the fuel was exhausted.

E. V. LONG IS SEEKING LIEUT.-GOVERNORSHIP

State Senator Announces Candidacy for Democratic Nomination.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 3—State Senator Edward V. Long of Clarksville today announced he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor in the primary election next August.

Long, who is expected to have strong organized political support in this race, said he will file his formal declaration of candidacy with the Secretary of State here Monday.

A wealthy attorney, with banking and farm interests, Long has been a member of the state Senate since 1945. He was Democratic majority leader of that body in 1949, and is presently president pro tem of the Senate. He is head of a number of rural banks and small loan companies in Missouri and Illinois.

In a statement, Long said his experience as a legislator qualified him for lieutenant governor, who presides at sessions of the Senate. He also made a bid for farm and labor support, saying he has always been interested in legislation beneficial to these groups.

If nominated and elected next year, Long is expected to run for Governor in 1960. He had been interested in the 1956 Democratic gubernatorial nomination, but decided against running for that office when Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr. of Jefferson City announced for Governor.

Long is the second Democrat to enter the race for Lieutenant Governor. Former State Representative Tom A. Shockley of Waynesville previously filed in this contest.

In St. Louis, James H. Meredith, who was manager of Senator Stuart Symington's campaign for the Senate in 1952, said he will not be a candidate next year for Democratic National Committeeman for Missouri.

There had been talk in party circles recently that Meredith might be a candidate for the position in opposition to the present national committeeman, Mark R. Holloran of St. Louis, who is expected to seek re-election to a second four-year term at the state Democratic Convention next May.

Meredith said he decided against running for the national committee because he would not have been able to devote full time to the office if he had been elected. He said he hoped that Holloran would be re-elected, and that he would support him if named a delegate to the state convention.

UNIVERSITY CITY STUDENT ELECTED YOUTH CANDIDATE

Michael Long, a senior at University City High School, was elected eastern Missouri's candidate for governor in the Youth in Government Model Legislature at Jefferson City, April 6-7, at a convention yesterday at Downtown Y.M.C.A. of the eastern Missouri district of Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y organizations.

Long will compete with candidates from Kansas City and Springfield at the model legislature. One will be elected governor by the 230 delegates following their campaign speeches in the Missouri House. The model legislature is sponsored by the West Central area of the Y.M.C.A.

AIRPORT BEAMS TO BE FILTERED TO PROTECT BIRDS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP)—Songbirds migrating south next fall are going to have a safer passage. Powerful vertical light beams in the vicinity of airports which have caused thousands of birds to crash to earth are going to be filtered during the migrating period, or turned off when this is possible without endangering air travel.

Secretary of the Interior McKay announced today that the Air Force, the Weather Bureau and numerous other groups were co-operating. The vertical light beams are used to determine the ceiling, or range of visibility and are known as ceilometers.

"The (bird) toll at ceilometer stations in recent years has been alarming," McKay said. "As many as 25,000 birds have perished in a single night at a single airfield.

"It is presumed that the birds are temporarily blinded by the light or that their sense of direction is blunted in some way. The effect is that the birds crash into the ground while going at a high rate of speed and are killed."

Filters have been developed which retain the visible light of the ceilometer and permit only the ultraviolet or "black light" to go upwards for ceiling measurement. This black light has no effect on the migrating birds.

ELMER DOLAN TO BE FREED FROM PRISON NEXT FRIDAY

Elmer Dolan, former St. Louis policeman convicted of lying under oath to a federal grand jury investigating the disappearance of $303,720 of the Greenlease ransom, will be released from the federal prison at Texarkana, Tex., next Friday.

Dolan was sentenced in United States District Court at Kansas City May 21, 1954, and will have served one year, six months and 19 days of a two-year term at the time of his release. Time off was given for good behavior, although his request for parole was turned down last January.

Dolan, a former patrolman, and former Police Lt. Louis Shoulders arrested Carl Austin Hall, kidnap-killer of Bobby Greenlease, and recovered less than half of the $600,000 ransom paid by the Greenlease family to Hall. Shoulders is serving a three-year term for perjury in the case. A total of $1660 of the ransom has been found in Midwestern banks since then, but the person or persons circulating them remains unknown.

TOP ARMY ORDNANCE MAN ASSIGNED TO MISSILE CENTER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (UP)—The Army has assigned one of its top Ordnance Corps officers to Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala. The move may mean the Army is stepping up its guided missile program.

But the only official statement the Army would make today was that Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris, assistant chief of ordnance, has been assigned to Redstone effective Feb. 1.

During the expanded ammunition production program after the Korean war started, Medaris headed the Ordnance Corps's industrial division. His new assignment was interpreted in some quarters as a move to speed-up research and production of guided missiles.

Redstone arsenal gave its name to the Army's biggest guided missile, the 60-foot Redstone rocket that has a range of about 200 miles. It is now in advanced development.

DOG GETS TROPHY FOR SAVING LIFE OF MASTER, 4

GADSDEN, Ala., Dec. 3 (AP)—Frank, a rabbit hound without a pedigree, was awarded a foot-high trophy yesterday for saving the life of his 4-year-old master and playmate, Tommy Richards.

The boy was lost in dense woods for more than 10 hours last Tuesday in sub-freezing weather. When rescuers found him late that night he was asleep with Frank cuddling beside him.

The dog's warm body kept Tommy from freezing, and Frank's howling led searchers to where the boy slept in tall grass and underbrush.

Tommy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Richards. He became lost when he followed two of his father's hunting dogs into the woods.

The trophy was presented by radio station WGAD, Gadsden, and is surmounted with a silver and gold plated hound. The inscription reads, "Presented to Frank for Saving the Life of Tommy Richards, Nov. 29."

Tommy's father said Frank was "just a rabbit hound," until last Wednesday. He agreed that since then, Frank is something special.

DEWEY CALLS ON DULLES, REPORTS ON WORLD TOUR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP)—Thomas E. Dewey, former New York governor and twice a Republican candidate for President, paid an hour-long visit to the State Department today. He reported on his recent trip around the world, officials said.

Dewey shook hands with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and chatted briefly with him. Then, he met for an hour with Dulles's top aid, Under Secretary Herbert Hoover Jr.

Department officials said in response to a question that no politics was discussed. They said Dewey's report was in very general terms and Hoover was glad to have it.

Dulles was on his way out of the department when Dewey arrived, it was learned. Dulles went home today to continue working on a speech he plans to deliver next week.

Dewey was abroad from Sept. 20 to Oct. 25.

Brucker Arrives in Tokyo.

TOKYO, Dec. 3 (AP)—Secretary of the Army Wilber Brucker arrived tonight on a nine-day tour of the Far East. Brucker's military plane was delayed over the Pacific by adverse weather.

U.S. TRAFFIC CZAR IN CABINET URGED AS SAFETY MOVE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP) —Charles Adler Jr., a Baltimore inventor of safety devices, suggested to President Eisenhower yesterday that a federal traffic czar of Cabinet rank be named to make the highways safer.

Asserting the "failure of S-D (safe driving) day calls for heroic action," Adler said in a telegram sent to the President at Gettysburg: "We cannot blame the poor motorist for the failure of S-D day; he just hasn't been trained for the job."

Adler said a traffic czar such as he proposed "should provide and enforce proper driver education and training. This training should include the complete knowledge of the car, of the road ahead and of the driver's own abilities and limitataions."

HELP NEEDY HANDLE OWN PROBLEMS, OFFICIAL URGES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP) —Secretary of Health Marion B. Folsom told welfare workers today to help the needy handle their own problems.

Folsom said there was convincing evidence of the value of local welfare services aimed at helping families getting relief funds to become self supporting.

In a speech at a round table conference of the American Public Welfare Association, he mentioned Allegheny county (Pittsburgh) Pennsylvania and New York City where self-support programs have worked well. Allegheny county saved $27,960 in 11 months in public assistance expenditures by its program and New York saved about $616,000 a year in three years, Folsom said.

New York Finishes New Code

By VIRGIL G. BAKER
Post-Dispatch Real Estate Editor

NEW YORK CITY—Following a public hearing in Albany next Wednesday and one here next Thursday, both expected to be perfunctory, the New York State Building Code Commission will promulgate, in its entirety, a professionally developed, performance-type building code for the state. The writing of the code has taken five and one-half years. It becomes law only as enacted into ordinance by the various governmental subdivisions of the state, but more than 174 communities already have enacted into law preliminary sections of the code which were completed in 1953 and 1954.

Promulgation of the complete code and its anticipated adoption, intact, throughout the state is significant not only to the state of New York and its communities, but to the nation as a whole. Already, adjoining states are thinking in terms of the New York code and are likely to follow suit. The pattern set may well be spread all across the nation in another 10 to 20 years.

The code is the first of its kind to be promulgated by a state government on a state-wide basis .

First Full-Time Staff.

The New York State Building Code Commission is the first to establish and operate a full-time, fully-paid staff of code writers, which will be in continued service, beyond the initial code writing, as a court of interpretive reference for enforcement officials and builders throughout the state, as a clearing house for the certification (as meeting code standards) of materials, products and methods which may at any time be introduced for use within the state, and as a continuing code writing body to keep the originally designed rules and regulations abreast constantly of construction developments.

First attempts to standardize and codify building practices and procedures were those instituted in 1905 by the Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., an organization financed by private enterprise insurance companies with the idea of curtailing huge fire losses and loss of life through fires. Prompted both by altruistic and hard-economic selfish interests, the insurance companies have continued to sponsor the Underwriters Laboratories through the years and most materials and items like electrical equipment today carry the UL label and fire-rating. But the use of the code and the laboratory research has been sought mostly on voluntary basis by manufacturers and processors through the years and, even though building codes have been written in many cities and towns, a relatively small percentage have made the Underwriters Code, as such, a part of their regulations.

Some States Try.

In more recent years, the Building Officials Conference of America, with A. H. Baum, St. Louis building commissioner, as chairman, have written a "Basic Building Code" and attempted to set up a continuing organization for research and certification on a nationwide, but voluntary, basis, and promulgation of this code was followed by attempts to integrate its terms and those of other voluntary, but regional, code writing bodies, i.e. the Pacific Coast, the Southern, etc. The cost of such procedure is tremendous, however, and problems involved have not yet been fully resolved. There has been some outright adoption of this codification and some adoption of it with local modifications.

In recent years, too, some other states have had some notion of trying to do what New York has now done, but have undertaken it, says Norbert Brown, public Relations Officer of the New York Building Code Commission, with only token appropriations and not always with a completely professional approach.

Writing of the New York State Code was undertaken under a law enacted April 21, 1949, under the aegis of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and has been carried to fulfillment under Gov. Averell Harriman. Enactment of the law followed a report of a joint legislative committee that "many local codes, in view of the rapid advances of the art of building, were too inflexible and antiquated to keep apace of developments in this industry." The committee found that "owing to their inflexibility, many obsolete codes prevented the use of newly developed methods and materials which make construction cheaper without sacrifice of safety, and many imposed standards higher than the minimum required for safety, thereby inflicting a cost burden bearing no reasonable relation to the degree of safety achieved."

Would Cut Costs.

In order to "effect reduction in excessive costs of building construction attributable to obsolete and complex building law, ordinances, rules and regulations, and in order to obtain a more up-to-date statewide uniform set of rules" the law was enacted, the commission set up and money regularly appropriated for its operation.

Brigadier General Edward J. McGrew Jr. is chairman of the commission, George Bain Cummings, president of the American Institute of Architects, is vice chairman, and M. William Bray, a former lieutenant governor, and William Lescaze, are commissioners. The commission has a full-time, fully-paid staff of 25 in addition to the com-

Designers' Perspective of Laclede Gas Company's Service Building, Now Going Up

This is a perspective sketch from Architects Russell, Mullgardt, Schwarz, Van Hoefen of building and grounds of the Laclede Gas Company's $1,000,000 Northwest Operating Center, on which construction is in progress at 6400 Graham road in Berkeley City. The Frazier-Davis Construction Co. is general contractor.

Gas Area Workshop Job Begun

Work has been started at 6400 Graham road, Berkeley City, on construction of a Northwest Area Operating Center for the Laclede Gas Company. Cost, the company reported, has been estimated at $1,000,000.

Buildings with floor area of about 50,000 square feet are to be erected, to house a service department, construction and maintenance departments, garage and repair shops, a welding shop and warehouse facilities. The center will provide storage area for equipment, as well as parking facilities for employes' automobiles.

Robert W. Otto, president of Laclede, said: "Completion of this center will be another major step in the company's plan for decentralization of service operations. Through decentralization we will be able to give our customers quicker service, since the necessary equipment and crews will be stationed closer to locations where they are needed. If present westerly expansion continues, another such facility may be desirable in the future, but construction of the Northwest Operating Center will complete our re-districting process at this time.

Formerly, all of Laclede's requests for service were answered from its operating center at 3950 Forest Park boulevard. A second center already has been established in Shrewsbury.

The buildings, being located on a 10-acre site at Graham road and the Wabash Railroad in Berkeley City, are contemporary in design. Steel frame is expected to be erected by Jan. 1. It was designed using a system called "continuous action" which reduces the normal tonnage required in such buildings.

Exterior materials are to be glare-reducing glass and porcelain enamel steel set in aluminum frames, together with light, warm gray brick panels.

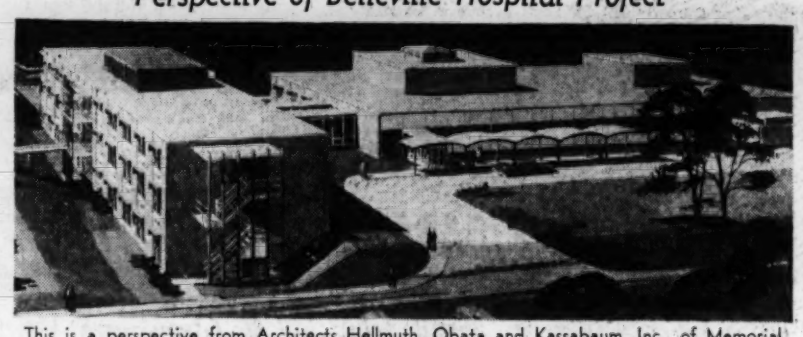
Structural glazed tile is to be used extensively for interior partitions requiring rough usage; the balance is to be painted plaster, in gay colors.

Air conditioning and radiant heating are to be extensively used. The floor of the garage and repair shops, shower rooms and the periphery floor areas of the office spaces are to be radiantly heated.

Electro-static air filters will be used in the air conditioning system to provide tempered air during the cold season and cooling in the summer. The boiler, heaters and several engines furnishing power will be gas fired. A separate ventilating system will handle air and fumes from an underfloor exhaust system in the garage, the paint and welding shops.

Russell Mullgardt Schwarz Van Hoefen are the architects; Otto E. Heinicke & Co., structural engineer; Ferris & Hamig, mechanical engineer, and the general contractor is the Frazier-Davis Construction Co.

Perspective of Belleville Hospital Project



This is a perspective from Architects Hellmuth, Obata and Kassabaum, Inc., of Memorial Hospital for construction of which formal ground breaking has been set for 1:30 p.m. today at Bellevue Park in Belleville, Ill.

Ceremony To Start Hospital

Formal groundbreaking is to be at 1:30 p.m. today at a site adjoining Bellevue Park in Belleville for the start of construction of a $1,949,750 general hospital of 154-bed capacity.

Structurally and functionally, the new building will strike up a new pattern in hospital design and construction in this area, following horizontal (rather than vertical) makeup to eliminate the need of extensive elevator traffic, and involving use of skin-panel walls.

Presiding over the groundbreaking ceremony will be Oliver C. Joseph, president of the Oliver C. Joseph Co. of Belleville, who is the president of the Protestant Hospital Builders Club, Inc., the organization which is sponsoring construction of the new hospital. Also taking part in the ceremony will be the chairman of the club's building fund, Walt Marsh of the Marsh Stencil Machine Co., W. A. Schickedanz, and other leaders of the drive which raised funds for the building.

The new hospital, which will provide a total of 154 beds, has attracted attention in architectural circles because of its "flattened out" design. The architects, the St. Louis firm of Hellmuth, Obata and Kassabaum, Inc., with Charles E. King, associate, and Isadore and Zachary Rosenfield, hospital consultants, have taken a departure from the usual up and down, elevator serviced grouping of hospital facilities, and instead placed the medical core, the maternity and obstetrical unit and the bulk of the patients rooms all on one floor.

This design permits great freedom in arranging the various medical, nursing laboratory and administrative facilities for maximum convenience to doctors, nurses, patients and visitors, the designers pointed out. At the same time, the cost is kept down by the elimination of multi-story construction and elevators. Total construction cost of the building will be $1,949,750, including the ventilating - cooling - heating system. Air conditioning can be provided for patients' rooms, with individual under-window fan units using circulating hot water in winter, cooled water in summer.

Another feature of the all-on-

St. Louis Firm Directs Capitol Reassessments

Roy Wenzlick & Co., real estate analyist, of St. Louis, has begun supervision of a complete reassessment for tax valuation of all property in the District of Columbia, seat of the nation's capitol, a spokesman of the firm reports.

The company is writing the manual of procedure and preparing the forms and work sheets, is training the field force, the calculators; will function in special capacity in evaluation of difficult parcels of the real estate in the district, and will produce the final report.

The firm is doing a similar job for Jasper county, Missouri, in connection with revaluations recently ordered by the state tax commission. In that county are Joplin and Carthage.

Ruggeri's Restaurant Is Doubled

Not all the finishing touches have been applied yet, but Ruggeri's restaurant at the southeast corner of Edwards and Elizabeth avenues (on the Hill in Southwest St. Louis) has been doubled in size, with huge new kitchen facilities as well as dining areas. There have been a couple of trial runs and, of course, the original restaurant has been in continuous operation during the expansion. But the management anticipates that everything will be in top shape and all complete for New Year's. The whole restaurant will handle 650 diners at a time. It handled 570 on Thanksgiving day.

Huge new kitchen facilities in the new section of the restaurant have stainless steel equipment, quarry-tiled floor areas, walls finished ceiling high in yellow ceramic tile. There are separate, huge walk-in refrigeration rooms for meats, dairy goods, frozen foods, produce, fish and a special preparation room between the refrigerators and the kitchen for processing the foods as needed.

A new dining room, which adjoins the original main dining room of the restaurant and may be joined to it by opening of four huge folding doors, will seat 350 persons. The new room, itself, may be divided by folding door into two areas, one to seat 175, the other 125 persons, when there are smaller private groups.

In the new dining area there is wall-to-wall carpeting with a sunburst in a diamond pat-

Ed Rippy Buys Boat Company

Automobile Dealer Ed Rippy has purchased the St. Louis Boat & Motor Co., which was owned and operated for 23 years by the late Lawrence C. Wickett, he reports, in a transaction involving investment of more than $250,000. Purchase was made from Wickett's widow.

Included in the transaction was the business headquarters and display store at 2801 North Broadway (at St. Louis avenue), the Venetian Yacht Harbor at Portage des Sioux, on Alton Lake, Missouri, and an inventory of more than 50,000 maritime items, ranging from very small boats and supplies to a 54-foot ocean-going yacht.

The harbor includes maintenance and repair service installations, a two-way, short-wave radio installation for communication with boats on the river.

Rippy plans to conduct the boat and motor company as an operation entirely separate from his Chrysler-Plymouth agency at 5825 Delmar boulevard and will have Robert Gleason, who was with Wickett many years, as manager of the operation.

A display of small boats is to be installed at Rippy's auto agency property on Delmar as a means of promotion of the business to West End traffic.

County Realty Board Plans Its Holiday Party

The St. Louis County Real Estate Board is to have its annual Christmas Party at 6 p.m. Wednesday at Belvedere Joe's, Brentwood boulevard at Eager road.

Jean Mason, chairman of the entertainment committee, has arranged for a quartet and other entertainment from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m. The party is the fifth annual observance by the St. Louis County board.

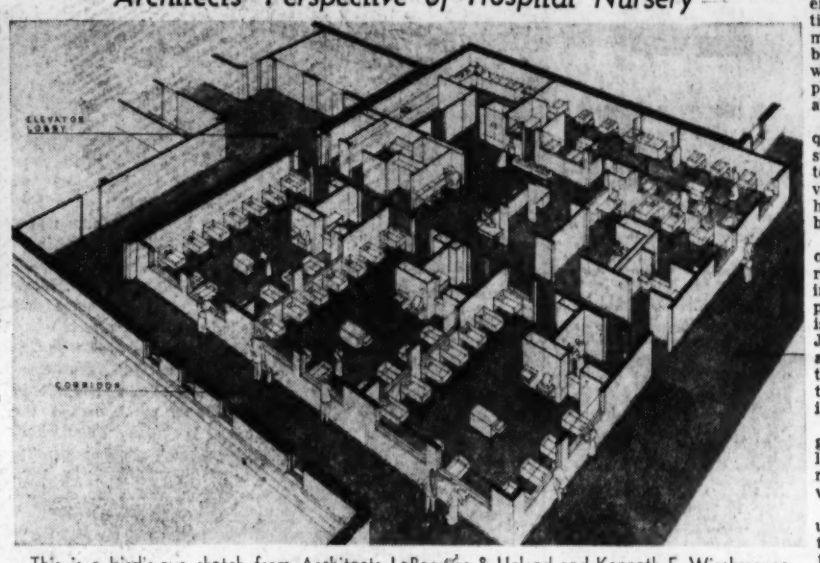
New Sales Manager

Nate Feldman has been named sales manager of the St. Louis County Realty Co., 7015 Olive Street road, the company reports. Feldman has had five years of experience in brokerage in St. Louis county, the last two as assistant sales manager of a large subdivider and builder's brokerage division. Under his direction, St. Louis County Realty is planning an expansion of its operations.

Southwest Hilltop Restaurant Doubled in Size

This is Ruggeri's restaurant, at the southeast corner of Edwards and Elizabeth streets, as it looks since being doubled in size. Although most of the new work does not show, the front (along Edwards) has been doubled in length and new glass doors have been installed at entrance. Capacity now is 650 diners at a time.

Architects' Perspective of Hospital Nursery



This is a bird's-eye sketch from Architects LeBeaume & Unland and Kenneth E. Wischmeyer of the new nursery to be built on the third floor of St. Luke's Hospital. Bassinets will total 36, separated into three major newborn areas of 12 bassinets each. In addition, a special section will accommodate 12 to 14 premature infants in incubators. The nursery will open off the new $2,000,000 Fowler Memorial Wing, which will house the new labor and delivery rooms.

St. Luke's Lets New Contracts

Contracts to provide labor and delivery room facilities and a new nursery for new born babies at St. Luke's Hospital, 5535 Delmar boulevard, were awarded yesterday to the Woermann Construction Co. Construction of the new facilities will be the next step in the hospital's current expansion and modernization program.

Eugene F. Williams Jr., president of St. Luke's board of directors, said in reporting the letting of contracts that money to meet the cost of this new obstetrical division is being sought among friends of the hospital in a continuance of the fund-raising efforts which since 1951 have brought in gifts and pledges totalling more than $1,481,000.

The new units, which will be air-conditioned, will be on the third floor of the hospital. The labor and delivery suite will occupy the west half of the floor in the new Fowler Wing, and the nursery will be located in a modernized section of the old building.

Three labor rooms, three delivery rooms, and an examination room will make up the major segments of the labor and delivery room area. The nursery will have 36 bassinets in three separate sections of 12 bassinets each. In addition, there will be facilities for 12 to 14 premature infants in incubators.

The maternity division will be on the same floor, but in the older part of the hospital.

The old maternity division and nursery will be converted into bedrooms and facilities for general treatment.

The architects are LaBeaume & Unland and Kenneth E. Wischmeyer.

Subdivision Opened In U. City Area

Formal opening has been planned for today of a small subdivision of homes called Park Side because it's across from Ruth Park in University City. The street on which the homes are being erected is called Crixdale.

The houses designed by Architect Meyer Loomstein, are being built by the Reliable Investment Co. and promoted by the Henry H. Haffner Realty Co.

Three-bedroom ranchers are the rule, with air-conditioning optional.

Agency Moves

The Taylor-Hitt Realty & Construction Co., Inc., reports having moved its offices from 7247 Olive street to a street level location at 8427 Olive. This is in University City.

The company's operating space was tripled by the move, providing for expansion of its brokerage, subdivision development and building divisions.

St. Louis Area Group Promotes Capital Hotel

A syndicate of St. Louis area promoters has obtained an option to lease a tract of ground in Jefferson City for 99 years with the idea of building a new hotel in the capital.

J. Harvey Hyams, a Clayton real estate broker, has been instrumental in obtaining the option to lease. With him in the proposal are Paul Klingensmith of the St. Louis architectural firm of Paul Klingensmith & Associates; John McCarthy of the McCarthy Brothers Construction Co. of St. Louis, and John J. McAttee, a lawyer.

Hyams said last week the group is in the midst of promoting equity capital here and first mortgage money (through a New York concern) and hopes to get started building by early next summer. Construction would require about a year.

A 12-story building of about 32,000 square feet of space, with 184 guest rooms, smart first-floor shops, dining facilities, office space, garage, other amenities of modern hotels, is proposed. Construction cost has been estimated at $4,000,000.

The site has been optioned from Hugh Stephens of Jefferson City and the city council there has instituted a zoning change to make possible construction of a building of the type proposed. The height was in question.

The ground involved in the deal is at a corner of Madison street and Capitol Avenue, not far from the Governor's mansion and the existing Governor Hotel. The hotel, to be named "The Jeffersonian" would occupy ground now partly occupied by property housing Farm Bureau offices and partly by a structure recently vacated by the Von Hoffman Press of St. Louis. The Farm Bureau has reported plans to build a new building for its own occupancy on Highway 50, farther west.

Hyams said preliminary plans call for a 48 by 72-foot ballroom on the top floor, with seating capacity of 800. Hotel and office areas in the building would be air-conditioned.

Church Acquires Added Acreage For New Parish

Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter purchased for the church last week 3.04 acres of ground at the southeast corner of Ballas and Rayner roads as an addition to an adjoining seven and one-half acres purchased earlier at the northeast corner of Ballas and Dougherty Ferry roads, site of church and school of the newly developing St. Gerard Majella parish.

Grading already was under way on the originally acquired site and now has been extended onto the newly acquired ground, which lies much lower than the main tract.

The most recently acquired ground lies just below the Hue Vista subdivision, on the bluffs to the north. Grantors were Alvin G. and Helen R. Huber.

Negotiations were carried on by the Robert E. Lynch real estate agency, which said the lower ground, now being filled somewhat by dirt being taken off the acreage at the Ballas-Dougherty Ferry corner, probably would be used as playground adjoining the proposed church and school.

Capital City Promotion

This is a recently developed sketch of a 184-room hotel which a syndicate of St. Louis area men propose to erect on a site at Madison street and Capitol avenue in Jefferson City, which the syndicate has under option for long term lease from Hugh Stephens of Jefferson City. Hotel would be called "The Jeffersonian."

Home Plan Contest in University

The traditional home planning contest conducted for architectural students at Washington University in connection with the annual spring show of the Home Builders' Association of Greater St. Louis is to be started next Wednesday afternoon, Julius Seidel, chairman for the contest, reports.

New procedure has been prepared this year. Initially, a panel of housing experts is to appear before the students Wednesday afternoon to explain the nature of the contest and discuss the outlook in home planning. A group, including panel members, L. J. Steffens, chief architect of the Federal Housing Administration here; Arthur J. Kerr, architect of the Veterans Administration; Samuel Ladd, builder; Clarence Wilson, builder; Architects Fred Kemp and Robert Elkington, is to meet for lunch at Medart's restaurant, then go to the school.

The contest this year is to be open only to fourth year students in the university's architectural school (they're not seniors, they still have a fifth year to go before graduating) and they'll get academic credit for participation.

This year a model subdivision of rolling ground has been prepared in miniature and students will draw lots by lot within the area as the site for which to design their contest home. The subdivision model and models of the designs submitted in the contest will become an exhibit in the home show, which will again be at the Arena, Feb. 4 to 12 inclusive.

General Show Chairman R. C. Higginbotham said yesterday some 54,000 square feet of space will be used for the whole show and that less than half a dozen display spots remain open for would-be exhibitors.

Three full-size homes are expected again to be built upon the Arena front lawn as part of the show.

Accountants Move

The firm of Peter Hochschild & Co., which had been at 520 North Grand, has changed its name and moved to new offices at 7933 Clayton road, the Post-Dispatch is informed. The new name is Hochschild, Bloom & Co.

Partners in the firm are Peter Hochschild, 8125 Colmar, Clayton, and Melvin M. Bloom, 1135 Watts, University City.

Realty Stag Party

The North St. Louis Real Estate Salesmen's Association is to have its annual holiday stag party at the Carling Brewery Co.'s rathskeller, 3607 North Florissant, on Wednesday, Dec. 14.

Arrangements to attend the party may be made only through members of the committee, Mike A. Londoff of the Londoff Realty Co., chairman; Elmer Held of the E. Held Realty Co., James Smith of the Fred J. Bach Realty Co., Clarence Erhardt of Erhardt & Son Realty Co.

Sketch shows proposed plant as envisioned by Architect Fred S. McNeill. William H. & Nelson Cunliff Co. is general contractor. Structure, to contain 55,000 square feet of space, is expected to be ready for use by fall of 1956. It will be air conditioned and have special humidity controls for printing processes. Multi-color presses, platemaking camera department, trucks for paper handling, other modern equipment will be installed. Company now is in a four-floor shop, will be on one level in new one.

Colonial Center New Furniture Store Southwest

A new furniture store called "Colonial Center, Inc." has been established and opened at 5378 Southwest avenue to deal in furniture of early American styling.

The store is an enterprise of Dorothy Kardell and Eulalia Paddock, who undertook a sort of do-it-yourself reconditioning of an old building that had once been a barbershop and pool room, later a warehouse. More complete remodeling of the property is anticipated next year.

Establishment of the store was undertaken following the closing of the DiFranco Colonial Manor (across the street from the new store) which Miss Kardell had managed for two years before the DiFrancos decided to quit furniture for automobiles.

"I just couldn't see the store pass out of existence," said Miss Kardell, "so we have achieved a successor to it, just across the street."

New Food Market to Open in Edwardsville

This is the National Food Center's new store at 400 St. Louis avenue in Edwardsville, Ill., scheduled to be opened formally at 9 a.m. Tuesday. Arthur Rathert of St. Louis was the architect, Irvin Goldfarb the builder. This unit is tenth to be added to the Food Center chain here during 1955.

The National Food Center chain will open its' tenth new store of the year in this area at 9 a.m. next Tuesday when the doors are unlocked on a new building at 400 St. Louis avenue, Edwardsville, Ill., and business begins there. The building was designed by St. Louis Architect Arthur Rathert and erected by Irvin Goldfarb.

The store has 10,000 square feet of space, mostly sales area. The front is all glass and a large buff-colored pylon carries the store's insignia. The whole building is air-conditioned, fluorescent lighting is used throughout and both entrance and exit doors are automatic.

Mercury vapor lamps will illuminate the paved parking area for 40 cars.

The meat department is all self-service. The office will collect gas, phone and power bills, issue money orders, and the general grocery has the usual contemporary complement of staples and fancy goods and household items.

Harold Bahn, 2716 Mayville road, Collinsville, has been named to manage the store; James Carnaghi, 419 Roanoke road, Edwardsville, the meat department.

National has several other stores under construction in St. Louis, St. Louis county suburbs, and one in Belleville, Ill. There are now seven stores in the Illinois area adjacent to St. Louis.

Realty Manager

Joseph Sperrer Jr. has been appointed real estate manager of National Food Center Stores. In this capacity Sperrer will be in charge of all existing properties as well as the leasing of additional Food stores to carry out the expansion plans of National Food Center, reports W. H. Sievert, branch manager, here.

Three-Way Deal On Homes in West St. Louis County

A chain of real estate transactions was set off recently when Gertie E. and Claude Black bought from John W. Hutchinson a five-acre tract with a five-room house at Grover, Mo., through the Schnarr Realty Co. of Grover (Manchester road).

Hutchinson then bought from Lindell F. and Marie D. Hinch a house on a one-acre lot on Reinke road, through the same dealer. Mr. and Mrs. Hinch then bought, also through the same agency, a new three-bedroom house at No. 25 Larry drive, in the new Tara Heights subdivision of Ellisville.

J. Edward Schnarr has recently been joined in the operation of his company by his son, J. Harold Schnarr, who for many years had been employed in the St. Louis County Probate Court, in Clayton.

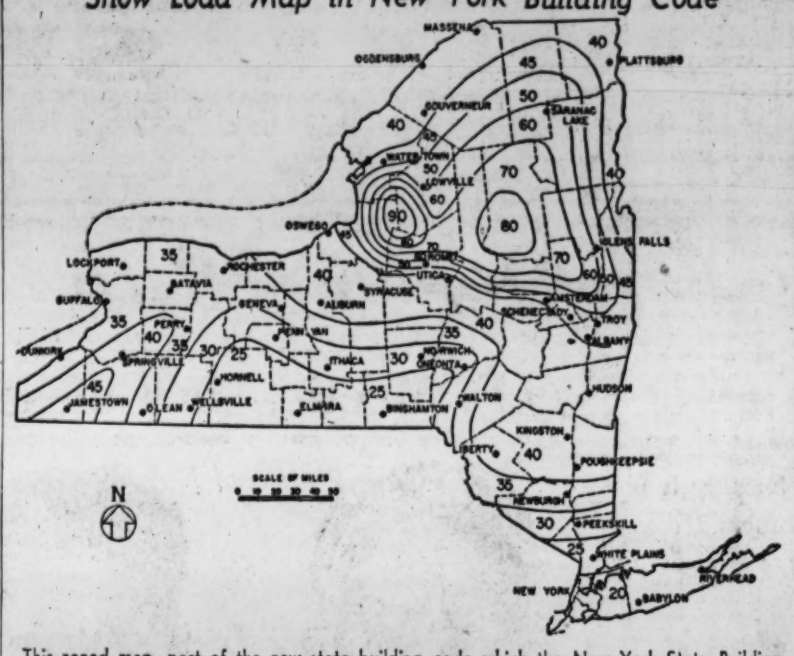
Snow Load Map in New York Building Code



This zoned map, part of the new state building code which the New York State Building Code Commission is soon to promulgate, together with a chart keyed to the zones, will permit builders in the state to know at a glance how heavy a snow load may be expected in any part of the state and how strong they'll have to build a roof, whether flat, or up to half-pitch, or more, to stand up under such a prospective load. See code story.

New York's Code Ready

missioners themselves), including six in the administrative staff; 12 on the technical staff, and 17 on the general office staff. A floor of offices is maintained at 1740 Broadway.

Cost of the operation has averaged about $350,000 a year. Procedures have included some extensive research of a nature that will not soon have to be repeated, however. For instance, the most recently completed section of the code, that dealing with general construction, contains a technically developed "Snow Map" of the entire state, which gives builders a "weather zoning" basis upon which accurately to determine snow-load requirements. Tables in the code related to zone figures on the map tell a builder how much snow weight he'll have to prepare a building to carry anywhere in the state, whether flat roof, or up to one half-pitch or steeper be used. Tables in the code also provide predetermined wind load factors for walls, eaves, cornices, towers, masts, antennas, etc, throughout the state.

Many Public Hearings.

To get some of the code into service before completion of the entire document, the commission completed and made available to the communities on Dec. 15, 1953, that part of the code applicable to multiple dwellings, and on Feb. 15, 1954, that part of the code dealing with one- and two-family dwellings.

In developing the code the writing staff went out to the people, personally and by mailings, in order to come up with a completely workable instrument. And every possible bit of information bearing upon any phase of construction was scanned. There were more than 4200 public hearings over the state. Total mailing in connection with seeking information or setting forth decisions with regard to the code has averaged some 15,000 pieces in each instance, mail going to public officials, trade unions, trade associations, architects, engineers, builders, research agencies, etc. Initial procedure included, among other things, examination of all the codes and rules and regulations in effect in cities, towns and villages throughout the state.

In 1950, the Commission found 334 communities with some kind of building regulations, most of them in bad shape. Of the total, 89 known to exist were out of print, hadn't been collected under one cover, or were otherwise unavailable to those who were supposed to make use of them. Of 245 codes studied, only 66 had been revised since they first were made. Of 58 known to have been in force more than 20 years, only 14 had ever been revised. Standards accepted by architectural and engineering professions for structural strength, fire resistance and other basic requirements were found to be largely ignored in the existing codes.

Educational Campaign.

Extensive support from the industry generally was given to the commission through the code writing period, only one instance of resistance and attempt to offset commission procedure through political pressure being encountered. This, said Brown was successfully resisted by the commission and the protestant afterward made promotional use of the fact that its materials were equalling or bettering code requirements.

A continuing educational campaign was carried on throughout the years of code writing procedure. Those parts of the code dealing with residential construction were completed first because, the commission found, 90 per cent of all projects for which permits were issued were of residential nature. With more than 174 communities (20 cities, 61 towns, more than 90 villages) having already made the residential sections of the code community law by resolutions of adoption, more than 40 per cent of New York state communities now are under the code. Those having accepted the residential regulations are expected quickly to follow with adoption of the last section of the code, and educational procedure will continue to bring all other communities of the state under the code as a whole.

Neighbor Drops In.

As for other states in the nation? Recentlya man came in and asked for a copy of the code for use in building a house (they're available without charge to anyone in the state) and accidentally revealed he was from Connecticut. Told the code didn't apply there, the applicant said "the building commissioner in my Connecticut town told me if I'd build according to the New York Code, he'd be happy to approve it." He got the copy of the code, as would a New Yorker. The commission also publishes, for a price of $3, a code manual, about an 80-page looseleaf volume that pictures and tells some acceptable ways (not necessarily the only acceptable ways) in which code regulations may be applied.

New Hospital

one-floor design is provision for a landscaped court adjoining the visitors' lobby. This court will be attractively planted, and will include a small private meditation garden.

The wall construction, also a relatively new procedure in this area, will be of porcelain enamel skin panels on metal studs, backed by light-weight, insulating concrete, to be sprayed against the inside face of the panels and finished on the interior surface with insulating and accoustical plaster over metal lath. In some parts of the building, interior wall surfaces will be faced with Birch panels.

Contracts for construction of the hospital were signed Nov. 30 with Robert Behrmann Construction Co. of Belleville, general contractors, and Phillips Electric Co. and Rust Contracting and Supply Co. as electrical and plumbing contractors, also of Belleville. Structural engineer is John P. Nix, St. Louis; mechanical and electrical engineer, John D. Falvey, St. Louis; utility engineers, Horner & Shiffrin, St. Louis; kitchen consultant, Frank T. Hilliker, St. Louis.

If Eisenhower Doesn't Run

Big Question Hangs Over G.O.P. Meeting in Chicago

Chief Justice Warren 'Next Best,' but Not Thought Likely to Accept Nomination—Vice President Nixon Has Good Chance—Politicians Still Hope President Will Be a Candidate for Re-election.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.

BEHIND a mask of calculated optimism worn by the men and women attending the Republican National Committee meeting this week could be perceived, without much difficulty, the gravest concern over the predicament in which the Republican party finds itself. That predicament is expressed in the search for the answers to two questions:

"Will President Eisenhower run for re-election in 1956? If not, who will head the national ticket?"

The concern could be measured by reports that even in private the committee members were not talking about the most serious party quandary since the early days of the Eisenhower boomlet, when no one could say with authority whether the five-star general would seek the Republican nomination he later won in this city, in 1952.

Rather, those at the two-day session, called to perfect arrangements for the San Francisco National Convention in August, seemed ready and willing to accept the optimistic lines National Chairman Leonard W. Hall worked indefatigably to promote.

The genial Hall told the committee members he was much encouraged after a visit with President Eisenhower at Gettysburg on Monday, and he repeated that in his opinion Mr. Eisenhower will run again "if he feels he is able."

Seeking to inspire as much hope as possible, Hall reported the President "was informed about the campaign, concerned about it, and had a real continuing interest in it." He has conveyed the impression to the President, it became clear, that next year's campaign will not be as strenuous as that of 1952 because it will involve a much wider use of television.

HALL OVERLOOKED no opportunity to try to pep up the matter-of-fact gathering. At one session he even sang a couple of ditties related to campaigning.

It was open to question whether Hall was successful in his efforts. For example, he opened a breakfast meeting Thursday by asking gaily: "Is everybody happy?"

Mild hand clapping was the response. No one said yes; in fact, no one said anything.

It is generally agreed Republicans could again capture the White House if they had a well President Eisenhower as candidate, and many politicians think a Republican victory would be likely if the President runs again, despite the handicap of the health issue. The President suffered a coronary thrombosis Sept. 24. He is 65 years old.

There is much doubt, however, whether any Republican candidate other than Mr. Eisenhower could attract enough independent votes to win. And the fact is, of course, that neutral observers feel fairly confident the President will decide to retire to private life when his term is up Jan. 20, 1957.

No one knows when the Chief Executive will announce his decision, whatever it is. He is to have a thorough physical examination in late January or early February, probably after the Jan. 20 "Salute to Eisenhower" dinners at which the party hopes to raise $1,000,000. Hall said a delay in the President's announcement until early March would not be harmful to candidates for any offices, an assertion with which some politicians do not agree.

Within limits, Eisenhower supporters would prefer a delay in the announcement if the President's answer is to be negative, as indicated by Hall's position on the early March period. The Administration program would have a better chance in Congress if hope remained that Mr. Eisenhower would be a candidate, and the Eisenhower wing of the Republican party would have a better chance of retaining control of party machinery.

Although potential presidential candidates may fret over the uncertainty, it is not likely anyone will declare himself before the presidential announcement. Senator William F. Knowland of California, the Republican Minority Leader in the upper chamber and a possible candidate, has been advocating an "early" announcement, however.

Assuming Mr. Eisenhower does not run, the candidate, whoever he is, will most certainly have a better chance if he has the indorsement and help of the President. In a message to the National Committee meeting Thursday the President promised to "do everything in my power" to help the party next year. That help could be invaluable.

IF THE PRESIDENT RETIRES, what other Republican could step up to take his place as a candidate? The truth is, as the Republicans know only too well, that the party has no substitute of stature who seems to be available.

The only possible candidate around whom the party could rally is Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States and former Governor of California.

But Warren is unwilling, and the next best bet as it looks today becomes Vice President Richard M. Nixon. At a lower level stand Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., United States Ambassador to the United Nations; Harold Stassen, Mr. Eisenhower's Assistant on Disarmament Problems; Gov. Christian Herter of Massachusetts; Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey; Senator John W. Bricker of Ohio, and Knowland.

Warren cannot wholly be eliminated from consideration because of the intense pressure to which he might conceivably be subjected, but those who know him would be greatly surprised if he agreed under any circumstances to step down from the bench.

The Chief Justice has said that he would not be a candidate and that he is "increasingly happy" in his work on the court, for which he has a high regard. His resignation to re-enter politics would be a serious blow to the court's prestige, especially when the country faces no national emergency.

In addition to that, Warren is 64 years old and when he was named to the high court Oct. 5, 1953, he achieved a life-long ambition—financial security for himself and his family. That is something he never enjoyed in all his years of California office-holding and the pursuit of it became important to him.

Warren is regarded as a liberal and attracted Democratic as well as Republican support in California, where he served three successful terms as Governor. He was the candidate for Vice President when Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York ran for the presidency in 1948, and was his state's "favorite son" candidate for President at the 1952 convention.

Dewey, incidentally, who is now practicing law in New York, has received some mention as a presidential possibility, but it is considered unlikely he could live down his political past. He tried three times to obtain the presidential nomination; twice, in 1944 and 1948, he succeeded, only to lose the elections to President Roosevelt and then to President Truman.

It was Dewey, however, who engineered the strategy by which Gen. Eisenhower snatched the 1952 nomination from the late Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio and there are Dewey supporters in powerful positions in the Eisenhower Administration.

BY A PROCESS OF ELIMINATION it is Nixon who, second to Mr. Eisenhower, is now the leading candidate for the nomination. He is 43 years old, personally attractive to many voters, vigorous, and a tough campaigner. He served four years in the House and two years in the Senate and has been given more responsibility in the last three years than any Vice President in history. This he has discharged creditably.

During the President's illness he has been conducting Cabinet and National Security Council meetings and has traveled widely abroad on presidential assignments, shaking hands and winning friends. Possibly no politician of his years has ever had such varied governmental experience, and this is a decided asset.

The "old pros" distrust Nixon's political motives, however. They regard him as a man who has gone too far too fast. President Eisenhower has referred to him as "my boy" and has heaped praises on him, but no one knows whether the President's support stops at Nixon the Vice President or would carry over to Nixon the presidential candidate.

CHIEF JUSTICE WARREN
The pressure may increase.

VICE PRESIDENT NIXON
Still "my boy"?

Nixon would be a weak and vulnerable candidate. Democrats hate him and will never forgive his charges in the 1954 mid-term campaign that they were soft on Communism. This is important because Republicans cannot win on Republican votes alone; Mr. Eisenhower attracted independent and Democratic votes as well as Republican. Nixon would be attacked with the utmost violence.

The Vice President is an exceedingly shrewd and ambitious politician, however, and he will not be taken lightly by anyone who remembers how he extricated himself from disaster in the fall of 1952. It was disclosed that Nixon was receiving private financial aid from a group of fellow Californians, a revelation that might well have destroyed him. Instead of succumbing he took his case to the nation, and regardless of how one may evaluate his famous television appearance, it worked. Gen. Eisenhower, who was under pressure to pitch Nixon, became his ardent admirer from that time on.

Should the party settle on Nixon, the framework for a build up would be at hand. When the President was stricken the inner White House circle, led by Sherman Adams, the Assistant to the President, closed ranks and prevented Nixon from taking over some of the authority a Vice President might have been expected to exercise under the circumstances. If Nixon was the leading candidate for the nomination and had the support of the Eisenhower partisans, opportunities for building him up would be unlimited.

There are two curious sidelights to a possible Nixon nomination. In 1946, Republicans in Nixon's California congressional district found themselves so hard-up for a candidate they placed an advertisement in a newspaper. A friend of Nixon's sent him a clipping and Nixon decided to offer himself. He ran for Congress and won. Now the national party may soon be in somewhat the same predicament as the California Republicans, but it is hardly in a position to solve the problem by means of a "help wanted" advertisement.

A Nixon nomination could result, although the prospect is not considered too bright, in a Nixon-Eisenhower ticket to replace the 1952 Eisenhower-Nixon ticket. In this case the vice-presidential candidate would be Milton S. Eisenhower, the President's brother. Milton Eisenhower, the President of Pennsylvania State College and a trusted though unofficial presidential adviser, particularly on agriculture, is 56 years old and widely experienced. Unfortunately for his candidacy, however, he was director of information for the Department of Agriculture during the height of the New Deal, having served from 1928 to 1940 in that post.

LODGE, 53 years old, is a former Massachusetts Senator who was one of the original 1951 Eisenhower supporters and who managed the President's 1952 preconvention campaign. Although not a Cabinet member he has often participated in Cabinet meetings and at the committee session this week delivered a speech that was interpreted as reflecting the foreign policy views of the President.

Lodge's job as chief United States representative in the United Nations has not given him a position from which to spring easily to a higher national position. Also, his record in the U.N. is subject to criticism, even though he may not have been responsible personally for some United States reversals with which he would be charged by the opposition. He would not be a strong candidate.

Knowland, 47 years old, was picked by Taft to succeed to the Republican Senate leadership on Taft's retirement in June of 1953 and is the leader of the dwindling conservative and faintly isolationist wing of the party. He is a tireless, humorless, conscientious, honest man who has not hesitated to split with the dominant Eisenhower Republicans on foreign, particularly Asian policy.

Were Knowland's outlook less circumscribed, his drive might carry him far, but the principles he stands for have been receding since the death of Senator Taft. He is a man who would profit by preservation from his friends. It is likely he would attract supporters from such ultraconservative organizations as "For America," whose leaders include Brig. Gen. Bonner Fellers, Gen. Robert E. Wood, and Clarence E. Manion, and from such publications as the new National Review, staffed by conservatives friendly to Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep.), Wisconsin. Knowland and Nixon belong to rival California factions.

Stassen, like Barkis, is "willin'" if the lightning should strike, but his chances have dwindled with the passing years and he is now a little shopworn. He made his name as the boy Governor of Minnesota and probably reached the peak of national prominence with a noisy but unsuccessful try for the nomination in 1948, when he was 41 years old. He was president of the University of Pennsylvania, helped Gen. Eisenhower by entering the New Hampshire primary against

Little Indication U.S. Will Make a Bold Effort To Meet New Red Tactics

Stassen Lost Budget Battle on Foreign Aid Last Year to Secretary Humphrey—Dulles Adopts a 'Wait and See' Attitude—Chester Bowles Calls For American Program 'Imaginative in Concept.'

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.

THE spectacular welcomes in the principal Indian cities, arranged by Prime Minister Nehru for Soviet Premier Bulganin and Communist party boss Khrushchev, are in sharp contrast to the routine approaches within the Eisenhower Administration over the size and type of foreign-aid program to be used to compete with the new Kremlin tactics in the cold war.

The annual hassle among Administration officials began this week with preliminary budget talks on how much to ask Congress to appropriate for American help to free nations during the fiscal year starting July 1.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and John B. Hollister, head of the new International Co-operation Administration, took note of the Russian economic and diplomatic offensive by saying that they did not see much prospect for "substantial" cuts in the present program of economic aid. This was a minor concession to those who had argued for increased American activities in the foreign-aid field. Previously, there had been an intimation that budget balancers would insist on a reduction of the $2,703,000,000 appropriated for the current fiscal year.

In their talks with newspaper men, however, neither Dulles nor Hollister showed any desire to work out a bold and resourceful program to meet the Russian switch in tactics or to establish a "creative leadership" for the program, as called for by Chester Bowles, former American Ambassador to India.

Last year when Harold E. Stassen, now White House adviser on disarmament, headed the Foreign Operations Administration, predecessor of ICA, the Eisenhower Administration recommended that $3,500,000,000 be appropriated for the current fiscal year. Included in this request was $200,000,000 for a special Asian economic development fund, which Congress cut to $100,000,000 as part of an $800,000,000 slash.

Under the strict Eisenhower orders, responsible officials will not even hint about what amounts they are discussing in the budget conferences and they do not appear concerned about the Soviet change from reliance on military threats, including the A and H bombs, to new efforts at economic and political penetrations in Southeast Asia, the Middle East and Africa.

SECRETARY DULLES has adopted a "wait and see" attitude toward the Kremlin's recent salesmanship activities, observing that he wants to learn whether there is "solid substance behind the smiles."

A far-reaching decision, however, cannot be delayed much longer. Firm and fairly detailed recommendations must be made during the next three or four weeks if they are to be included in the President's budget message to Congress next month.

Last year there was an intra-administration controversy between Stassen and Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey over the requested appropriation, particularly over Stassen's 10-year program for aid to Asia or for what he called the "free arc" from Korea to the Middle East, comprising most of the countries bordering on Soviet Russia and Communist China. Humphrey was credited with a victory in this behind-the-scenes row, which both sought to minimize, and the details of which were never fully disclosed.

For all the tens of billions of dollars expended on foreign military and economic aid during the past 10 years, there has been amazing lack of publicity or even ascertainable facts, here and abroad, about the Government's operations.

This partly accounts for the furor here and abroad created by the promises Khrushchev and Bulganin are offering to India, Afghanistan, Burma and the Arab countries, including Egypt. By American standards even the promises are chicken feed, measured against the huge performances in goods and services we have spread throughout the free and uncommitted regions during the past decade.

For a nation which prides itself on its salesmanship and its publicity techniques, the Eisenhower and Truman administrations have not taken full advantage of the almost unbelievable generosity and its consequences—of the Marshall Plan, the Mutual Defense Assistance aid, the Point Four program, the Foreign Operations Administration, the International Co-operation Administration, the Export Import Bank, the World Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the CARE packages, the loans by private American banks and the giveaway or sale of agricultural surplus below costs by the Government.

Reasons for the lack of recognition, here and abroad, of American efforts, can be traced to congressional criticism of these programs by budget-balancers and isolationists, the low pressure or inept publicity methods of the agencies involved and, above all, to the lack of positive co-ordination and direction by Presidents Truman and Eisenhower.

Even today it is virtually impossible for inquiring reporters to get adequate information for understandable presentations of the foreign aid program. American correspondents make the same complaint about operations in the countries to which they are assigned. One result has been that the adverse publicity has had a greater play here and abroad than the favorable.

The Kremlin began, before the Geneva meeting at the summit, to change its tactics regarding foreigners and foreign aid. The Khrushchev-Bulganin goodwill tour is the latest manifestation that the Communists are copying American methods and, for the time being at least, are getting more popular responses. Having decided on a changed policy, the Soviet leaders put it into forward action.

In contrast, the American programs appear to be marking time and no one in authority in Washington will venture a guess as to what sort of competition is to be expected in the immediate future. Newspaper and magazine editorials demanding more American action are beginning to appear and a Democratic spokesman, former Ambassador Bowles, has offered a solution.

Bowles, who made a fortune in the advertising business before he entered public service, became one of our most successful Ambassadors to India. He did this by trying to understand the Indian history and viewpoint and by extensive travel throughout the former British possession.

Writing in the New York Times Magazine last Sunday on "The Crisis That Will Not Wait," Bowles said that "Instead of fearing the new Soviet tactics, we should welcome them" because economic development, politics and ideas are part and parcel of our democratic system.

"Our adversary," he wrote, "has shifted the competition to a testing ground where our strength has been proved. We can accept the challenge with confidence."

But, he asserted, there must be a change in American methods.

"American policy," he said, "appears rigidly committed to tactics which had already proved too narrow during the cold war and which in the new variety of competition seem even more inadequate. Today our policies in much of the world still rest largely on militarily oriented concepts of power. An inflexible diplomacy in Asia and in Africa still ties us to an outmoded and doomed status quo."

What is needed, Bowles continued, to refocus congressional and public opinion on the vastly broader challenge confronting the United States is "bold leadership and a sense of enlightened, creative bipartisanship." He added:

"The steps which will be required in 1956 to reverse the present trend may be no less radical and imaginative in concept than the moves which the bipartisan coalition took 10 years ago to help keep Europe free."

DURING HIS DIRECTION of the Foreign Operations Administration, Stassen tried to initiate a "bold new program" for Asia and he was put in his subordinate place on the Eisenhower "team" by Secretary Humphrey and the Budget Bureau.

It is too early to guess what Hollister, the 64-year-old former law partner of the late Senator Robert A. Taft, will do as the successor ICA. At a recent Overseas Writers luncheon he declined to say

India Is on the March: New Nation in the Making

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch
(Copyright, 1955, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

CALCUTTA, India, Dec. 3.

AN observer passing through this complex country who presumes to pass any final judgments must be brash indeed. There is only one thing that seems certain and even that may be an illusion. The Indian people are going somewhere; they are on the march; they are bound to bring, by some means or another, change to a part of the world that has for so long lived in the frame of ancient tradition and custom.

The ferment is visible in the outpouring that has greeted Russia's Khrushchev and Bulganin as they moved from one part of India to another. The crowds that turned out in this huge antheap of a city are, to the Western visitor, astonishing. They stand for hours in dense packed masses, waiting to catch a glimpse of two tired looking men in straw hats, whirled along in a meager procession.

Perhaps not one in a thousand or one in 10,000 has any very clear idea of who these two men are. But they somehow understand that for India, for their province or their city, this is an honor, a tribute, and they are proud. They are proud, too, of the show they have put on, of the enormous crowds, of the bunting and the flags, and even of the crude flattery spread by the Soviet team as it echoes down to the masses.

What does this visit and the great outpouring mean for the future? In the cynical, and from the Western perspective hopeful view, it's merely a political show that will soon be forgotten. In the Calcutta area free transportation was offered to everyone within a 50-mile radius of the city. For people whose lives hold so very little, this was a dazzling opportunity. It was a public holiday, and hundreds of schools, factories and business houses were organized to turn out along the welcoming route, and so the 1,500,000 or the 2,000,000 who lined the streets and massed in the park for the civic reception were produced.

But in a more serious view, this performance in every corner of India has done two things. First, in the popular mind it has identified Russia as the friend of the Indian people, ready to share with them, as Khrushchev put it, the last crust of bread. Second, it has given the Communist party, which had been on the run, a respectability and a status it never had before.

In the cities Bombay, Calcutta and Madras, this last may be very important, for it is in the cities that Communism can breed and grow. In the last general election in West Bengal, of which Calcutta is the capital, 15 per cent of the total vote was Communist. That is believed to have declined recently, similar to the sharp fall in the Communist vote shown in elections held in south India.

But there are, at an informed guess, 1,000,000 unemployed in Calcutta. Up to a half-million refugees from Pakistan sleep in the streets every night, with no facilities for living of any kind except the streets. The number of refugees is being increased by about 20,000 a month, in a city believed to be already above the 5,000,000 mark.

The Communists helped inspire and encourage the recent riots in Bombay, which took 12 lives and disrupted all law and order for several hours in some areas of the city. The chief source of this infection is the so-called educated unemployed—those of the struggling middle class for whom, as they pour out of the universities with a faulty imitation of a classical education, there are so pathetically few opportunities.

The contrast with the villages, where 70 to 80 per cent of the Indian people live, is sharp. Progress is being made in the villages, with standards of living slightly raised and production substantially increased, so that India is producing enough food with favorable weather conditions to feed its own people. Western observers who believe India will succeed in this extraordinary experiment base their conviction on progress in the villages. And this reporter has found during a brief stay that the most knowledgeable and experienced Americans are on the whole hopeful that the effort to forge an independent modern state out of traditional historic India will succeed.

A great deal depends on Nehru. His is in many respects personal government, and his passing would make a profound difference.

He appears to be supremely confident that he can guide his country down an uncommitted path, adhering neither to the Communist or the Western bloc. There are among his critics, it should be added, those who believe he underestimated the effect of the Russian visit, and they suggest he may be concerned over the degree to which it has begun to put India irrevocably alongside the Soviet group. Any successor, and few venture to say who that successor might be, would have great difficulty in steering the same course.

Beneath the pride that the average Indian so frankly feels in this great show for the Russians there seems to be also a kind of satisfaction that this is revenge on the West for all the snubs and slights and oppressions and scorns of the past; even for so recent an affront, as it was in Indian eyes, as the American pact providing arms for Pakistan. You see, they seem to say, we can do it, we don't need you.

The danger of the moment, it seems to this observer, is that the West and, particularly America, may react in the same way. Very well, then, we shall say, if you don't need us then we don't need you. If that should happen, it will be a tragedy for both India and America.

No matter what irritations, no matter what difficulties of temperament or words spoken by politicians, the need to work together is as great today as it ever was; as great for one as for the other. When the Russian visitors were in Calcutta the crowds surged through the streets, streaming out as far as the eye could see, shouting slogans, some of them waving red banners. The first and easy judgment is that this is the beginning of the end, with India on the slippery slope down to, if not Communism, then alliance with Russia. But that is too easy a judgment. It is an admission of defeat that we in the West cannot afford.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Progress in Race Relations

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

There have been many remarkable changes in race relations in St. Louis since World War II.

If, for the sake of comparison, one looks back he will realize with a start that there were slave sales here 95 years ago.

Now outdoor swimming pools, parks, and all recreational facilities operated by the city government are shared impartially by all persons. No one is denied the seat that he or she desires to purchase at Busch Stadium.

There are three Negro Aldermen, three State Representatives and members with rank in the Fire Department and on the police force; there are many clerical employes in our municipal agencies; there are 500 Negro employes in the St. Louis Post Office, about 25 of whom are supervisors.

There are several hundred in other Federal agencies serving as typists and clerical workers and McDonnell Aircraft, Union Electric and other industries are employing Negro engineers. Public Service Co. is employing Negro streetcar and bus drivers. Our public schools were integrated peacefully and harmoniously.

The N.A.A.C.P., Archbishop Ritter, the Urban League, Bishop Scarlett, the Committee of Racial Equality, the Citizens Protest Committee, the newspapers, churches, Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. and individuals have helped to make these remarkable advances in human relations possible.

It has been proved here in St. Louis that people of different colors, religions and creeds can live side by side, work together, play together and demonstrate democracy and human dignity.

HENRY WINFIELD WHEELER.

'Gigantic Blunder'

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have read with a great deal of interest your Nov. 29 editorial, "A $415,000,000 Promotion," concerning the Toll Road program in Illinois.

As a life-time Republican, I fear that the voters will be fully informed about it to the end that our party will be defeated at the polls in the general election of 1956.

The toll road project is a gigantic blunder of the State Administration and there may be a full-scale scandal before next year's election. The project was badly planned, unwisely financed and has been grossly mismanaged to the point that the chairman, under fire, announced his forthcoming resignation.

The commission has at all times met and transacted its business behind closed doors and one has the right to think that "something is rotten in Denmark," otherwise commission members would hold their meetings open to the public.

Maybe it is not too late for the Republicans to put their house in order and not leave the job to the Democrats. SID M. WARD.

Pride and Praise

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The Very Rev. Paul C. Reinert's comment about the poor planning on the part of the state of Missouri for the White House conference on education may be essentially correct. But to me it merely placed in bold relief the activities carried on by the Ferguson-Florissant R-2 District, led by the Citizens' Alliance of the R-2 district.

This group managed to blend professional and lay people in a manner that allowed discussion of the problems confronting our schools on the grassroots level. Certainly pride and praise are the just deserts of that district. PAUL B. KOCH.

Creating a Slum

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I hope Mr. Kaufmann and other gentlemen who inspected the Columbia Bottoms site recently will realize what they are proposing in urging this beautiful lowland be turned into industrial property.

We only just rid ourselves of slum areas that skirted the riverfront, at great cost to the taxpayers and now we seem to be looking for an opportunity to start another. The area from Broadway out to the Columbia Bottoms seems to be the only beauty spot left on the riverfront and now we want to destroy it.

Not only would we be destroying the only natural beauty spot left in the north end of town, we would be starting a potential slum area. I have yet to see any of the industrial areas along the riverfront provide a beauty spot. Also, there are no railroad facilities or trafficways provided for this area at all.

Perhaps St. Louis does need more industry and more income, but must we always destroy some beauty for merely material gain? There must be a better answer than that.

Put Forth the Best Men

A wise observation about the election of good men to state office was made by Lloyd C. Stark when he was Governor of Missouri. Referring to the nomination of candidates in the primary, Mr. Stark said that the time to lock the barn door was before the horse was stolen. He meant that the voters should go to the polls at primary time and nominate the best men to contest the subsequent election.

It is possible to carry the matter a step ahead of the point at which Mr. Stark took it up. Good men must file for state office or they will not be in the primary for the voters to nominate for places on the November ballot.

This means that from the standpoint of the Missouri and Illinois state tickets, the 1956 campaign is already in a most important stage. For traditionally in both states the primary ballots begin to shape up between Thanksgiving and New Year's day. The final filing date in Illinois is Jan. 23. In Missouri it is April 24.

Missouri will elect a Governor and a United States Senator next year. The prospect is that Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. will be renominated without opposition. Thus far there has been little talk of Republican possibilities to run against the State's senior Senator next November.

Gov. Phil M. Donnelly goes out of office automatically since the Missouri Constitution does not permit a Governor to succeed himself. This means that both the Democrats and the Republicans will select new nominees for the governorship at Jefferson City.

The personality difficulties among Missouri Republican leaders have held up G.O.P. activity in that direction. These internal differences will soon need to be composed if the party is to take anything like a united front to the voters next year. So far only P. A. Tate of St. Louis, former Anti-Saloon League head, has announced, but the name of Congressman Thomas B. Curtis of Webster Groves, one of Missouri's two Republican House members, is frequently referred to.

Meanwhile the Democrats are growing active. Lt. Gov. James T. Blair, 53-year-old lawyer in Jefferson City, announced his candidacy for the nomination for Governor as long ago as October. Lowell Clelle Carpenter of Columbia, now State Commissioner of Agriculture, confirmed that he will seek the same nomination. Another prospect, Attorney General John M. Dalton of Kennett, has said that he will state after Jan. 1 whether he will run.

The basic concern of the Democrats, as of the Republicans, should be to put forth a man so good that the nominee will serve with distinction if he is elected. A first consideration should be a man's capacity to provide real leadership for the state, a quality not too much displayed at the Governor's mansion in recent years.

Illinois also elects a Governor and a United States Senator next year. But in Illinois the party positions are reversed from those in Missouri. Gov. William G. Stratton, who may and presumably will seek a second term, is a Republican. Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen is a Republican who asks re-election. Since Illinois elected Messrs. Stratton and Dirksen, the voters of the Prairie State have re-elected Democratic Senator Paul H. Douglas. This suggests that Illinois will be fighting ground and that the high offices might go to the nominees of either party. No leading Republican has challenged Gov. Stratton as yet and the prospect now is that if he runs again he probably will be renominated.

Yet it is possible that after the opposition to his highly dubious toll road program takes form over the state, he may decide to content himself with one term. A letter on this page from a Republican in Benton, Ill., suggests the potency of this issue.

In any case the quality and character of the Democratic nomination for Governor will be important. The outstanding candidate so far is Stephen A. Mitchell of Chicago, a 52-year-old lawyer, who was chairman of the Democratic National Committee in the 1952 campaign. A close friend of former Gov. Stevenson, Mr. Mitchell in 1952 took part in the start of the Internal Revenue cleanup as counsel to the House's Chelf investigating committee. Mr. Mitchell was also one of the earliest and most outspoken critics of the now completely repudiated Dixon-Yates utility deal.

Morris B. Sachs, Chicago City Treasurer, has also declared for the Democratic nomination for Governor. Cook County Sheriff Joseph D. Lohman is now prominently mentioned as a Democratic possibility. Sheriff Lohman must be unique in politics for he is professionally an academic sociologist from the University of Chicago. After serving as Parole Board chairman in the Stevenson Administration at Springfield, he surprised old-line politicians by getting himself nominated and elected as Sheriff in Cook County where he is making an excellent name for himself as a law enforcement officer.

The prospect is that Senator Dirksen will have no G.O.P. opposition. On the Democratic side, former Senator Scott W. Lucas of Havana has considered running again, but not so much is heard of this possibility currently. One of the ablest members of the State Senate, James W. Gray of East St. Louis, announced his candidacy for the Dirksen seat two weeks ago.

A name heard more and more frequently as a Democratic senatorial prospect is that of State Representative Richard Stengel of Rock Island. He entered the Legislature at the age of 34 and soon became one of its outstanding members. He was a floor leader for the Stevenson Administration and is identified with a long series of worthwhile enactments. He has been rated as a "best" legislator repeatedly by newspaper correspondents and the Independent Voters of Illinois.

In Illinois the Republicans will be defending their present administration, but should the voters turn to the Democrats in 1956 as they did in 1948 and again in 1954, they will be ill-served if the Democratic party has not nominated the best possible candidates.

And in Missouri, whether the state goes Democratic for Governor as it did in 1952 and 1948, or turns to the Republicans, both parties must offer new candidates, and they should be men capable of giving the state a distinguished administration.

These are the days and weeks when the primary lists actually take form. Both parties in both states should be making sure to put forth able, public-spirited men. That is the only way the people can be sure of winning next November.

UNEARTHING SOME EARLY AMERICANS

Immoral and Impractical

"Immoral" and "unethical" are unusual words to apply to a law. Yet these words were used by Dean Benjamin E. Youngdahl of the George Warren Brown School of Social Work to describe the present United States immigration law, in a Senate hearing in Washington.

The Washington University dean is not alone in questioning the morality of the McCarran-Walter Act. Many religious groups and spokesmen — Catholic, Protestant and Jewish — have criticized the law on the same ground. Questions of morality aside, however, it is a practical fact that the law is damaging to the United States.

As Dean Youngdahl noted, the immigration act tries to hold immigration quotas to the proportions of national and ethnic groups which already were in the United States in 1920. Thus the law not only restricts immigration; it also asserts a claim for the superiority of makeup of the American population as of 35 years ago.

To the rest of the world this idea naturally appears to be pure nationalistic egotism. The immigration law is a slur to many peoples which can only be repaid in animosity.

More Strength, More Responsibility

The merger of the AFL and CIO is to be welcomed because it affords organized labor greater opportunities for responsibility in the life of the nation. Unlike unions of other nations which are divided by conflicting ideologies, no fundamental philosophical disagreements separate the two American trade union bodies. Yet separation in itself is a cause of rivalries, so it is wise to eliminate it. A single over-all purpose should be best served by a single over-all organization.

From the earliest days of the CIO, thoughtful leaders like the late Philip Murray worked for unification on terms which would not block the organizing of the unorganized—especially in America's mass production industries. But it took time and some new faces for all to realize that there need be no conflict between the older AFL craft pattern and the new CIO approach.

Now that this is acknowledged, it means greater strength for the single federation. Its leaders will have to cultivate a commensurate responsibility. There is hope for this since the merger itself represents growth in understanding. Leaders like George Meany of the AFL and Walter Reuther of the CIO have looked beyond their immediate interests. Meany and his associates, speaking for the last time as the old AFL executive council, declared:

> Our first responsibility must be to our country. We must so conduct ourselves, both in the formulation and implementation of basic policies, as to promote at all times the peace of the world, the security of the free American way of life and its economic and social progress.

Speaking for virtually the last time as the head of the CIO, Walter Reuther observed:

> We rejected from the beginning the "pure and simple" trade union philosophy that would cast labor in a narrow economic pressure group. We rejected the doctrine of Marxist class struggle. We developed a new labor movement, a new philosophy that came out of the richness and great opportunities of America.

Recalling that even the new grouping will be but a federation of autonomous trade groups and that "corruption and corrupting influences are at work continuously," Reuther admitted that the fight against "crooks and Communists" is not always easy, He promised, however, that it would be carried on steadfastly.

The merger represents some sacrifice of habitual loyalties. For some it may mean the loss of a job. It is not a big miracle of sweetness and light. But it is fundamentally sound. It should further the economic welfare of its members and thus help to create and sustain the purchasing power essential to a flourishing economy. Through its social and educational agencies, it should also deepen the appreciation of the society of which that economy is but one aspect.

Common Sense on Hospital Fees

In declining to condemn the "institute" plan for collection of fees at City and Homer G. Phillips Hospitals, the St. Louis Medical Society made what laymen will regard as a commonsense decision.

The Institute of Medical Education and Research was set up at the two public hospitals in 1954 for the purpose of receiving fees from non-indigent patients who are able to pay. Funds so collected, amounting so far to around $71,103, go to the financing of education and research at these hospitals, thus supplementing the tax funds which support them.

It is conceivable that such funds might be misused, and if so the institute would properly earn condemnation. No charge of any such misuse, however, has been made. Those physicians who wished to condemn the plan argued that it "tends" to put the public hospitals into competition with private hospitals as profit-making institutions, and that it "may lead" to retaining patients who should be discharged. Neither argument carries conviction. Nor can one agree that plenty of funds are available for education and research from other sources.

The public hospitals are primarily intended for indigent patients, but when some patients turn out to be able to pay, especially in accident cases, why should they not be billed for services received? And when such fees are collected, to what better purpose could they be put than to financing education and research at these hospitals? The Medical Society has answered these questions in the right way, and it is to be hoped that the covert campaign against the institute by some physicians will now be dropped.

Shotgun Blast at Belzoni

Following close on the heels of the Emmett Till murder in Mississippi came the shotgun blast that seriously wounded Gus Courts at Belzoni. Gus Courts, a grocer, is a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People who had been urging unregistered Negroes to register so they might qualify as voters. For this he was fired upon from an automobile through the window of his store.

Were Gus Courts's civil rights violated? The FBI is looking into the case to see. Obviously his right to be a functioning citizen was violated and flagrantly so. He narrowly missed death. And beyond question a campaign of terror to force him to leave his home and his business flouts the Bill of Rights.

If Mississippi is not going to protect the lives of people, the Federal Government will have no choice but to do so. One state cannot be allowed to make a mockery of the United States Constitution.

A New Look at German Unity

William R. Frye, United Nations Correspondent, in The Christian Science Monitor

A searching re-examination of policy with respect to Germany is under way in Western diplomatic capitals. This policy review was precipitated by the Geneva conference of foreign ministers, out of which top Western diplomats have drawn two conclusions:

1. That the West's maximum objective in Germany—integration of a united country in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization—is unattainable; and

2. That rigid adherence to the present policy line may in fact produce a communized Germany integrated into the Soviet military system, exactly the opposite of the result intended.

Many Western diplomats, including Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, are known to have gone to the Geneva conference convinced that the Kremlin would not agree to let the West's military and political frontiers advance to the Oder-Neisse line.

West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer strongly opposes a change in this policy.

His contention is that any concession to the Soviet Union would be taken as a sign of weakness, and that the Kremlin then would simply demand more.

Other Western diplomats recognize that this may in fact be the case. But they are much more concerned about the growth of neutralist sentiment inside West Germany than Dr. Adenauer appears to be. They doubt his ability to hold in check the growing demand for unification at almost any price.

Evidence which serves to reinforce the conclusion that present Western goals are unattainable has been brought back from the Soviet Union by one of the West's most astute diplomats, Lester B. Pearson, Canadian Secretary for External Affairs. He recently returned from a 30,000-mile trip through the Soviet Union and Southeast Asia. One of Mr. Pearson's most vivid impressions was his discussion of Germany with Soviet Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin and Nikita S. Khrushchev, First Secretary of the Soviet Communist party.

The two Soviet leaders told Mr. Pearson they would "never" agree to the unification of Germany within NATO. The word "never" is rarely applicable in diplomacy, Mr. Pearson said, but otherwise it was clear to observers that he accepted the statement as a candid description of Soviet policy.

If the Soviets do indeed stall indefinitely on German unification, meanwhile holding out tempting offers to Bonn in direct diplomatic contacts, the West is likely to become more and more isolated from the German people.

Dr. Adenauer undoubtedly would hold fast to the NATO alliance, but his successor might well negotiate unification on Soviet terms.

The alternative being weighed is to offer to trade off Germany's NATO tie in return for unification through genuinely free elections—that is, in return for a non-Communist Germany. The West would pull its military frontiers back if the Kremlin would let the West thrust its political frontiers forward.

The Kremlin might not be interested in such a bargain. It would not be popular with those Western European governments which do not really want to recreate a united, strong Germany. It would raise serious military and strategic problems for the NATO general staff. But it might be the maximum the West could achieve short of war.

Ten years ago new German newspapers were being licensed under the auspices of the American military authority in Western Germany. One of them, the Nuernberger Nachrichten, has issued a special edition with a front page drawing by H. E. Koehler which shows Germany, first kicked and pummeled by the Allies, then dusted off and helped to stand, next shakily coming into its own and finally today accepted as a happy, well fed partner of Britain, France and the United States.

They Had to Write

Harry C. Bauer in the Wilson Library Bulletin

A person who talks too much suffers from logorrhea; a person who writes too much suffers from graphomania.

This type of madness received considerable attention during the nineteenth century. In 1877 the celebrated criminologist Cesare Lombroso published a book on "Genius and Insanity" (Genio e Follia) in which he considered graphomaniacs and their manias.

In 1856 some essays on literary madmen were contributed by Joseph Octave Delepierre to Miscellanies of the Philobiblon Society. Delepierre wrote of two famous graphomaniacs, one of whom is surely known to every librarian: Alexander Cruden.

After the speedy completion of his treasured Concordance to the Holy Scriptures, Cruden developed the pronounced eccentricities of a graphomaniac. A casual glance at the entries in the Catalogue of the British Museum discloses a few of his eruptions in print.

A single example will suffice to confirm the diagnosis of Delepierre: "The Adventures of Alexander the Corrector. . . . Giving an account of his wonderful escape from an academy at Bethnal-Green. . . . And of the dissolution of the pretended Court of the Blind-Bench in the Poultry. . . . And an account of his application for the honor of Knighthood, etc. . . . Printed for the author. . . . 1755."

The other celebrated graphomaniac considered by Delepierre was Bernard de Bluet d'Arberes. He wrote more than 173 books, each of which is said to be as insipid as the next. The British Museum and the Bibliotheque Nationale have extensive holdings of his works which apparently were published in Paris, 1600-1605.

In 1603 Bluet, under the pseudonym of "l'Archipoete des Pois Pilez," wrote an epic poem which he addressed to himself as the Count of Permission.

The motivation of most graphomaniacs is of a peculiar conceit. They often seek to right wrongs or to castigate sinful men. They require little encouragement and deserve no pity, for as George Eliot would say, "They carry their comfort about with them."

As for fame and acclaim, a graphomaniac is wont to bestow the accolade upon himself, as witness Cruden's appelation of Alexander the Corrector, and Bluet's reference to himself as the Count of Permission.

The predilection of graphomaniacs for pseudonyms is a curious manifestation that reflects their indifference to notoriety and fame.

Many examples might be cited, but a particularly apt one is that of a book by Jean Marie Chassaignon published in 1779 under the pen-name of Epimenide l'Inspire: Catarectes de l'imagination, deluge de la scribomanie, vomissement litteraire, hemorrhagie encyclopedique, monstre des monstres.

Would a translation add anything by way of clarifying the deliriums that possessed Chassaignon?

Armed Services Rivalries Now Flourishing in Area Where Vast Damage Can Be Done to Nation

No Longer Mere Struggle for Funds and Supplies but for Control of Weapon Systems, New Developments—Recent Examples of Dangerous Frictions.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.

RIVALRY between the three armed services, each service seeking advantage over the others, one senior officer said recently, can do as much harm to the nation as treason.

Small bits and pieces of service rivalries have appeared on the surface recently in connection with the performance of the Army's anti-aircraft rocket Nike; over whether Army or Air Force helicopters should be used by the Army in the Sagebrush maneuver in Louisiana; between the Navy and the Air Force over the Navy's new jet seaplane, the Seamaster, and between the Army and the Air Force over jurisdiction of the Army surface-to-surface medium range rocket, called Redstone.

In the past, when service functions were easily delineated—the Army on land and the air over the land and the Navy at sea and the air over the sea—service rivalries took the form of attempting to gain an advantage over the other in funds, supplies or equipment, either to make sure that they had everything needful regardless of the requirements of the sister service or as a form of empire building.

At the commencement of World War II the Navy gave such massive orders for paint that it pre-empted all the paint manufacturing capacity in the United States. And this meant the excessive use of critical materials at a time when the utmost economy should have been the rule. Large amounts of this paint have been disposed of as surplus in the past few years, after years of storage. Surplus paint still is finding its way from the Navy onto the surplus lists of the General Services Administration.

Adm. Ernest A. King, chief of naval operations during World War II, coined the aphorism that "what's good for the navy is good for the nation." Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, who gets credits for a similar quip in respect to General Motors, said the reverse, in fact: "What is good for the country is good for General Motors." Unfortunately for him, he could not resist adding "and vice versa."

King's remark was a sort of justification for pre-emptive buying as well as for building up a navy and marine empire in the Pacific at considerable expense to the United States.

The rivalries over weapons systems that are going on today can be infinitely more costly and more harmful to the nation than in the past.

Field Marshal Montgomery examined this problem in an address before the Royal United Service Institution in London Oct. 12.

"In basic matters there is a continual disagreement between the three services of a nation," he declared, "and in some cases there is definite friction. There is hidden suspicion at all levels between members of all services, in some degree.

"There is a continual tendency for duplication of administrative services and facilities in all the fighting services. . . . When some function becomes obsolescent, vested interests and emotional attachments go into action to prevent it being abolished. . . . The old feudal system, first two services and now three, has existed for too long and even today is not much more than a federation of powerful states."

The hidden conflict over the Navy's new four-jet seaplane, the Martin Seamaster, exemplifies Montgomery's charges.

What appeared on the surface were paragraphs in addresses by Gen. Thomas D. White, vice chief of staff of the Air Force, at Miami Oct. 8 and Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas in Jacksonville Oct. 15.

Said Gen White, after discussing the possibility of a water based nuclear-powered airplane:

"Formerly, of course, water-based aircraft had neither the performance nor the capability to be used as Air Force bombers. However, new engine developments may enable the water-based bomber to take its place alongside other Air Force airplanes and missiles. Thus the Air Force will better be able to do its job if this nation is ever challenged."

To the Navy this was a threat to its claim for exclusive jurisdiction over the high-performance seaplane it had developed.

Declared Thomas:

"The Navy was operating seaplanes even before World War I and no other organization in the world has its know-how. . . . Building and flying seaplanes is but one phase of complicated technique which involves the whole art of seamanship and sailoring; that is the operation of seaplane tenders, of seaborn maintenance, of floating support, of beaching equipment and handling gear. To achieve its fullest potential, the modern seaplane must be supported by other ships and integrated with the other offensive members of the new Navy."

In other words, the Air Force had no business thinking of operating water-based bombers.

The presidential directive on roles and missions provides that only the service with the primary mission will build armament to perform that mission. Thus the Air Force is supposed to build strategic bombers but the Navy is not. The Navy has a secondary mission to assist the Air Force, but this is supposed to be done with airplanes built for naval primary missions.

Here was a chance to charge the Navy with violating its function in roles and missions. The Navy declares that the Martin Seamaster is being built for naval purposes and not for strategic bombing. But also, it does not believe that the Air Force has any business trying to use a similar plane.

This had the makings of a real quarrel. The civilian and military chiefs of the Air Force refused to take up the cudgels. They made the statesmanlike decision to trust the Navy to share the seaplane if eventually it turned out to be a desirable weapon for strategic bombing.

In the case of the Redstone guided missile, the Air Force considered that its range, rumored to be up to 600 miles, placed it in the field of weapons that the Air Force should operate. It asked that jurisdiction over the missile be transferred to the Air Force as well as the arsenal where it was developed by the Army.

The Air Force had a very good case based on previous agreements for division of functions between the services. The Army, for example, handles the short-range anti-aircraft missiles while the Air Force has longer range guided missiles for area anti-aircraft defense. The Army, however, claimed that the battlefield has no such thing as depth, in a nuclear war, and that it might be necessary to disperse the missiles hundreds of miles behind the fighting areas to prevent them from being knocked out by enemy air attack.

The decision in this case went to the Army, probably more on the basis of possession being nine-tenths of the law than the force of their argument.

This missile is a kind of tactical air support and the Army does not yet have confidence that the Air Force is preparing to provide sufficient tactical air support. Before Korea it saw the Air Force reduce tactical aviation to one wing, in spite of the protests of the then tactical air commander, Gen. Elwood R. Quesada.

Quesada held that regardless of Air Force ideas of what was most important to spend its limited funds on, when the Army helped it to become independent, and the Army thus gave up control of its own air support, the Air Force had incurred an obligation to provide for the Army's requirements.

At the same time the Air Force is not quite sure that the Army is not again trying to build an army air force. The Army tried to get some T-37 jet trainers for observation use. Again the Army is not too sure that the Air Force will provide the kind of observation of the battlefield it needs. The Air Force saw this as an attempt by the Army really to get into the air business. The decision in this case was against the Army.

The war over helicopters in the Sagebrush maneuver had the aspects of a comedy. The Air Force developed the helicopters and obtained authorization for enough for three assault groups for the Army. At that time the Army did not care much for the idea of using these craft over enemy guns and asked to be given helicopters for use in emergency battlefield supply, evacuation of the wounded, running errands, etc.

Some more imaginative Army chiefs later came into the Pentagon and dreamed up sky cavalry, called Skycav. This is a reconnaisance organization that is supposed to do what the old horse cavalry was supposed to do, although it rarely did. The Skycav helicopters carry both fighting men and television cameras that send back a moving picture of the battlefield by TV. But if necessary, the 'copters can land and fighting men can get out and fight.

The Air Force takes a dim view of the possibility of such slow craft living against enemy air as well as ground fire, and possibly thought the Army was trying to pull a publicity grandstand play (and perhaps it was).

The Air Force had its own helicopters on hand. It had agreed that Gen. Otto Weyland, tactical Air Force commander and director of the maneuver, would make policy decisions. He decided that the Army should use the Air Force helicopters. The Army protested. Weyland was reversed by the Secretary of the Air Force and the Army used its Skycav.

The more level-headed officials in the Pentagon see how these conflicts are inevitable because of the increasing overlap of functions between the three services. They incline to Montgomery's solution: A single war department, a single chief of staff and a single uniform. They see this as inevitable, but they also see that vested interests and emotional attachments to outmoded functions and organizations will prevent a solution for a long, long time.

Ethiopia Is a Rugged Nation Headed By a Stubborn Schoolmaster

It Is a Bright Beacon of a Better Future in a Freer Africa.

By GEORGE WELLER
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, Dec. 3.

IN the wild green plateau of Ethiopia the United States has found a new friend and a chance to rebuild its sagging Middle East policy.

Ethiopia, a ruggedly independent nation headed by a stubborn schoolmaster, is a bright beacon of a better future in a freer Africa. On the southern edge of the Arab world, Ethiopia is coming gradually to mean the same to us as Turkey on the northern fringe: A friend worth helping.

The Ethiopians, a people neither quite white nor quite Negro, dominating the lower land hinge between Asia and Africa, are growing up at dizzy speed. They are allowing the foreigners, including some 1700 Americans, just enough rope to learn their ways, planning for them to depart, but not yet.

Emperor Is Education Chief.

Emperor Haile Selassie himself holds the portfolio of education in his own cabinet. He has instilled an almost idolatrous passion for learning in his people. The new Addis Ababa, a sort of high Colorado city of wide boulevards and monuments, has a bewildering number of schools, colleges, lyceums and institutes. Americans run most of them.

Ethiopia is an encouraging contrast to rich, ignorant Saudi Arabia, its people's source 2000 years ago.

When the schoolmaster-Emperor came back from the United States one of his subjects asked: "Aren't we getting too many Americans here?"

The Emperor replied: "Don't worry. The Americans take their principles from the Bible, just like us."

"But won't they try to pull us into some war?" the questioner was worried because 1000 of the Americans here are military radiomen.

"Listen," said the Emperor, "I have seen the bigness of America. Let me tell you: We haven't got anything America needs."

20,000,000 Population.

The 20,000,000 or so Ethiopians—no census has ever been taken—are bursting out of their barefoot brown jodhpurs with new things to do. Their topsoil is six feet deep, hardly used, yet wholly lacking any decent deed or title system. Land litigation cripples enterprise.

The Ethiopian mountains are rich in minerals, but the roads are still too primitive to get them out. American fliers of the Ethiopian air line and Italian truck drivers keep food and goods moving.

The Emperor strives to impose Amharic, the language of his own people in Central Ethiopia, as the official speech. For the Gallas of Southern Ethiopia, or the Tigrini of the north, Amharic is as hard to learn as English.

Yet the royal schoolmaster must hammer home Amharic, because the other tongues lack an alphabet and can't be written. English is the language of instruction after the fourth grade, but actually Italian is better known. The Ethiopian, like the Swiss, wastes his energy hopping from language to language, and cannot escape.

Bureaucrats Reforming.

The Ethiopian bureaucracy, which used to be obstructionist and greedy, has reformed into being difficult and venal. Better and cleaner governors are emerging. "Sure, there's bribery," admitted one American Point IV champion, "but no worse than county commissioners in my own state."

The law code is little more than a jumble of precedents. Lawsuits multiply like fleas on every business initiative.

Towering over everybody in this aching, growing country stands the little Emperor, book in hand, trying to mend graft by juggling bureaucrats, hushing up cases of corruption rather than exposing them.

The Lion of Judah, who was once caged in two rooms in an English village, won't surrender any of his own feudal powers. Yet through education he presses his people toward asking his three successors, the 40-year-old Crown Prince, the 33-year-old Duke of Harrar, and Prince Siah Selassie, balding at 25, for their surrender.

Emperor Moves Cautiously.

The overworked Emperor remains alert and sensitive, he moves with vigor, but cautiously. It required three laws to abolish slavery, in 1924, 1931 and 1942. His latest concession, of an elected lower chamber in his handpicked Parliament, effective 1958, is another feeler, not the "revolution" hailed in the West. The press has officially become "free," but remains weak, uncertain and censored.

The royal family still possesses the juiciest business plums and quasi-monopolies, enviously eyed by deprecating foreigners. Labor unions have no rights. The gurages, who do the hardest city labor, had to strike recently on an antiquated tribal basis.

Ethiopia has swallowed the more sophisticated Italian colony of Eritrea, and is still digesting it. Ethiopia seems like a Switzerland broken up by mountains into a babel of language valleys, yet somehow free and inquisitive.

The Ethiopian Christians have snapped out of their Italian agony while the Arab Moslems around them continue wallowing in old griefs about Palestine. When the Italians ravaged and rebuilt the country, the Ethiopians fought both phases. Now the Ethiopians turn around and give the Italians most of their trade.

The United States is offering Ethiopia about $2,000,000 in military aid plus $6,000,000 for our vigorous, efficient Point IV program, plus $24,000,000 in an export-import loan. We have no alliance nor "base," but only a radio relay station and listening post at Asmara.

G.O.P. Ponders Future Without Eisenhower

Taft in 1952 and became director of the Mutual Security Administration in 1953.

Stassen is not without political courage, as he showed in standing up to Senator McCarthy on one occasion, and he is an experienced administrator who enjoys the loyalty of his subordinates. He has considerable influence within the Administration.

Gov. Herter is little-known nationally and would require an extensive build-up. He is a personable 60-year-old former Congressman whose health has not always been robust and who was born in Paris, a fact that could make a difference in a race for the Presidency. He is an internationalist and has been deeply interested in building up an expert United States Foreign Service.

Humphrey—and Business.

Humphrey is considered by many the ablest man in the Eisenhower Administration and probably would be the first choice of conservative Republican business men. He is personally charming, intelligent and decisive, but his nomination almost certainly would intensify the Democratic attack on the Republican party as the party of big business. He would have little chance of election.

Bricker's Backers.

Senator Bricker has backing among conservatives who have opposed the bi-partisan foreign policies of the Democratic and Republican administrations. He is the sponsor of the so-called Bricker amendment to clip the treaty-making powers of the executive, and was Gov. Dewey's running mate in 1944.

There are reports Bricker will be proposed as a favorite son candidate in Ohio, where a candidate must file written consent to his candidacy by Feb. 8 for a primary on May 8. There is little reason to expect Bricker could gain the nomination at the convention.

Also mentioned occasionally as presidential possibilities are Gov. Goodwin Knight of California, Senator Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and Paul Hoffman, a business progressive.

This is a brief and an insubstantial list, but at the moment there are no other potential candidates in view and the time is short to develop them should they appear. The Republicans put all their chips on Mr. Eisenhower; whether that was a mistake will become apparent in the coming months.

2,922,000 in Armed Forces.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP) —The Department of Defense says the latest reports show there are 2,922,000 personnel in the Armed Forces. This figure, for Oct. 31, 1955, is 8863 below the Sept. 30 figure.

Routine Washington Approach Contrasts to New Red Effort

what "philosophy" he would follow in his new job.

Before taking the ICA administratorship July 1, Hollister was executive director of the Hoover Commission for Governmental Reorganization. At the time of his appointment to ICA there was, because of his background in industry and law, some question whether he put budget balancing ahead of the foreign aid program to bolster free world security by raising the production standards of some of our allies and the living standards in the uncommitted and underdeveloped countries.

Since taking over the job, he has traveled abroad much of the time to learn about it. He attended the World Bank conference in Istanbul, went to a regional conference of American diplomats and aid officials in Cairo and sat in on a briefing session of American officials in Paris. The month of October was spent touring the far East. He hopes to go to Latin America in the near future.

Former Business Man.

Perhaps because he is a former businessman with directorships on many large corporations and perhaps because no high policy decision had been reached within the Administration on foreign aid, he does not show extreme enthusiasm for his new work, although he says he has "the most interesting and most difficult job in the Government."

Officials who traveled with him in the Far East say he was greatly impressed by the devotion and the long hours spent by Americans and native workers on various projects, three-fourths of which, measured by dollar expenditures, are for military assistance and defense support.

Of the remaining fourth in the current fiscal year, $162,000,000, or 6 per cent of the total, has been allotted to development assistance; $153,000,000, or 5 per cent, to technical cooperation, the Eisenhower label for Truman's Point Four program; $100,000,000, or 4 per cent, for the Asian economic development fund and the same amount and percentage for the President's contingency fund, and $167,000,000 or 6 per cent, for "other" projects, mostly American contributions to the United Nations economic aid program.

It is perhaps significant that no disbursements of any size have been made from the special Asian fund or the President's contingency fund, each $100,000,000.

Funds Not Allotted.

Although these funds have not yet been allotted, Hollister has started to create a "reserve fund" for this year by cutting down on some of the previous allotments for specific countries. He and his assistants say there was some misunderstanding of this reserve when it was reported that an Indian allotment of $50,000,000 had been cut to $40,000,000.

They explain that a reserve is needed for "emergencies" and that instructions have been issued to make no full and firm commitments for earmarked funds so that money will be available throughout the year to meet unforeseen situations. They say that if no great emergencies arise as the fiscal year goes on, the reserve will be reallocated, usually to the previously approved projects. They also intimate but do not say that Congress may be asked to create a statutory reserve fund when the appropriations recommendations are sent to Capitol Hill next year.

Meanwhile, ICA officials are compiling a list of Russian foreign aid performances in the past and the promises the Kremlin is currently making. They predict that these Russian figures will be insignificant when compared with American performances.

Dulles and Hollister have said they will not be trapped by Russian promises to other countries. Dulles told a press conference this week:

"It would, of course, be impossible for us if, at any point where the Soviets made a proposal, we immediately cap it with a better proposal. That would mean by no expenditure at all Soviets could engage us in immense expenditure. That would be just falling into another kind of trap."

Magnitude Adequate.

At this press conference, the Secretary said that "the general order of magnitude" of the present aid programs would be adequate to meet the challenge of Soviet offers in the Middle East and South Asia.

The current discussions with the Budget Bureau are concerned with the "magnitude" of the prospective programs. There is no question whatever that foreign aid will be continued. Even the Hoover Commission report on the program said that it should. Seven of the 12 commission members, however, called for "substantial reductions" in expenditures. The report itself did not point out where these reductions could be made and merely observed that a task force, headed by Henning W. Prentiss Jr., chairman of the board of the Armstrong Cork Co., had estimated that at least $360,000,000 could be saved in the non-military program without prejudicing their objectives.

The President's budget recommendations next month will disclose much about the "magnitude" and the "philosophy" of the future programs and whether these are adequate to meet the new Kremlin tactics in the expected new competition between the free and the Communist world. Equally important will be the drive behind the American program and whether it will have the "creative leadership" which Paul G. Hoffman gave to the Marshall Plan and General Eisenhower gave to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Custom Smelters Get 48 Cents For Copper Under Demand

Silver Price Drops to 90c in Seasonal Decline, Then Recovers in Part.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP)—The price that custom smelters get for their copper moved up 1½ cents a pound this week to 48 cents under the pressure of persistent demand.

Buying was excellent in lead and zinc, too, and prices were firm.

There was little copper available for December delivery among the smelters and their quotation rose quickly from 46½ cents a pound to 47 cents and then to 48 cents.

The big producers held their quotation at 43 cents a pound, but their supplies of December copper were pretty well accounted for. It was generally accepted that the 43-cent price would prevail well into next year.

The London market moved higher, closing the week with a fractional gain at around 48¾ cents a pound. At the same time, the price for No. 2 copper wire scrap went to a new record here of 40 cents a pound—equal to about 45½ cents a pound for refined copper made from the scrap.

Lead producers were pleased with business.

"Our stocks are low and there's no sign of a let-up in demand," one big producer reported. "Even the battery people are buying at a very high rate for this time of year."

Many lead buyers were placing their orders at the flat price of 15½ cents a pound rather than on an average price basis. The idea was that any change in price was likely to be higher.

Demand for all grades of zinc was excellent and the price was firm at 13 cents a pound.

Silver fluctuated during the week. It dipped from 91⅝ cents an ounce to 91 on Monday and then went to 90 cents, the result of a seasonal decline in demand and more plentiful supplies. The 90-cent figure attracted buyers, however, and the price rose to 90¾ cents. On Friday, it declined to 90½ cents.

Tin reached the $1-a-pound mark for the first time in well over a year in anticipation of continued heavy consumption. The platinum market was strong, too, with little metal available.

CASH GRAIN PRICES STRONG; AID FUTURES

Corn, Off Seven Weeks Out of Nine, Records a Rally in Prices.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3 (AP)—An improvement in cash grain prices rescued the tottering grain futures market on the Board of Trade this week. With the exception of several oats contracts, all grains ended higher. The gains were far from sensational and, except in the case of corn, did not recoup all the loss of the previous week.

Wheat closed ½@2⅝c higher, corn 1@2c higher, oats ½c lower to ½c higher, rye 1@1¾c higher, soybeans ½@3½c higher and lard 8@35c a hundred pounds lower.

A comparison of cash grain prices showed better gains. No. 2 hard wheat closed at $2.07½ against $2.02¼ a week ago, No. 2 yellow corn at $1.27½ against $1.17¾ and No. 2 white oats at 66c against 64½c.

Deliveries of cash grain on December wheat, corn and oats contracts were substantial. Yet they appeared to have gone into the hands of those willing to accept them and this became a firming factor later in the week.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

MONEY IS EASED

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP).

UNCLE SAM gave business a little nudge this week. For some time now, the roaring boom of 1955 has been held in check by federal curbs on credit. As a result of Government manipulations, it hasn't always been easy to get a loan at the bank. There just hasn't been enough "loan money" to go around for all the people who wanted to build homes and buy cars, and for the retailers who wanted to stock up on merchandise for the holiday shopping season.

This week, as the Christmas buying rush swung into high gear, the Government's top money manager—the Federal Reserve board—did a sudden about-face. Instead of sopping up credit, the "fed" started pumping a little extra money into circulation. It did this by instructing the Federal Reserve banks to step up their purchases of United States Treasury bonds. Whenever the Federal Reserve banks buy Government bonds, they make an increasing flow of cash available to commercial banks for lending.

Funds Made Ready.

One likely result of the Government move: A guarantee that banks, department stores and auto finance companies won't be short of the funds they'll need to handle an expected record volume of Christmas business.

For retailers, Christmas 1955 was rapidly shaping up as the biggest ever. Merchants polled by the National Retail Dry Goods Association were unanimous in forecasting a banner season: 81 per cent predicted "substantial" gains over last year, and not a single one looked for a decline.

Sales management magazine said December retail trade should hit an all-time high of 18½ billion dollars, pushing the 1955 total to a record 186 billions vs. 170 billions for last year. Biggest problem facing merchants was a shortage of holiday help. Some Chicago stores said 33 per cent of the "extras" they had hired never showed up for work. The reason: plenty of good jobs available elsewhere.

The booming auto industry put on an extra burst of speed this week. With Chevrolet, Ford and Plymouth working overtime, production was scheduled at 182,000 cars—just under the all-time weekly high achieved last April.

No Let-up in Production.

Chevrolet and Ford were running almost neck-and-neck for the top spot in the 1955 production derby but latest figures gave Chevvy a slight edge: a total of 1,672,190 cars through November vs. 1,611,216 for Ford Motor Co.'s Ford division. Buick placed third with 711,771, followed by Plymouth with 674,870.

No letup in production was in sight. Industry output for the three months ending Dec. 31 was expected to top 2,000,000 cars, an all-time high for any yearend quarter.

The steel industry showed new symptoms of growing pains this week. Things have come to a point, said the trade weekly "Iron Age," where steel mills are competing with their own customers for the steel they need to build facilities for more production.

Steel price increases spread to additional products, notably cold rolled strip steel, while dealers in steel scrap moved their prices up. Trade sources said the pinch would continue through the first six months of 1956, spurred by peak demand from the auto, construction and oil industries and other big consumers. Production in Thanksgiving week touched a new record high of 2,416,000 tons with the mills straining at 100.1 per cent of capacity; output this week was scheduled at 99.2 per cent.

The Bank's View.

The First National City Bank of New York said the spectacular gains in industrial activity that have characterized 1955 are not likely to continue, because many industries are "bumping against the ceiling of practical capacity" right now. From here in, said the bank, gains will be "harder to achieve" and therefore more gradual.

Farmers, whose incomes continue to decline while the rest of the nation prospers, were told this week that the farm surplus problem is likely to continue for another five years. Farm prices at latest count were 7 per cent below a year ago and 28 per cent below the Korean war record.

Briefly Over the Business Scene

Merger plans were announced for American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., big manufacturer of plumbing supplies, and Mullins Manufacturing Corp., leading producer of kitchen sinks and cabinets. . . . The Union Pacific Railroad will buy 45 new gas turbine locomotives from General Electric Co. in a $38,000,000 deal. . . . Braniff International Airways ordered five jet transport planes from Boeing Airplane Co. for $30,000,000 . . . The cigar industry is winding up its best peacetime year since 1929. Total United States consumption for 1955 is estimated at 6,100,000,000 stogies.

BIGGEST HOG RUN SINCE 1952, LOW PRICE SINCE '42

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Dec. 5 (USDA weekly survey of local livestock market)—A liberal run of steers for the week ended Friday ran top-heavily to warmed up kinds and shortfeds which caused a lower trend on the bulk of sales. Receipts totaled 260 loads of steers, and 110 loads of heifers and mixed yearlings. Cattle selling $20 and over held up well and some high-choice and prime lots sold as much as 25c higher, but fully three fourths of steers and an even higher proportion of heifers sold 50c to $1 lower. Cows were steady with the close strong; bulls 50c higher; vealers and calves $1 higher; little change on stockers and feeders.

CONSOLIDATION PERIOD FOR STOCKS AFTER 3-WEEK RISE

Price Index at One Mid-Day Period in Week Shows Recovery of 13-Billion Dollar Loss on President's Heart Attack.

By ED MORSE

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP)—The stock market took a breather this week after four straight weekly advances. This was a week of backing and filling, a period of consolidation after an extended period of rising prices, according to most Wall Street observers. Quality stocks had no large scale pressure on prices and there was no increase in volume to accompany declines.

It was a week, however, when the market might have taken off on a traditional yearend rally. In fact, it seemed headed there Wednesday. That was the day when Associated Press 60-stock average reached $181.50 at noon, equalling the historic high of Sept. 23, the day before President Eisenhower's heart attack. But the average couldn't stay there either for the rest of that day or for the week.

At the moment it was there, however, it had wiped out the estimated loss of 13 billion dollars in the quoted value of securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange in the sharp break of "blue Monday," Sept. 26.

The A.P. average registered a decline for the week of 80 cents, closing at $180.50. This was a moderate decline, however, and three of the five trading days had rising markets.

(Dow-Jones average of 20 industrial stocks was .16 of a point lower at 482.72 at the end of the week. The index of 15 rails lost 2.38 points, ending 165.45 after reaching a 25-year high in the preceding week. The 20 utilities were 65.87 up .56.)

The Wednesday volume of 2,900,000 shares was the highest in seven weeks and on that day the average was up. The week's total volume of 12,490,408 shares, although not notably large, happened to be the greatest weekly volume since 21,693,460 shares were traded in the final week of September. A total of 1423 issues were traded last week of which 738 were higher, 493 lower and 192 unchanged.

The week afforded a goodly quota of favorable corporate news, including stock splits, higher dividends and year-end extra dividends to be expected at this season. These things stimulated trading but the end results for the week were not very happy in two notable examples. Montgomery Ward, for instance, announced a proposed 2-for-1 stock split, a raised quarterly dividend and a year-end extra. But it closed this week at 100⅛ for a loss of 4⅜ compared with its close last week. Hercules Powder announced a proposed stock split on Wednesday and rose substantially for the day. But it closed the week at 137⅝ for a loss of 1⅜ compared with the close a week ago.

The week began with profit-taking wiping out early gains on Monday. A generally higher market followed on Tuesday with aircrafts spurting in the last half hour. Wednesday was the day the A.P. average matched the historic high at noon before settling down a bit. On Thursday profit-taking moved in again to bring a mild decline. The hesitant Friday market was concluded with a late rally which brought the average well up for the day.

The five most active issues on the New York Stock Exchange this week were: Baldwin-Lima-Hamilton up 2⅛ at 14⅞ on 217,000 shares; General Motors off 1¾ at 48; Sperry Rand up ⅞ at 24⅞; Penn Texas up 1⅛ at 19¾, and Westinghouse Electric up ¼ at 57¾.

the sparkling Christmas tree that goes 'round and 'round

COMPLETE WITH 25 CHRISTMAS TREE ORNAMENTS AND CANDLES — ALL FOR $1

Smartest decorating idea of the season...

Now here at last—the new, fabulous CRYSTALITE Christmas Tree that goes 'round and 'round. No winding. No mechanism to wear out. Simply light the candles and the orbit starts revolving—delighting everyone, young or old. Meanwhile the petite moon, sun and star glow with heavenly light as they spin around the tree.

25 Christmas Tree Ornaments

You receive 3 candles and 3 candle holders, 15 genuine blow-glass balls in iridescent colors. The "planets" as well as the Star of Bethlehem atop the tree are encrusted with thousands of shimmering mock gems. 12½ inches high, 8 inches in diameter. Spread Christmas cheer—place on tables, TV sets, over fireplace, on ledges, etc.

Venetian Frosted Glass Effect

The CRYSTALITE Tree is the inspired creation of one of Europe's leading sculptors. He has captured all the subtleties and nuances of Venetian glasscraft. Reproduced in crystal-clear styrene, it is now available in America in limited quantities only.

You'll fall in love with it . . .

We invite you to try one in your home without obligation or risk. See the fine detailing, the etched glass effect of the frosted snow background. Thrill to the myriad rays of light that dance about the room as it goes 'round and 'round. Remit only $1, with this condition: your satisfaction is guaranteed—otherwise your money back quick! CHARGES BENSON BORROWED HIS SOIL BANK PLAN

Senator Humphrey Says Secretary Watered Down Proposal, Removed Safeguards.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP) —Senator Hubert Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota, said today a soil bank proposal he made to meet farm problems has been "borrowed" by the Administration and converted to its own purpose.

Humphrey, who has been pounding at the farm issue for months, complained in a statement that Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson has "watered down" the Humphrey plan by removing the "standards I had provided to safeguard farmers and consumers alike."

The result, Humphrey said, would give Benson instead of Congress the power of decision over how much land should be taken out of cultivation and how much the farmers should be paid for doing so.

Various Plans.

Various soil bank plans have been suggested with this basic idea: farmers would be paid so much an acre by the Government for planting grasses instead of other crops on land not needed for food and fiber production. This would help cut down on surplus production and at the same time improve the grass-bearing soil's fertility of future years. Land thus set aside would be said to be drawing fertility interest in a "soil bank."

Earlier this year, Humphrey said, the Republican farm officials rejected his soil bank payment plan as unlikely to work and as too costly. Now, Humphrey said, Benson has adopted the same idea, with variations of his own.

"No wonder I question Secretary Benson's sincerity," Humphrey said. "Obviously something has suddenly changed his mind. Perhaps it is a rude awakening to the fact there is an election next year, and farmers are after his scalp."

'Blank Check' Bill.

The Senator said Benson is circulating a proposed Administration bill that will be sent to the new session of Congress. This draft bill, Humphrey said, would "write Benson a blank check with no standards as to how much land should be taken from production . . . how much . . . farmers should receive."

Under it, Humphrey said, "there could be no effective program at all, or one so extreme it would create shortages instead of abundance."

"There could be payments offered so low no farmer would bother to participate, or so high the public would call a halt to the whole idea in disgust," he said.

Humphrey, a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said he hopes the next session will enact a "soil bank program."

"It is just a realistic way of helping farmers convert production to present requirements, just as we paid the bill for helping industry convert from wartime to peacetime demands," he said.

LOYALTY-SECURITY BOARD TO MEET

Nixon Sets Dec. 14 for Bipartisan Commission Session.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (UP) —Vice President Richard M. Nixon today called the first meeting of the bipartisan commission set up by Congress this year to investigate the Government's controversial loyalty-security program.

Nixon, who said he acted at the request of President Eisenhower, set the meeting for Dec. 14 in the Senate Office Building.

In letters to the 12 public and private commission members, he said the group would elect a chairman and vice chairman and "transact any other business its members deem advisable."

Purpose of Group.

Democrats in Congress sponsored the legislation setting up the commission. It is authorized to study—and recommend improvements in—the basic personnel security laws, executive orders and agency regulations, and also practices followed in congressional investigations.

The Administration's loyalty-security program has been under heavy fire recently from two Democratic-controlled Senate subcommittees.

The commission was authorized by a law signed by Mr. Eisenhower Aug. 9, but its members were not appointed until Nov. 10. Nothing further happened until Nixon called the meeting for this month.

Two-Party Commission.

Mr. Eisenhower, Nixon and House Speaker Sam Rayburn (Dem.) Texas, each appointed two members from private life and two from Congress or the executive branch. Half are Republicans and half are Democrats. Mr. Eisenhower named Louis S. Rothschild, Under Secretary of Commerce; Carter L. Burgess, Assistant Secretary of Defense; Franklin D. Murphy, Chancellor of the University of Kansas and James P. McGranery, former Democratic Attorney General.

Nixon appointed Senator John Stennis (Dem.), Mississippi, a sponsor of the original legislation; Senator Norris Cotton (Rep.), New Hampshire; Loyd Wright, Los Angeles attorney; and Dr. Susan Riley, professor of education at George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.

Rayburn designated Representative Francis E. Walter (Dem.), Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Un-American Activities committee; Representative William M. McCullough (Rep.), Ohio; J. L. Noel, Houston (Tex.) attorney, and former Gov. Edwin L. Mechem of New Mexico.

U.S. STILL BACKING PHILIPPINES FOR SECURITY COUNCIL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP) —United States support of the Philippines for a United Nations Security Council seat was emphasized today by the State Department, but a future compromise was not ruled out.

The Philippines and Yugoslavia, both friendly with the United States, are deadlocked for the position. There have been reports that Greece might get United States backing as a compromise candidate.

State Department press officer Lincoln White told reporters he had been asked about these reports and wanted to say:

"The United States continues firmly to support the Philippines candidacy for the Security Council and strongly hopes that it will be elected when the balloting is resumed next week.

"In the light of this position it is obvious that the United States has made no decision regarding any compromise candidate."

Questioned further, White said this did not rule out selection of a compromise candidate later on. If circumstances should be different, White said, "a decision would have to be taken at that time."

TV'S GROSS IN '54 IS 593 MILLION, UP 37 PCT. IN YEAR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (UP) — The television industry grossed $593,000,000 in 1954, far surpassing what radio realized in its richest year.

The Federal Communications Commission reported yesterday that television's gross revenues rose 37 per cent in the year, while radio's total income dropped by 5 per cent to $449,000,000.

It was the first time combined radio-TV revenues ever had topped one billion dollars. The highest gross income ever realized by the radio industry was $475,000,000 in 1953.

The commission said it got its figures by compiling money paid by advertisers for radio and television time and talent.

Net television profits last year were estimated at $90,000,000 — about 33 per cent above 1953. Radio's profits dropped 24 per cent.

The four major TV networks and their 16 stations took in 50 per cent of television's total revenue. The remainder went to the 394 other television stations, the commmission said.

The networks made profits—before federal income tax—of about $36,500,000, the commission estimated. It said this was more than double what they netted in 1953.

EISENHOWER, TRUMAN HAIL GEORGE AS TOP STATESMAN

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 3 (AP) — Senator Walter F. George (Dem.), Georgia was hailed last night as one of the nation's great statesmen in messages from President Eisenhower, Harry Truman, Alben Barkley and 55 members of the United States Senate.

The messages were read as George addressed the Old Warhorse Lawyers Club of Atlanta. He criticized persons who contend American arms expenditures and foreign aid should be cut.

"Some well-meaning citizens say we are spending too much on national defense, but I don't think so," he said. "I would never be willing to gamble with safety and peace by spending too little. Others say we are spending too much over the world. I doubt that this is true."

The President's message said, "Please convey my warm personal congratulations to Senator George and my best wishes to all who meet to honor him for his statesmanship and his distinguished service to the nation."

MAN TRIPS UP IN SINGLE-SHOE FRAUD ON STORES

HAMMOND, Ind., Dec. 3 (UP)—Melvin Hofner's sure-fire formula for success in the shoe business fizzled because he got too much publicity.

Hofner had developed what he thought was a foolproof method of acquiring and selling shoes at bargain prices while still making a neat profit for himself.

Hoffner, 28 years old, of Dearborn, Mich., told police he had been going into shoe stores and asking for samples of four or five lines for his wife to try out. His wife, Hofner would tell salesmen, was unable to leave their car because of a sprained ankle. The obliging salesmen gave Hofner one shoe of each line after he promised to come back and buy the pair his wife preferred. In each case Hofner went out the door and never returned.

Instead, he checked the indexed file of shoe styles and numbers of lines carried by several other midwest stores. Then he went to another store to collect the mates of the shoes he had.

The trick worked fine until Hofner tried it yesterday on Hammond shoe salesman David Drury. Drury had heard of Hofner's success from a friend and alerted La Porte (Ind.), authorities, who had a warrant waiting for him.

TWO APPOINTED TO POSTS IN ST. LOUIS CIVIL DEFENSE

Appointment of Joseph P. Soraghan, former executive director of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and Col. C. Elford Smith, U. S. Army, retired, as executives of the St. Louis Office of Civil Defense was announced yesterday by Defense Director F. P. Hardaway. He announced also promotion of Col. William D. Paschall from executive to deputy director, succeeding Col. Malcolm Elliott, who died last August.

Soraghan, a 1931 University of Missouri journalism graduate, formerly was editor of the St. Louis Daily Record and associate editor of the St. Louis Labor Tribune. He held various Chamber of Commerce posts from 1948 until last April. He lives with his wife and four children at 6964 Arthur avenue. Col. Paschall has been with the agency since July 1954, when he retired from the Army. He was chief of the Missouri Military District.

WOUNDED MAN CITED IN ROBBERY WARRANT

Shot by Restaurant Owner After Struggle in Holdup.

Larry B. Mitchner, shot in the back by a restaurant proprietor while fleeing after a holdup, was charged with robbery in a warrant issued yesterday by the circuit attorney's office.

Mitchner, a Negro giving an address in the 200 block of North Jefferson avenue, was shot by Ben C. Gin, Chinese proprietor o fthe Good Luck Cafe, 1537 North Jefferson, after the man, using two knives, had cut Gin, his wife and a waitress.

Mrs. Gin and the waitress, Miss Maggie Sanders, Negroes, were in the kitchen when Mitchner came in shortly before 1 a.m. yesterday and demanded money.

Mrs. Gin, refusing to take him seriously, said "Aw, go on, this is no holdup," and he slashed at her. Gin struggled with him, and a pot of boiling water on the stove spilled on both of them.

After cutting Gin on the face and back, Mrs. Gin on the right wrist and the waitress on the right hand. Mitchener managed to get to the cash register and take $60.

As Mitchner ran, Gin grabbed a .38-caliber revolver and fired six times, hitting him once. When he fell, another man, apparently an accomplice, rushed up and took the $60 from him and escaped, police were told.

Mitchen was in serious condition at Homer G. Phillips Hospital.

PROBATION FOR BANKERS WHO MISAPPLIED $10,438

CHICAGO, Dec. 3 (AP)—Two former bank officers convicted of misapplying $10,438 in bank funds were placed on probation yesterday by a judge who said they had been "punished a good bit."

Henry J. Beutel, former president of the Irving Park State Bank, the Belmont National, the First State of Elmwood Park and the Northtown State, all in the Chicago area, was put on five years' probation. Maurice L. Hirsch, now a real estate man but formerly a chairman of one of the banks, was given two years' probation.

Judge Joseph Sam Perry of United States District Court, noting that the men today made restitution of $10,438, told them: "You've both been punished a good bit. I don't see where any better justice would be served by sentencing you to a prison term. This is what probation is for—another chance. I believe it's my duty to grant probation here."

STUDENTS GET IDEAS FOR '56 SCIENCE FAIR

Second 'How-to-Do-It' Meeting Held at St. Louis University Medical School.

A group of St. Louis area students with aspirations in science attended a series of lectures and practical demonstrations at St. Louis University Medical School yesterday to get ideas for their own exhibits for the Greater St. Louis Science Fair next year.

The gathering was the second in a series of "how-to-do-it" meetings in preparation for the fair, an annual display of student scientific exhibits. Next year's event will be held in the Washington University Field House April 16-20.

In the field of chemistry Lyman J. Wood, professor of chemistry at the university, demonstrated how an exhibit could be prepared to show a method of measuring the diameter of an atom by calculating the length of an X-ray beam as it penetrates a crystal of sodium chloride, ordinary table salt.

Using a chart picturing the course a beam would travel, and a billion-to-one scale model of an atom, Wood traced the course of a beam and explained how it could be measured by a method called X-ray crystal analysis.

The demonstration in geology, given by Kenneth G. Brill, professor of geology, consisted of erupting a miniature volcano in order to show the concentric marks made by lava as it flows down the side of a volcanic mountain.

Brill showed the students how to cause the eruption by pumping a mixture of clay, flour, water, and dry ice for pressure, through a rubber tube extending up the inner side of the volcano's center.

Carl Kisslinger, assistant professor of Geophysics, demonstrated the uses of a seismograph in recording the speed and motion of earthquakes. He explained the device acts as the "immovable" object on the earth, capable of measuring the speed and movement around it.

Demonstrations also were given in physics, aeronautics, electrical engineering, geography, meteorology and biology. About 500 students attended the meeting.

Start on Projects Urged.

Norman R. D. Jones, science instructor at Southwest High School and general chairman of the fair, urged the group of students to get started now on their projects for the fair. He pointed out that exhibits must be ready by about March 15, deadline for entrance applications.

Other "how-to-do-it" meetings have been scheduled for Dec. 13, East St. Louis and Edwardsville High Schools; Dec. 15, Belleville High School, and Dec. 17, Washington University.

A special meeting for elementary pupils will be held the first Saturday in February at Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney downtown store.

Next year's fair will be sponsored by the Post-Dispatch. It is the ninth event since the fairs were begun in 1948 under the sponsorship of the old St. Louis Star-Times. The Post-Dispatch has sponsored them since 1952.

HICKENLOOPER FOR PREMIUM ON SALES OF FEMALE PIGS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (UP)—Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (Rep.), Iowa, today proposed that the Government pay a premium to farmers who sell female pigs. He said it would reduce the breeding stock and increase sagging hog prices.

Hickenlooper told a reporter he made the proposal yesterday in a conference with Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson.

Hickenlooper said he urged Benson to consider a federal premium of not less than 5 cents a pound on sales of sows and gilts. He estimated the program might cost the Treasury $100,000,000. He said this would make it attractive for farmers to market more sows and gilts, reduce breeding stock, and reduce the hog population. He said overproduction of pigs has had a "devastating effect on the market."

EAGLE RANK TO BE GIVEN TO 5 SCOUTS

Will Be Awarded Tomorrow, Which Also Is Deadline for Circus Settlements.

Five Boy Scouts will be awarded Eagle rank, Scouting's highest honor, during ceremonies at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow, the St. Louis Boy Scout Council announced.

Ralph Walton, 5842 Rhodes avenue, a member of Explorer Post 188, will receive his award at Busch School, 5910 Clifton avenue. The Eagle badge will be given to Stephen Stasiak, 4968 Pernod avenue, a member of Troop 415, at St. Mary Magdalen Catholic Church, 4317 South Kingshighway.

Three members of Troop 549 will be honored together at Grace Presbyterian Church in Crystal City. They are: John Whitmire, 409 Tenth street, Dale E. Vinyard, 1003 Taylor avenue, and Michael Smith, 900 Burgess street.

Tomorrow is the deadline for Cub, Scout and Explorer units of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council to complete settlement for tickets to the 1955 Boy Scout Circus and still be eligible for commissions and prizes being offered, W. B. McMillan, chairman of the circus attendance committee, announced.

McMillan estimated that nearly $15,000 in commission and bonus payments will be given to local units completing settlements by tomorrow at the council office, 505 Chemical Building. He said about 5000 neckerchief slides, 2000 sleeping bags and 300 more expensive items have already been awarded as prizes.

Each Cub, Scout and Explorer unit is urged to do a holiday good turn for some needy person or family, Roy W. Jordan, chairman of the council's Activities and Civic Service Committee, announced.

Information about Christmas gifts, food and clothing needed by St. Louis families may be obtained at the Christmas Bureau of the Social Planning Council, 505 North Seventh street. Those interested in international good turns may contact CARE, Inc., at Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney stores.

Three annual recognition dinners for adult volunteer Scout leaders will be given this week. The Suburban District's dinner will be at 6:30 p.m. tomorrow at Wright Memorial Lodge on Beaumont Scout Reservation, U.S. Highway 66 and Antire road. St. Louis County Circuit Judge Douglas L. C. Jones will be guest speaker.

Speaking to members of the Council Grove District will be Al Fleishman, member of the executive board of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, at a dinner at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the parish hall of Our Lady of Good Council Catholic Church, 1134 St. Cyr road.

The Frontier District will have its annual recognitions dinner at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Southern Mission Baptist Church, 2966 Market street.

Three new Scouting units that joined the St. Louis Boy Scout Council last week are: Pack 642, sponsored by the Fern Ridge School P.-T.A.; Creve Coeur; Explorer Post 610, sponsored by the Parents Association of St. Margaret of Scotland Parochial School, 3964 Castleman avenue; and Post 415, sponsored by the First Christian Church, 47 West Johnson street, Bonne Terre.

Radio Tower That Flashed Order To Sink Lusitania to Be Razed

U.S. Seized German-Built Station in New Jersey and Used It in Both World Wars.

TUCKERTON, N.J., Dec. 3 (UP)—The old Tuckerton wireless station, which flashed the death signal for 1153 persons aboard the liner Lusitania in World War I, is doomed.

The 763-foot radio tower, the world's eighth tallest structure, will be toppled this month by demolition experts. The operation will mark the final phase of dismantling the multi-million dollar installation which was the world's most powerful radio station from 1913 to 1953.

On May 7, 1915, a terse two-word message flashed from the tower contributed to United States' entry into World War I.

The cryptic message said: "Get Lucy!"

A few hours later German U-boats sent the British liner Lusitania to the bottom off the Irish coast. The death toll included 114 Americans.

The message was meaningless to the radio operator who sent it on orders of his superiors—the Germans who had built the station in 1912-13 and then operated it ostensibly as an innocent commercial enterprise.

Soon after the sinking of the Lusitania the United States Navy seized the station.

It proved invaluable to the United States in World War I. The tower's strong signal could be heard by submerged submarines anywhere in the world.

It also provided the only means of communications with Europe after the Germans cut the trans-Atlantic cable. The tower was used also throughout World War II.

"We won the battle of the seas with the station," Charles Buelow, an electronic engineer at the tower said. "Germany dominated the seas until the station co-ordinated activities of the Atlantic fleet."

Between the two wars the station was operated by R.C.A. Communications, Inc., a subsidiary of Radio Corp. of America. However, the station outlived its usefulness in 1953 when the Navy completed a station four times as powerful near Seattle, Wash.

The Tuckerton station was purchased by a realty corporation which owns 1800 acres in the Mystic Islands and plans to develop New Jersey's largest private resort.

The station is on the inland waterway from New York to Miami in the Mystic Islands, a group of seven major islands and 40 small keys.

134 GEORGIA NEGROES BACK ON VOTING LIST

Federal Court Order Complied With in Randolph County.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Dec. 3 (AP)—The names of 134 Negro voters were back on the voting list in Randolph county today.

County Attorney Walter Taylor Jr. said last night they were restored in the form of a supplement to the 1954 voters list.

United States Judge W. A. Bottle had ordered the names replaced as of today—ten days from the date of his Nov. 23 ruling.

In Atlanta yesterday Attorney Dan Duke threatened damage suits against Ordinary (Probate Judge) W. B. Taylor of Randolph county and managers for a special Randolph county election Thursday if they "prevent any registered Negro" from voting.

Duke was the attorney for 22 Negroes who started the litigation by charging that their names were illegally removed from the voting list.

They were awarded $40 each from two of Randolph's then registrars—C. C. Martin and R. S. Banks—in a civil rights trial in the Columbus division, United States Court, in September.

After another hearing at Macon, Nov. 23, Judge Bottle ordered all three registrars—Martin, Banks and J. W. Lay—to restore the 134 names in 10 days.

The special Randolph county election next week is to name a tax collector to replace one who resigned.

EXPLORER E. A. KIDSTON DIES

HUDSON, Mass., Dec. 3 (UP)—Arctic explorer and contractor Ernest A. Kidston, of Hudson died last night of a heart attack in Washington, D.C., relatives said here today. He was 78 years old.

He was a native of Bad Deck, Cape Breton, N.S., and at the turn of the century took part in the Peary relief expedition.

Trades Important in Cards' Pennant History.

CHANGES in the baseball picture, including chiefly the sharp decline in the major league talent pool and improved financial status of club owners generally, has made the trading of good players a much less important phase of the baseball operation than it was a few decades ago.

Frank Lane is finding out how difficult it is to get the players needed by the Cardinals when he doesn't have a surplus of attractive talent to offer in deals. Time was when the Redbird farm system was producing surplus talent year after year. On at least two occasions the late Sam Breadon was able to sell, within the period of a year, more than $300,000 worth of players, without weakening the parent ball club.

Back a few decades ago, too, there were second division clubs in financial distress. Each year, to pay bills and approximate solvency as spring training time approached, have-not clubs would trade the few good players they had for money and replacements of lesser ability or experience, just to stay in business.

Now there isn't a poverty-stricken club in the majors, the talent pool is at a low ebb, and it has become more and more difficult to rebuild a ball club. They know about that in Baltimore, Kansas City, Chicago and Detroit.

Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey, even in years when their minor league clubs were producing satisfactorily, proved that judicious trades could win pennants. In fact there would not have been a championship team in Redbird uniforms in 1926, when the long famine was broken, if it hadn't been for wise trading.

Southworth, Alexander and O'Farrell Key Men in 1926

ONE of the big steps to that first pennant was taken in May of 1925 when Bob O'Farrell was obtained from the Cubs for Mike Gonzales and Howard Freigau. Later Alexander was obtained on waivers from the Cubs and Billy Southworth from the Giants in a swap for Heine Mueller. O'Farrell, a rugged catcher and one of the greatest we ever saw at guarding the plate, made the difference, along with Southworth, Alexander and Tommy Thevenow, shortstop summoned from the minors by Rogers Hornsby after he replaced Rickey as manager early in 1925.

Three men obtained in trades were highly valuable as the Redbirds won their next pennant in 1928. Frankie Frisch was obtained in a trade involving Hornsby; George Harper, an outfielder who hit some timely home runs, came from the Giants for O'Farrell, who was traded after his one year as manager of the St. Louis club. And to replace O'Farrell behind the plate, the Cardinals traded Catcher Spud Davis and Outfielder Homer Peel to the Phillies for Jimmy Wilson.

There were pennants, too, in 1930 and 1931 and a mainstay of the Cardinal staff those years was Burleigh Grimes, a great competitor, who was obtained from the Boston Braves in exchange for Bill Sherdel and Fred Frankhouse.

There was a serious blow to the Cardinal team when Shortstop Charley Gelbert was injured in a hunting accident after the 1932 season, but by this time the farm system was producing in quantity and quality. There was no shortstop replacement in the system, but there was surplus talent at other positions and the Cardinals used that asset to get a man to take Gelbert's place. Paul Derringer, an outstanding pitcher, was sent to Cincinnati along with a few lesser figures, to bring Leo Durocher to Sportsman's Park.

Durocher fitted perfectly into the Gashouse Gang lineup and the Cardinals won another pennant in 1934, a flag they couldn't have taken without the Lip.

That was about the last important player trade the Cardinals made. The winning clubs of 1942, 1943, 1944 and 1946, the greatest Cardinal era, was strictly farm club teams. Also the management had adopted a firm policy of depending on farm products, a policy that actually prevented an extra pennant or two.

There was a chance, after 1946, to get Bob Elliott from the Pirates for an aging and fading George Kurowski. There probably would have been another flag or two, possibly in 1948 and certainly in 1949, if Elliott had been in Cardinal livery, instead of playing for the Boston Braves.

Neil Johnston, Warriors Rally To Beat Knicks

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Philadelphia Warriors raced to an early 18-point lead, but had to come from behind in the final five minutes on Neil Johnston's sharp shooting to defeat the New York Knickerbockers 109-102, tonight in Madison Square Garden. It was the tenth victory in 13 games for the Eastern Division pro basketball leaders.

Wake Forest Director and Coach Resign

WAKE FOREST, N.C., Dec. 3 (UP)—Wake Forest College Athletic Director Paddison W. (Pat) Preston and Head Football Coach Tom Rogers resigned today.

Rogers' 1955 team ended its season two weeks ago with five wins, four losses and one tie. Last year the Deacons won only two games while losing seven and tying one. In his five seasons as head coach, Rogers's teams had a record of 21 wins, 25 losses and four ties.

Governor Is Burned In Effigy

ATLANTA, Dec. 3 (AP)—It appeared probable today that Georgia Tech would keep its Jan. 2 Sugar Bowl date with Pittsburgh despite the race issue raised by Gov. Marvin Griffin which touched off an all-night riot by Tech students.

Shortly after Griffin was burned in effigy for an athletic segregation proposal that would cancel Tech's fifth straight bowl appearance, a source close to him said, "Georgia Tech will be allowed to play in the Sugar Bowl."

The student demonstration followed the Governor's request yesterday to the University system board of regents to bar state college teams from playing opponents having Negro players or in games where spectators are not racially segregated.

Pittsburgh has a Negro, Bobby Grier, a reserve back, on its football squad. And segregation will not be practiced in sale of Pitt's bloc of tickets to the deep South Sugar Bowl in New Orleans.

The Griffin administration source which said Tech would be permitted to play, pointed out that Griffin's message to regent chairman Robert O. Arnold of Covington did not specifically mention the Sugar Bowl.

But in view of the sweeping segregation policy laid down by the Governor and his call of "an immediate meeting" of the regents to consider it, the request obviously was prompted by the forthcoming Sugar Bowl game.

Arnold said today he has asked the regents to meet Monday to study the Governor's request.

But in addition to the administration spokesman's statement, there were other indications that Tech's Sugar Bowl contract will not be disturbed.

Regent Quimby Melton, editor of the Griffin (Ga.) News and a close friend of the Governor, first declined to comment on the matter, but later apparently laid down the administration's policy line. He suggested that Tech be allowed to carry out its Sugar Bowl contract, but that the regents adopt Griffin's suggestion for all future athletic events of state colleges.

Tech president Blake Van Leer told John Earp, Chicago NBC sports editor, in a telephone interview, "I'm 60 years old and I have never broken a contract and I'm not going to break one now." Van Leer also is chairman of the Tech Athletic Corporation, a separate agency set up by the legislature to handle athletic affairs.

Later, a Tech alumnus and former Tech football player, Representative M. M. (Muggsy) Smith said "it's political and 100 per cent ridiculous." Smith was credited with dispersing the Tech students who climaxed their demonstration with a predawn march on the Governor's mansion. Smith lives across the street from the mansion.

From the Flats, Tech Campus, where a handful of students began voicing their protest, the demonstration snowballed.

Estimated by police at approximately 2500, the crowd marked to Five Points in downtown Atlanta, then to the State Capitol a few blocks away, and finally to the Governor's mansion.

The marchers bore signs proclaiming "we play anybody" and "Griffin sits on his brains." They also sang "We'll hang old Marvin from a sour apple tree."

At the State Capitol, the demonstrators smashed two ground floor doors, overrunning the lone guard, J. E. Rooks.

Concordia Is 63-55 Loser At Fayette

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FAYETTE, Mo., Dec. 3—Concordia Seminary's Preachers couldn't match the second-half scoring pace of the Central College Eagles here tonight and went down to a 63-55 defeat in their second game in as many days on the road. The St. Louis club had won from Westminster at Fulton the night before.

Wally Crawford, sinking nine field goals, was the hottest shooter for Central, which never has lost to Concordia on its home court. Crawford tallied 22 points and received timely help from Jerry Linneman, who chipped in five field goals and four free throws.

Concordia was even with the Eagles after a 30-30 first half in which Freshman Joe Hauser hit four shots from the outside for the Preachers. But the former Lutheran High star didn't keep it up in the final 20 minutes and Central moved ahead just after the intermission with three quickies by Crawford, Linneman and Jim Snell.

That made it 36-30 in favor of Central and the Eagles managed to stay ahead by that margin through most of the half. With about five minutes to go, Concordia tried its five-man weave style of offense, held its own, but then reverted to its usual tandem post play.

A couple of Daves, Ludwig and Joeckel, led Concordia scoring. Ludwig, largely because of eight free throws, made 16 points and Joeckel 12.

New 'Schlundt' Scores 21 Pts. In 30 Minutes

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Dec. 3 (AP)—Archie Dees, Indiana's 6-foot-8 sophomore replacement for graduated All-America Don Schlundt, pumped in 21 points tonight in 30 minutes and the Hoosiers won their opening basketball game from Ohio University's Bobcats, 93-74.

The tall boy from Mt. Carmel, Ill., was especially effective under the baskets. He and veteran Wally Choice led a first-half drive that gave Indiana a 44-34 margin at the half, hitting 15 and 12 points, respectively.

Coach Branch McCracken of Indiana used 12 men and seven were sophomores.

Hawks, Playing Ninth Time in 11 Days, Beat Rochester, 89 to 78

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Dec. 3—The St. Louis Hawks, supposedly groggy from a schedule calling for five games in five nights in five cities, upset the National Basketball Association dope again tonight when they ripped the Rochester Royals, 89 to 78, to fatten their Western Division lead.

Red Holzman's Western leaders locked this one up early, burying the home side after 22 minutes of first-half action that sent 2,515 fans home grumbling about a fourth Rochester defeat in six home starts.

Alex Hannum, playing what his coach called "the best game I've seen him play for any club," Bob Pettit and iron-man Bob Harrison were the wheels in the Hawks' eighth triumph against six setbacks.

Hannum did everything but foul out as he organized the defense and found time to curl in 14 points. Harrison went 47 of the 48 minutes, organizing the attack and pouring in 18 points; and the inimitable Pettit shoveled in 25 points with only four misses in 14 tries from the field.

Early Deficit—But Then!

The Hawks trailed, 12 to 4, after six minutes of play and then completely dominated the action for the remainder of the first half. They led, 48 to 26, at one stage, and they made it 54 to 29 early in the third quarter.

They had to endure one scare, as Rochester, paced by player-Coach Bobby Wanzer, came within five at 64-59, ending the third period, but here came Hannum, Pettit and Harrison to stave off the home side in the final 12 minutes.

The Hawks missed only four penalty shots, made 36 of 81 from the field, against Rochester's 18 missed free throws and a floor record of 26 hits in 78 tries.

By winning, the Hawks remained the only Western division team to boast a winning record. The victory snapped a losing streak of two, their longest in the new NBA season.

They might have made this a much more impressive final score, but for a third period in which the six-personal foul limit caught them early and exacted full payment. They fouled 11 times in the quarter, and it was this bonus shooting from the free throw line that helped Rochester close in to a five-point spread.

At that, the Hawks outscored Rochester by 20 points from the field, while attempting only 21 free throws against 44 awarded to the Royals.

Bob Schafer, fresh arrival from the Philadelphia Warriors, made his first appearance as a Hawk when he took over for a tiring backcourt cast and sparked the team when it was badly needed. He was purchased only this afternoon.

Besides being their fifth game in five nights, it was the Hawks' ninth league contest in the last 11 days. On top of that, they have a Sunday night exhibition scheduled at Pittsfield, Mass. Ben Kerner, owner of the Hawks, said the exhibition was scheduled before a switch was made in the NBA schedule that made the Hawks so busy this week. "And we need work for our younger players who aren't used regularly in the league warfare," said Kerner.

The Hawks will be home Tuesday night for a game at Kiel Auditorium against Easy Ed Macauley and the Boston Celtics, part of an NBA doubleheader.

For the four-game, four-night trip, the Hawks played .500 ball, winning over two Western rivals, Minneapolis and Rochester, and losing to Philadelphia and Boston.

53 POINTS IN SECOND HALF; M'LAUGHLIN HIGH WITH 23

By Robert Morrison

St.Louis University's running Billikens, encountering unexpected opposition early, found the target in the second half of their basketball season opener last night and blasted Louisiana Tech, 98 to 81.

The boys from Ruston, La., sharp and wiry though relatively young in personnel, trailed by only a point early in the second half but the Bills blew 'em down once they discovered where the hoop was.

A surprisingly large crowd of 6581 was announced for the first college game of the season at Kiel Auditorium. If St. Louis's followers expected a runaway, however they had to wait awhile for it.

Eddie Hickey's boys, with Junior Al Serkin shouldering the responsibility at the pivot position for the first time as a regular, had a lot of speed all the way. But they didn't get consistent scoring off the fast break until they got into their 53-point second half.

In the second half St. Louis hit 23 out of 51 in field goal attempts. They had scored on just 18 of 47 in the first half.

18 for Joe Todd.

Capt. Jim McLoughlin was the scoring pace-setter for Hickey's ninth varsity season opener here. Mack played the board for tip-ins and hit occasionally from outside for 23 points. An out-court popping Joe Todd, however, was just as effective with 18 points. Jumping Grady Smith and Harold Alcorn, the backcourt regulars, divided honors with 16 each.

But Serkin himself was not shut out in the scoring department, delivering four baskets for a solid eight points. The tall boy from Brooklyn rebounded well, made a few mistakes, but showed evidence that he will come along.

The 6-8 Serkin was opposing a good visiting pivot man in Louisiana Tech's 6-g freshman, Ray Germany, who finished with 22 points to be high for the Bulldogs. Tech's other standout was little 5-8 Billy Wiggins, whose outside hitting netted 14 points.

Any difficulty that St. Louis had early was more a result of the minimum-error play of the visitors, who last year tied for the Gulf States Conference title. Now shy two top men from that team, Tech had opened its season Thursday night with a good 86-68 decision over Arkansas Tech.

Crackling Fast Break.

But when a crackling Billiken fast break resulted in basket after basket starting some five minutes in the second half, the visitors were on their way to defeat. Hickey rested his regulars briefly, then brought them back for another last go at it before reserves finished.

And so it was the Billiken lead, which never had been greater than seven points in the first half, suddenly grew to a maxiufu of 18. It had been 23-18 after 10 minutes of play, 45-42 at the half after Louisiana Tech had briefly regained the advantage in the second 10 minutes.

Then in second half McLaughlin led the way out of the difficulty. When the contest drew near the end, Billiken fans were shouting to "make it 100." But Larry Bradford's final netswisher was a half-second too late.

Majors Invade Chicago This Week for Meetings, Trade Talk

BETWEEN ROUNDS

by W. J. McGoogan

Two Big Fights on Program for Week.

THERE are two big boxing matches on the program this week. First is the meeting between Nino Valdes, Cuba, and Bob Baker, Pittsburgh, heavyweights, scheduled for 10 rounds at Cleveland, Wednesday night which headlines the thirtieth annual Cleveland News Christmas Toy show. Then comes the middleweight championship fight at Chicago, Friday night, between Bobo Olson, the current titleholder, and Sugar Ray Robinson who hopes to regain the 160-pound crown which he once held.

Both will be telecast nationally. Wednesday's bout will be seen here over KTVI, Channel 36 at 9 o'clock, and Friday night the action will be over KSD-TV, Channel 5, also at 9 o'clock.

Baker and Valdes are unusually large men, even for heavyweights and each should weigh about 210 pounds. Baker ranks second among the contenders for Rocky Marciano's crown, Valdes is No. 3.

In 49 contests as a professional, Baker has won 43, 19 of them by knockouts. He has lost five and boxed one draw. He was knocked out by Archie Moore in 9 rounds at Miami, Fla., March 9, 1954. He was also kayoed by Satterfield in a round, July 1, 1953 and by Clarence Henry in 8 rounds in 1951. That last one stopped Baker's winning streak at 26 and he is currently undefeated in 12 contests.

Valdes rates as something of an in-and-outer. He lost to Baker on a decision in 10 rounds May 21, 1953 and he was defeated by Archie Moore at The Arena in 10 rounds, March 11, 1953. He was knocked out by Joe Louis in a round in an exhibition, one of three in which he fought the former champion of the world.

On the brighter side of the picture of Valdes is a second round knockout of Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson in the second round, a 10-round decision over Ezzard Charles and a knockout over Don Cockell, former British champion. He stopped Cockell in the third round whereas it took Marciano eight to turn the same trick.

Just before he boxed Cockell in England, Valdes was beaten rather badly by Bob Satterfield in Chicago, a bout which was seen here on television.

The two heavies are scheduled to go 10 rounds. They did it before but it would be surprising if they do it again. One or the other should be finished before the 10 rounds are over.

Olson Probable Favorite.

OLSON likely will rule the favorite over Robinson but Sugar Ray has defeated the current champion twice in the past, once by a knockout in 12 rounds and again on decision in 15 rounds.

Robinson, prior to his retirement in 1952 after suffering a knockout at the hands of Joe Maxim, then light heavyweight champion of the world in the fourteenth round, June 25, 1952, was rated one of the greatest fighters of his pounds and inches of all time.

The night he fought Maxim for the 175-pound crown in Yankee Stadium was one of the hottest on record. The thermometer registered 104 at ringside and it was worse than that inside the ring under the lights.

But it was just as hot for Maxim who was under the added handicap of having to make the weight—twice—as the bout was postponed because of rain for one night.

The referee, Ruby Goldstein, collapsed in the ring and Robinson was unable to answer the bell for the fourteenth round.

After that Robinson announced his retirement but decided to come back after 31 months because his finances had shrunk, due to over-extension in business affairs.

He knocked out Joe Rindone in 6 rounds in his first comeback effort then was punched all over the ring and soundly trounced by Ralph (Tiger) Jones in Chicago's Stadium on Jan. 19 of this year. He defeated Johnny Lombardo in 10 rounds in Cincinnati just before Lombardo won from Phil Kim here at the Auditorium. Robinson went on to defeat Ted Olla in 3 rounds, Garth Panter in 10 and Rocky Castellani in 10, although in the latter bout Robinson was on the floor for a count.

In his entire career Robinson has won 136 fights, 88 by knockouts; he has lost four, drawn in two, boxed one no decision and 5 exhibitions.

Olson, after his loss to Robinson in 15 rounds in San Francisco, March 13, 1952, went on a winning streak of 21 straight. Included in his triumphs was one over Paddy Young to win the American middleweight championship and another over Randy Turpin of England in 15 rounds in Madison Square Garden for the world title, which had been vacated by Robinson on his retirement.

Bobo defended his championship three times, successfully, against Kid Gavilan in 15 rounds, Rocky Castellani in 15 and against Pierre Langlois of France in 15.

Then he tried the task at which Robinson failed. He went out to win the light heavyweight championship of the world and fought Archie Moore. Moore toyed with Olson for two rounds, then knocked him out in the third.

Since that time he has had two bouts winning from Jimmy Martinez and Joe Giambra in 10 rounds. In the latter bout Olson did not appear to advantage and many fans thought Giambra had beaten him.

The census among boxing men is that Robinson has fought back with the one idea in mind of gaining one more big purse and that he has really little hope of defeating Olson. That theory may not stand up in the ring come next Friday night.

Bonus Rule, TV, Player Demands on The Agenda

CHICAGO, Dec. 3 (AP)—The ever-controversial bonus rule, the perennial radio-TV problem of the minors and the players' demands will keep the major league owners busy next week while the baseball clubs' managers talk trade.

The American and National Leagues will hold separate sessions Monday and Tuesday. A joint meeting is scheduled for Wednesday morning, though it might be moved up if the leagues dash through their private business.

Although proposed changes in the bonus rule were rejected by the minors at Columbus, they remain on the majors' agenda and will be considered. The bonus rule sharply restricts movements of free agents signed for more than $4000.

The Detroit club would toss out the rule altogether while Baltimore would like to permit bonus players to be optioned to the minors, instead of forcing them to stay on the major league roster for two years.

Dressen's Compromise.

This plan, originally suggested by Chuck Dressen, Washington manager, would include the optioned bonus men on a club's player limit as a penalty. (Baltimore has four bonus players.) Another proposal would permit an unlimited draft of "second year men" who have had at least 30 days service in each of his first two years in baseball.

The majors also will discuss loosening up the June 15 midnight deadline for trading. Under one proposal, one day in July and one day in August would be set aside for trades within the same league only.

Interleague games with the results to count in the league standings will be proposed again with little chance of success. Hank Greenberg, Cleveland general manager, made the initial proposal two or three years ago.

Incentive Awards.

Another suggested change would let major league clubs reward players with extra pay for hitting .300, winning 20 games or some similar accomplishment, according to each club's wishes. At the present time such extra pay is not permitted except in the case of contract agreements on more pay for specific club attendance.

The ban on commercial radio-TV broadcasts of big league games into minor league territory as passed by the minors will be considered. It also was given slight chance of survival.

Both leagues will consider a number of requests from the players, including an increase in minimum salary from $6000 to $7200, and permission for players to negotiate directly with winter league teams. The players also want a voice in negotiations for a new World Series—All-Star game TV contract after the current pact expires at the end of the 1956 series.

What Is Wrong?

Commissioner Ford Frick planned to disclose Monday afternoon the final report of the fact-finding survey on baseball, conducted last summer by the Stephen Fitzgerald Company of New York. A preliminary report on "what's wrong with baseball" showed inadequate parking, TV, cost and slow games were keeping fans from the parks.

Some of the owners went home for a day or two after attending the minors convention, but most of them came directly here. There was much bustling around and many secret meetings, but no announcements of important player swaps.

ROLLA, Mo., Dec. 3 (AP)—The Missouri Mines staved off a closing drive by Blackburn (Ill.) College tonight to win their season opener, 70-65. Forward Dave McKinstry of Kansas City led the Miners with 20 points.

The Miners were comfortably ahead at halftime, 34-25, and extended this lead in the last half before Blackburn, using a full-court press, raillied to close the gap. Forward Pete Hughes topped the losers with 27 points. The loss evened Blackburn's season record at 2-2.

Mizzou, Outrebounded by Lundy, Defeated by Purdue

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Dec. 3 (AP) — Purdue's Boilermakers opened their pre-Big Ten basketball season tonight with a 62-58 victory over Missouri, which couldn't get the rebounds from Lamar Lundy, Purdue's star 6-foot-6 football end who teamed with passer Len Dawson on the gridiron to beat the Tigers a year ago.

Lundy hauled down 17 rebounds, although he scored only eight points.

Ron Jecha, 6-foot-5 Purdue forward, was top scorer with 20 points, two more than Norman Stewart, 6-foot-5 Missouri guard.

Purdue ran up a 32-19 lead late in the first half. Missouri rallied but Purdue maintained a margin of from 3 to 7 points.

Joe Campbell, little Purdue guard who is NCAA golf champion, suffered a leg injury late in the game. Its seriousness was not determined immediately. Footballer Dawson made his first appearance in a varsity basketball game—for 22 seconds at the end.

Purdue hit 24 of 58 shots from the field for a .414 percentage. Missouri connected with 21 of 68 for .309.

Kentucky Opens With Victory

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 3 (UP)—Three field goals by 6-8 Forward Phil Grawemeyer in the final minutes enabled the favored Kentucky Wildcats to slip by a hustling Louisiana State team, 62 to 52, tonight.

Forward Troy Rushing of L.S.U. and Guard Jerry Calvert of Kentucky shared scoring honors with 17 points each. The Wildcats' All-America candidate, 6-7 Center Bob Burrow, was held to seven points.

Although the Tigers led throughout most of the first half, Kentucky pulled ahead, 27-23, just before the rest period of the smoothly-played game.

Guard John Brewer had 13 for Kentucky while Jerry Bird of the Wildcats and Roger Sigler of L.S.U. came through with 11 points each.

AAU Delays Action on Use Of Headgear in Boxing

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 3 (UP) — The Amateur Athletic Union brushed aside the only major controversy of its sixty-eighth annual convention today with a parliamentary maneuver that delayed action on a debate over the use of boxing headgear for at least another year.

The issue, brought up by the Armed Forces, had turned the A.A.U. boxing committee's meetings into shouting turmoil for two days and did the same thing to the convention's general session this morning before the A.A.U. executive committee withdrew the proposal from the floor "pending further study of the matter."

Navy and Marine Corps officials want headgear for all A.A.U.-sanctioned events because their own personnel must wear them in all boxing bouts. The proposal was opposed by the Golden Gloves organization.

Lt. Col. Hugh T. Paris, chief of the sports branch of special services for the adjutant general's office, said the services would compromise during the coming Olympic year.

Navy and Marine boxers will not compete in A.A.U.-sanctioned events that bar headgear, but will fight without the gear in any bouts leading to selection of the United States Olympic team.

Syracuse Keeps Home Streak, Downs Lakers

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 3 (AP)—Coming from behind in the second half and wrapping it up with a 38-point fourth period, the Syracuse Nationals notched their sixth straight home-court victory by defeating the Minneapolis Lakers, 114-103, in a national basketball association game tonight.

Although Clyde Lovellette of the Lakers led all scorers with 25 points, the Nats displayed far better team balance with Red Rocha netting 23 points.

The Lakers built a 55-49 halftime lead, but the Nats, getting timely help from Jim Tucker's 10 points in 13 minutes, went ahead with four minutes left in the third period and outran the visitors the rest of the way.

Both Rocha and Dolph Schayes fouled out in the late going, but Johnny Kerr, an 18-point scorer for the Nats, tied Lovellette in rebounding as each grabbed 14 rebounds.

Colts and Rams In Do-or-Die Pro Grid Game

CHICAGO, Dec. 3 (AP) — Thanks to the Chicago Cardinals, the Los Angeles Rams and Baltimore Colts get their one big chance in the National Football League's Western Conference race Sunday when they meet in Los Angeles.

Only a couple of weeks ago, the Rams' chances looked very slim after they failed to get more than a 17-17 tie with Baltimore and the Colts appeared to be clear out of the championship picture. The Chicago Bears were riding along on a six-game winning streak and seemed unbeatable.

Then the Cards stepped in during last Sunday's snowstorm and handed their fellow townsmen a thumping 53-14 setback and the Western race suddenly became tighter than a Scotsman's purse strings. Monday's coin-tossing to determine possible playoff sites apparently was more than an empty formality.

Rams on Top.

As things stand now, the Rams are on top with six victories, three defeats and one tie. The Bears are next with a 6-4 record, then the Colts with 5-4-1. Thus a victory for Los Angeles coupled with a Bear loss to the ex-champion Detroit Lions would give the Rams the Western title. Should the Colts win, they'd be tied with Los Angeles, either ahead or behind the Bears by a half game.

Comparatively, the Eastern race is a simple one with only Cleveland and Washington in the running. Cleveland's Browns could clinch the title at Pittsburgh, with an assist from the "spoiler" New York Giants, who play Washington.

Junior Bills Stop Country Day, 70-50

St. Louis U. High used its first-string players for only a quarter as the Junior Billikens subdued Country Day School, 70 to 50, in a basketball opener for both teams yesterday at the St. Louis gym.

The Junior Billiken starters began hitting early, piled up a 17-3 lead after one quarter, and then let the reserves take over. Bob McGinn had four field goals in the first period and Dick Chartrand had three.

DURHAM, N. C., Dec. 3 (AP) — An unheralded sophomore halfback, Oliver Rudy, raced 35 yards for the only touchdown today as Duke gained a 6-0 edge over a rugged North Carolina team that fought the Blue Devils to a standoff in a nationally televised football game.

A crowd of 34,000 saw Duke move past the North Carolina's 20-yard line three times, but the Tar Heel defense held on each occasion. North Carolina, trying to salvage something from a pitiful season of three wins and six losses, made a battle of it and had Duke hanging on at the finish.

In the closing minutes, Tar Heel Tackle Jack Maultsby recovered a fumble by Quarterback Dale Boyd on the Blue Devils' 18. However, Duke dug in and threw the Tar Heels back to the 26 after they had moved to the 12.

Rudy, a 197-pounder of Petersburg, Va., broke around left end early in the second quarter for the only touchdown of the game. A 21-yard punt return by Halfback Bob Pascal figured in setting up the score. Guard Jim Nelson's placement kick was blocked.

Duke drove once to the Tar Heels' 2, again to the 25, 31, 12 and 18—only to see its arch neighborhood rival make a great defensive stand each time. Except for the closing minutes, North Carolina could not offer a serious scoring threat, and was unable to move past midfield during the first half.

In the third period, Duke Quarterback Sonny Jurgensen ran back an intercepted pass 37 yards for a touchdown, but a clipping penalty nullified the score.

Five Irish Players On All-Opponent Team Selected by Navy

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 3 (UP) — Although Army pushed Navy's football team all over the field and out of bowl contention, the Middies were not too impressed by the Cadets.

In selecting an all-opponent team today, Navy failed to name a single Army man to it. The only other team to beat the Middies during the season, Notre Dame, dominated the all-opponent eleven.

Notre Dame placed five players on the team, Pittsburgh and Penn State two each, and Duke and William and Mary one each.

The team:

Ends: John Paluck and Joe Walton, both of Pittsburgh.

Tackles: Bob Lusk, William and Mary; and Otto Kneedinger, Penn State.

Guards: Pat Bisceglea, Notre Dame; and Sam Valenteno, Penn State.

Center: Jim Mense, Notre Dame.

Backfield: Paul Hornung, Don Schaefer and Jim Morse, all of Notre Dame; and Bob Pascal, Duke.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 3 (AP) —Stewards of the Grand Circuit, the nation's top harness racing circuit, decided today to substitute Sportsman's Park, Chicago, in place of the Missouri state fair at Sedalia on the circuit tour.

The action came at the stewards' annual meeting, held in conjunction with the annual session of the United States Trotting Association here.

The stewards passed over Missouri's bid for Grand Circuit dates and granted Sportsman's Park the tentative dates of Aug. 18 through Aug. 25.

Searching First In Pimlico Final

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 3 (UP)—Searching, a three-year-old daughter of War Admiral who was purchased by Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs for $15,000 last spring, paid off another dividend today by winning the $18,525 Gallorette Stakes on the final program at Pimlico.

With Conn McCreary up, Searching, the 2 to 5 favorite with the closing day crowd of 22,958, took the lead soon after the start in the Gallorette and led all the way. The Jacobs filly finished an easy three lengths in advance of the Cain Hoy Stable's Brightest Star in the mile-and-an-eighth test for fillies and mares.

Robin Freeman, Buckeyes Top Butler, 73-51

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 3 (UP)—Robin Freeman paced Ohio State to a 73-51 victory over Butler tonight before an all-time high opening crowd of 9,317 at Butler Field House.

Freeman, who played only 13 games last year before dropping out because of illness, sank 10 field goals and four free throws for 24 points against a team that had defeated Wisconsin in its opener.

Ohio State's fast-breaking offense completely dominated play and the Buckeyes took a 42-28 halftime lead.

The Buckeyes controlled the backboards with 6-foot-5 Frank Howard getting a major share of them. Howard got 17 points.

Connecticut Dog First Two-Time Springer Trial Victor

MARION, Ill., Dec. 3 (UP)—A dog from Connecticut became the first two-time winner of the national English springer spaniel field trial championship today.

International field trial champion Ludlovian Bruce of Greenfair, owned by Joseph C. Quirk, Greenwich, Conn., won his second straight title in a hunting and retrieving test held at Crab Orchard refuge near here.

His handler again was Larry MacQueen, Pottersville, N. J.

Second place went to Mickelwood Stud, who was the 1953 champion, handled by Steve Studnicki, Frankfort, Ill., for Armforth Kennels, Chicago. Finishing third was Saighton's Samson, owned by Robert McLean, Fort Washington, Pa., and handled by Arthur Eakin, Carversville, Pa.

There were 34 starters when the trials opened Thursday in freezing rain and 10 dogs were left for the final land series and water test today.

An amateur shooting dog meet with many of the dogs from the trial handled by their amateur owners instead of professional handlers, will be held tomorrow.

Tide Turns: School Wins After Losing 39 Basket Games

ULLIN, Ill., Dec. 3 (AP) ULLIN HIGH SCHOOL ended a 39-game basketball losing streak Friday night with a 69-63 victory over Grand Chain.

The school in this Pulaski county town of about 600 last won a court game in December, 1953, and had gone through two winless seasons in a row.

And their last victory, over Karnak, came by a 2-0 forfeit after a Karnak player had been ruled ineligible following a lopsided victory for the visitors.

Pittsburgh Divides Scoring to Defeat Michigan Five, 75-66

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 3 (AP)—Five Pitt players hit for double figures in the scoring column tonight as the Panthers whipped Michigan 75-66 in the basketball opener for both.

John Riser, 6-4 junior forward, led Pitt with 18 points. Chuck Hursh and Julius Pegues each garnered 15 for the Panthers, while Joe Fenwich had 14 and Bob Lazor 13.

Pitt showed a lot of poise and balance. The score would have been greater in the Panthers' favor if their foul shooting had been up to par. They connected on only 13 of 28 free shots, while Michigan hit on 18 of 21.

Ron Kramer, who starred at end this past season for Michigan's football team, led the Wolverines with 16 markers.

40 Points for Niagara Ace in 72-70 Thriller

BUFFALO, N.Y., Dec. 3 (AP) —Niagara's Purple Eagles recovered from a bad case of nerves tonight to turn back Fordham, 72-70, at Memorial Auditorium, as Tom Hemans poured in 40 points.

Hemans, playing in the shadow of Niagara's great tournament-team stars of the past two years, came into his own by missing the Auditorium's major college record by only two points.

In a tremendous personal victory, he brought the Eagles back with a six-point string after they had seen Fordham overcome an 18-point deficit. The Rams took the lead at 52-49 on two quick jump shots by young Jim Cunningham. Then Hemans calmly dropped in two free throws with seconds left to insure the win.

Hemans, at 6-6½, also did much to help Niagara control the defensive board.

La Salle Upset By Muhlenberg

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3 (UP) —Muhlenberg College turned one of the young season's major upsets tonight by whipping highly-regarded LaSalle, 69-58.

Dick Leber and Bill Smith came off the bench and joined Sophomore Clint Jeffries in handing the NCAA runner-ups their first defeat of the season. LaSalle is coached by Jim Pollard, former Minneapolis Laker star, who replaced Ken Loeffler, now at Texas A.&M.

The Explorers, playing without their star center, injured Bob Maples, jumped to an early lead, but Muhlenberg quickly narrowed the gap and then went ahead by as much as 12 points five times in the second half.

Jeffries paced the scoring for Muhlenberg with 18 and did a brilliant rebounding job off both backboards.

Smith and Leber contributed 12 points each while LaSalle's Fran O'Malley exploded for 18 tallies in the second half to grab game scoring honors with 24 points.

It was O'Malley who provided the spark as LaSalle whittled Muhlenberg's 12-point lead to 55-52 with 8:26 remaining. But the mules came back with three straight baskets to clinch the game.

Iowa U. Maintains Non-League Mastery On Its Own Court

IOWA CITY, Ia., Dec. 3 (AP) —Iowa's highly ranked basketball team opened the season today with a 60 to 51 victory over Nebraska to record its sixty-seventh consecutive non-conference triumph on the home court.

Iowa, Big Ten conference champion last year, moved out to an early lead but at halftime had only a 38-34 advantage. The game moved slowly most of the way and was marked by ragged ball handling by both sides.

A crowd of 7800—about half of capacity—was on hand.

Bill Logan, Iowa's 6-6 center who has averaged 15.3 points per game the last two seasons, led the scoring with 16 points but got only four of those in the second half when Forward Carl Cain warmed up to bag 10 of his 15-point game total.

Nebraska Coach Jerry Bush started four sophomores and junior Rex Ekwall. Nebraska couldn't get its fast break "give and go" offense going.

Northwestern Upset.

EVANSTON, Ill., Dec. 3 (AP) — Western Michigan upset Northwestern tonight with a 72-76 basketball victory after staving off a late rally.

By Dent McSkimming.

Out of today's replay of the Simpkins-Meramec tie should emerge the team that will represent St. Louis in the national Open soccer championship tournament.

Other contenders for the national title still alive here are the Jones club of the County League, St. Ambrose of C.Y.C., and Carondelet of the Muny. Any one of the three might upset Simpkins or Meramec but the probabilities are that this will not happen.

At Oakland Stadium this afternoon, starting at 2:15 o'clock, Simpkins meets Meramec for the third time this season. In their Khoury League game of Nov. 13, only one goal was scored. That, a penalty kick by Pete Traina, gave the team from The Hill its victory. Before their next meeting, in the Open Cup second round match of last Sunday, both clubs picked up reinforcements. Despite a bitter northwest wind and snow flurries, the teams battled to an exciting 2-2 draw. Hence today's replay.

There will be an interesting preliminary in which St. Ambrose, conqueror of Kutis, will oppose Holy Rosary in a C.Y.C. league game, starting at 12:45 p.m. These teams are tied for first place in the Cardinal Glennon (traveling) division of the C.Y.C. seniors.

Reinforcements Doubtful.

The question of these reinforcements makes today's game even more of a puzzle for those who would try to forecast the outcome. The three players who gave stability to the Meramec team, Bob Kehoe, Eddie and Mickey McHugh, are regular members of the Cal Gage team of the Municipal League. Their team is scheduled today to oppose the Tabacchis at Cherokee Park at 12:30. Dean Wilson, who played center forward for Simpkins last Sunday, belonged to the Holy Rosary team of the C.Y.C. League and that club is booked against St. Ambrose today in a league match. Two other Simpkins additions, Jack Dueker and Jack Fitzgerald, are on the roster of the Khoury League Craig club, booked to face Liberty.

If the reinforcements were available the cup teams would both be somewhat improved, but they were tough enough a month ago when neither had any outside help.

In spite of the fact he is very closely marked by experienced Charley Colombo, the Meramec center forward has won lots of favorable comment in the two meetings of these teams. He was held scoreless the first time, largely because John Traina, Goalie Frank Borghi and Colombo made some acrobatic recoveries. But he scored twice last Sunday, once on a penalty kick. In a recent national amateur cup match, he scored three times as Meramec defeated St. Ambrose, 4-2.

Amateur Cup Draw.

Stan Lutostanski and Charley Ullenberg, who handled the game a week ago, will referee today's cup match. . . . Because Meramecs will use players not listed on their Khoury League team roster, today's game will not be counted in the league standings. . . . Draw for the third round of the national Amateur Cup: Kutis vs. St. Agatha; Brehenys vs. Holy Rosary; Simpkins vs. Diamonds; Meramecs vs. Spanish Society.

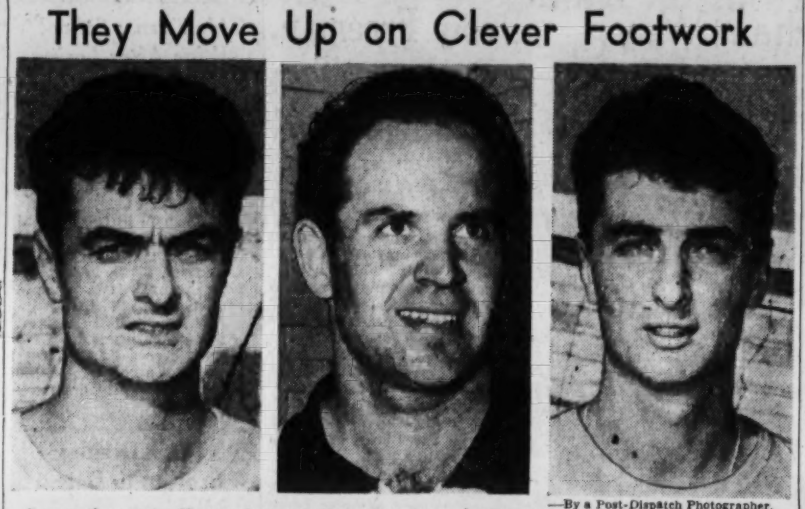
They Move Up on Clever Footwork



—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Among the outstanding performers of the Simpkins and Meramec clubs which meet today in a replay of their national Open Cup soccer tie, from left JOHN TRAINA, GUENTHER REINHOLDT and PETE TRAINA. The Traina brothers, John at halfback and Pete on the forward line, are clever and forceful players for Simpkins; Reinholdt, the Meramec center forward, is his team's leading scorer. He came to St. Louis last August from his home in Hamburg, Germany, where he played league soccer.

A Day With Goose Hunters at Refuge.

BROTHER, it was hard rolling out so early, trading a warm bunk in the cabin for the cold and darkness outside, but the thought of wild geese is one that moves man to do strange things.

A hunting partner grumbled as he pulled on his clothes, saying he had spent an uneasy night worrying that our 190 pounds might at any time come crashing through a sagging upper bunk.

We arrived at the cabin late the night before, in a downpour that soaked the area around Ware, Ill. Headlights of the automobile caught two curious deer, one a fawn, standing in the rain in a harvested field 100 feet or so away from the country road.

Setting out in the early-morning blackness, we again saw two deer at about the same place, but both were fully grown.

The weather, which had been mild the night before, with fairly high temperatures predicted for the morning, had instead become somewhat severe, with high winds and temperatures around freezing.

Big Bob Turner, manager of the Union county wildfowl refuge for Illinois, wondered aloud if the strong wind might affect the movement of birds

Geese Hang Back.

He had the right hunch, because dawn broke over the hunting area without a sign that the geese were going to leave the safety of the nearby refuge.

Although shooters had their limits by 8 a.m. each day of the previous two weeks, not a shot had been fired at a goose by that time this day.

One big Canada appeared from nowhere around 7 o'clock and swung low toward shadow decoys surrounding a pit, but the hunters, for some reason, let it go.

Oddly, ducks, which had been strangers in the vicinity recently, began giving the field a play, dipping and rising in bunches that drew a few blasts of 2s and 4s meant for geese.

Patiently the men in the pits waited and, after a long period, dark forms of large birds could be seen milling around treetops skirting the refuge. Gradually the geese began working out into the cleared corn field where hunters were standing like soldiers in trenches.

This looked like the big chance, but the birds, although they appeared by hundreds, remained in a section of the field away from the pits. It was uncanny, and exasperating, watching flights of geese alight, just out of gun range, to feed on grains of corn left by mechanical pickers.

Still, a goose is a goose, and, after a time, the birds moved closer, the white-patched stockings of the Canadas clearly visible over the corn stubble.

There was an air of suspense because everyone knew that something had to happen soon. The geese, now numbering in the thousands, were very close to the front-line hunters.

Shots Stir Birds Into Action.

Suddenly, off to the right, two men jumped up and each fired twice in rapid succession. At once, the field of geese arose with a great beating of wings—a wonderful sight even if it hurt hunting.

As the vast flight of Canadas headed back for the refuge, we took two long shots in desperation and partner connected, tumbling a big bird out of the air.

The hunting outlook for the rest of the day seemed bleak but, fortunately, a few geese left the refuge from time to time and some of them passed low over the shooting area.

Two came close enough to our pit to be added to the bag. By 1 p.m., hunger and partner's jammed gun led to a decision to call it quits—one goose short of the limit.

A visit to the refuge in the early afternoon, before the trip home, showed what rascals waterfowl can be. While hunters in the corn field watched anxiously for sight of a goose, thousands and thousands of the birds—Canadas, Blues and Snows—contentedly stood about the refuge, in big bunches covering the fields.

The same birds that flare at sunlight glinting on the tip of a gun barrel or the sudden movement of a hunter's cap showed no sign of fear of two men peering from a red automobile passing close by.

O'Connor, Till Win Half-Mile Skating Races

Steady performances by Frank Till in the senior men's division and by Danny O'Connor in the junior boys' group featured city championship speed skating races at the Winter Garden last week.

Till, the defending city champion, defeated Harry Monteif by a scant two feet in an 880-yard grind in which Till took command on the fourth lap. Monteith's last-lap spurt made Till go all out to stay in front.

O'Connor, also racing one-half mile, took over with four laps to go and pulled away from Jon Mars, former National outdoor juvenile champion. Danny's time of 1:46.9 compared favorably with that of Till's 1:39. The junior division is for boys 14 and 15.

A neighborly bit of skate-sharpening by Arnold Van Mill, father of Juvenile Contender Jerry Van Mill, took a sharp twist when Howard Schulze won the 220-yard race in that division and young Jerry, an aerial acrobat in the summertime, was victim of a spill. The elder Van Mill had spent a good part of the previous evening sharpening and improving the skates of Schulze, the lad young Van Mill could not catch after picking himself up from his fall.

Ronald Hilbert, second to Schulze, also had help in skate-sharpening from Terry O'Connor, and what happened? Terry O'Connor also fell and was unplaced.

The city championship series at the Winter Garden preps skaters for the big event of the winter — the Post-Dispatch sponsored Silver Skates Jan. 15 at The Arena.

District Golf Group Approves Plan for $25,000 Carling Tourney

PGA Date, Host Club Sought

By Robert Morrison

The St. Louis District Golf Association has taken a step toward returning St. Louis to the big-time golf tournament map by inviting Carling's Brewery of Cleveland, O., to act as financial sponsor of a 1956 circuit event here.

John Wright, president of the Association, announced that the organization was unanimous in its invitation despite previous unhappy experiences in such promotions.

The next step toward the venture will be an attempt to obtain a P.G.A. tournament date in May, to secure a host club and then to reach a final agreement between the brewery and the co-sponsoring golf association here.

Closing of the arrangement will depend on ability to obtain the P.G.A. date and the golf course.

Robert C. Garretson, general advertising manager of Carlings, said the proposition is that the brewery will guarantee the promotion against loss.

The District Golf Association, at a meeting the past week, enthusiastically accepted the proposal, Wright said, and he added that he believed it certain that some country club could be obtained for the event.

Problems in Past Years.

"The significant thing is that the idea was unanimously received by the our organization after past years of banging our heads against a wall trying to promote tournaments," Wright said.

St. Louis last entertained a major professional golf tournament in 1953, when the Western Open was held at Bellerive. It achieved a small profit. Previous St. Louis open events had lost money and the cost was partially borne by some 200 guarantors.

The brewery which a year ago added to its holdings by acquiring the Griesedieck Western company in Belleville has been associated in golf promotion since 1952.

The company started sponsorship in Cleveland with a small $2500 event in 1952. The following year the tournament prize value was increased to $25,000 and the event was a feature for two years on the P. G. A. circuit.

Here the tournament would continue to be a $25,000 prize affair on the summer tour. Last year, the business firm combined with the national golf sponsors' association in holding the $50,000 Sponsors Championship at Boston.

Garretson said his firm would continue to support the Sponsors' tournament as a member of the Sponsors' Association but that the proposed 1956 tournament here would be a promotion similar to the tournaments held in Cleveland. He said there was no thought of trying to repeat the tournament in St. Louis year after year; instead it probably would be shifted from city to city.

Fans Wanted in Numbers.

The District Association's Wright said that if the tournament is scheduled, the district would approach the ticket-selling problem with the idea of securing the greatest number of spectators possible. Past philosophy on this point here has wobbled between a desire to make the event reasonably successful in a financial way but still limit the crowds to a manageable number. The result was golf tournament galleries never were large enough to worry about.

The Western Open tournament, held here two years running under an agreement with the Western Association, was dropped, Wright said, because the Western wanted to increase the prize money from $15,000 to $25,000.

That was the last of a string of major golf events that began in St. Louis in 1946 with the Western, continued with the National Open, the National P.G.A., the Western Amateur and two St. Louis Opens before the final effort of two more Western Opens.

Houston Rallies to Defeat Sun Bowl-Bound Wyoming

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 3 (UP)—The University of Houston broke loose for three touchdowns and Guard Jim Blackstone blocked a last-period punt today to spoil Sun Bowl-bound Wyoming's season-end game, 26-14.

But Wyoming's single-winging Cowboys, driving hard, brought from Texas Tech Coach DeWitt Weaver, who scouted the game, the comment that "they're a very fine team . . . we're going to have trouble stopping 'em."

Wyoming plays Texas Tech in the Sun Bowl at El Paso Jan. 2.

Wyoming, going down for its third loss against seven wins, had a good start. Wingback Wizzer John Watts raced around left end for 50 yards, with Fullback Ova Stapleton going over from the one-yard line for a quick first-period touchdown.

Houston, closing its season with a 6-4 record, took to the air after failing to solve Coach Phil Dickens's combination Split T-single wing offense and finding its own offense stopped cold on the ground.

Houston drove 72 yards before the period ended, with Quarterback Jimmy Dickey completing three out of four pass attempts for 40 yards. The Cougars returned to the ground and tied the score 7-7 in the second period with a 71-yard drive that put Fullback Donnie Caraway over from the one-yard line.

Wyoming's Joe Mastrogiovanni, the nation's leading rusher a few weeks ago, went out in the second period with an injured knee and was unable to finish the game.

HOUSTON	0	7	0	19	—26
WYOMING	7	0	0	7	—14

The third period was a standoff.

Houston came to life, scoring in the first 55 seconds of the fourth period, when Blackstone blocked Halfback Jim Crawford's punt on the Wyoming eight - yard and recovered. Cougar Fullback Curley Johnson went over in two plays.

Minutes later, Watts fumbled and Houston recovered on the Wyoming 18 and Halfback Kennie Stegall went over to score from the six. Stegall kicked but missed the extra point.

Stegall, the Missouri Valley Conference's leading scorer with 53 points, counting today's game, ran back a Wyoming punt 69 yards to the Wyoming 13 minutes later and Dickey passed to Donn Flynn for the third touchdown.

Maplewood Is Ranked First in Principia Meet

Some of the best teams in the district will get an early taste of tournament competition this week in the Principia event, a meet that is growing in prestige each season. Maplewood was seeded first and Kirkwood was ranked second. Both are expected to be among the leaders in the Suburban League this season.

Bayless, the perennial power in the South County, was seeded third, and the experienced Wellston team fourth.

The tournament opens tomorrow with four games. In the upper bracket: Country Day vs. Berkeley, 4:30 p.m., and Western Military Academy vs. Lutheran, 6 p.m. Lower bracket: Pattonville vs. Mehlville, 7:30, and Principia vs. Jennings, 9 p.m. The four seeded teams drew first-round byes, but will play Tuesday in games starting at 4:30 p.m.

Losers will play on Wednesday and Thursday, with the championship semifinals scheduled for Friday night, and the title game Saturday night.

Hawks Have Greater Depth Than St. Louis Bombers of 1949-50, Says Coach Who Knows Them All

By Harold Flachsbart

How do the rangy Hawks, who have delighted St. Louis basketball fans with their clever ball-handling and accurate shooting, compare with the St. Louis Bombers of six years ago, the team with which Easy Ed Macauley made his professional debut?

George Senesky, one of the original National Basketball Association players who now coaches the Philadelphia Warriors, pondered a few seconds before answering that one, because, after all, he played with the Warriors several seasons against the Bombers.

"There's no question but that the league is stronger all around today than it was six years ago," Senesky replied the other night at Kiel Auditorium before his Eastern - leading Philadelphia club was swamped, 108-95, by the swift-moving Hawks. "I'd say the front-line stars were just as good in those days—that is, the first four or five players—but there's no comparison with the squads of those days and today when you get down to the sixth, seventh and eighth men.

"You must remember that the Bombers, who wound up on top of the Western Division in 1948, were a last-place club in their last year in the league. I don't thing we were much better. (Actually the Bombers were last with a 26-42 record and Philadelphia fourth with the identical won-lost mark.) Today the Warriors and Hawks are both on top of the league standings."

That last Bomber team, which played under The Arena management, included, besides Macauley, such talented court stars as Johnny Logan (still living in St. Louis), Ephriam Red Rocha (now with Syracuse), jump-shot artist Belus Smawley, Don Putman, Ace Maughan and St. Louis U.'s D. C. Wilcutt, among others.

Senesky, a former St. Joseph's College star and rated as one of the greatest defensive players in the 10-year history of the N.B.A., said he honestly believed the Hawks had a "fine chance to win the Western Division title. A lot of things can happen over the course of a full season and the Hawks have a lot of young blood—just as we have—but they could go all the way."

Macauley, the former St. Louis University hero who as "everybody's All - America" made the Billikens a national collegiate power, will be here Tuesday night with the Boston Celtics against the Hawks in the feature game of a N.B.A. doubleheader. Syracuse and Fort Wayne are the first-game rivals.

Willie Hartack Rides 400th Winner, Also Draws 10-Day Suspension

Second in History to Gain Goal

MIAMI, Dec. 3 (UP)—Willie Hartack rode his 400th winner of the year today, the second jockey in history to perform the feat, then received a 10-day suspension along with a gold cup from Tropical Park officials.

The 110-pound rider passed off the honors and the suspension calmly as "all in a day's work."

Needing only one more victory to join Willie Shoemaker in the exclusive "400 Club," Hartack tried five times before he hit the winner's circle. Shoemaker rode 485 winners in 1953.

Hartack ignored the few "boos" and catcalls from the crowd of 11,359 after piloting favored Pete's Folly to a fifth-place finish in the featured De Soto handicap, but came right back in the eighth race to win by three lengths on favored Athena.

This time the fans roared their approval.

"I guess I'll go fishing," Hartack joked when asked about his suspension.

The stewards set him down for 10 days starting next Tuesday for allowing his mount—Grafton Street—to drift out in the stretch in the sixth race Friday. He finished second.

The five-foot-five jockey is scheduled to ride at least six mounts on Monday.

The son of a Balsona, Pa., coal miner, who will be 23 next Friday, said he wasn't aiming to top Shoemaker's mark this year and "wouldn't have time now to do it if I wanted to."

"I might have had a chance at it if I hadn't taken a 10-day vacation before I started riding here," he said.

Up North, Hartack was the leading jockey at every meeting he rode from start to finish. While finishing first at Washington Park, Hartack and Shoemaker locked in a personal riding duel and "Hard Tack," as the writers call the 1955 champion, came out on top.

Typical of the stunts that make him equally popular with the fans and tack room boys alike, Hartack donated his winner's purse today to a children's hospital.

Tim Tierney, Sherman Center lightweight, will meet Bob Lynn, one of Bill Bangert's boxers in an open match on the inaugural amateur boxing card of the 1955-1956 season Friday night at the South Broadway Athletic Club.

Vic Windle, an ex-boxer, coaches Tierney and says he's one of his best prospects for the 1956 Golden Gloves tournament. Tim scored three victories last season in the novice ranks.

Lynn advanced to the semi-finals in the novice division in the '55 Golden Gloves tourney and is rated as one of the top 135-pounders in the Open classifications this season.

Another match sends Alfred Costelli, Lincoln A.C. featherweight from Granite City against Elmo Hihn of the Jefferson Barracks team. Coach Gene McGovern who fought here during the late '20s and early '30s is bringing several other Granite City boxers here for the S.B.A.C. preliminaries. Hihn moves up to the novice division after having won three bouts in the subnovice class.

In another open match, Merle Taylor, S.B.A.C. welterweight, will oppose Gene Cartee of the Cherokee Center squad, in a rematch, the South Side lad having stopped Cartee in the third round in the Wellston Legion Post ring last spring.

"Which college basketball team won the N.A.I.A (National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics) tournament in 1955?" Paul Lange, 5241 Murdoch.

East Texas State defeated Southeast Oklahoma, 71-54, in the final round of the 1955 tournament.

"When was the last time the Cardinals played two games in one day with Brooklyn and what was the outcome?" David C. Chunn, 2643 Pine.

You probably have reference to Sept. 21, 1949, when Max Lanier beat Don Newcombe and the Dodgers, 1 to 0, in a day game and Preacher Roe defeated the Cardinals, 5 to 0, in the night game. Harry Brecheen was the losing pitcher.

Maurice Richard and Montreal's classy league leaders will call at The Arena Dec. 20 for a N.H.L. game with the Blackhawks.

SECOND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH was the scene Friday night of the marriage of Miss Marilyn Margaret Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Black, 18 Godwin lane, Ladue, to Charles Houston Haas. The Rev. William Sherman Skinner performed the ceremony by candlelight. Lighted tapers, entwined with greenery and tied with white ribbon, were attached at the centers of the pews and more candles cast a soft glow over the white poinsettias held in gold altar vases and the huckleberry foliage masking the choir stalls.

Black of Pasadena, brother of the bride, served as best man, while Elmer Benecke, Robert Mason, Manuel Snipes and Harl Haas, Cape Girardeau, Mo., a cousin of the bridegroom, were ushers.

Designed with a scoop neckline, long sleeves and a full skirt, the gown was trimmed with sequinned flowers at the neckline, wrists and waistline. A pearl-studded lace half-hat held her fingertip veil and she carried white camellias.

Her attendants were in Nile green chiffon fashioned with folds of the material, embroidered with seed pearls, on the bodice front and attached stole collars. The full waltz-length skirts were over taffeta. Bands of green velvet leaves with veiling attached were their headpieces and they held armsful of red poinsettias.

The reception was given at Bellerive Country Club. Among the out-of-town guests were the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Edward C. Smith, and Mr. Smith, Daytona Beach, Fla.; his sister, Mrs. Robert Roberts, Chicago; the bride's aunt, Mrs. Alfred Nichols, Pasadena; Mrs. Murel Walton, Mrs. M. Radar Island Like a Penthouse, Often as Isolated as North Pole

150 Men Have Nearly Everything Except Freedom — Storm Stranded Three for a Week.

By DON GUY

TEXAS TOWER, 110 miles off Cape Cad, Mass., Dec. 3 (AP)—The Air Force boys have finally found that wild blue yonder.

You can see it outside every porthole of this first offshore radar platform, a $20,000,000 artificial island standing on three legs in water 50 feet deep.

The 150 officers and men assigned to this station have nearly everything except freedom. You can't walk more than 200 feet in any direction of the 8000-ton triangular platform.

It is an air-conditioned penthouse decorated in 29 different colors but as isolated at times as if it sat atop the North Pole.

An Air Force major who dropped in for a four-hour visit recently stayed to dinner for a week. Pentagon appointments meant nothing, he couldn't leave until the weather cleared up and the North Atlantic in winter is famous for its cussedness.

The stranded major, Arnold L. Pach of Belmar, N.J., projects control officer for the Air Force, commented caustically as he finally got ashore: "It's obvious our greatest problem is just what trapped us— inadequate means of transportation."

Four Big Storms.

This reporter and A.P. staff photographer J. Walter Green were in the same party with the major, marooned for nearly a week while four big storms walloped the structure.

Boston, the nearest good harbor, is 150 miles away. Since the tower was towed to the shoal from Boston last July people getting on or off have had to be swung in a bucket from the platform deck 81 feet above the water. In good weather the chances of the 110-ton crane landing you on the bow of a ship are excellent; however, it is standard procedure to wear life jackets and unlace your shoes.

In rougher weather many passengers have been dumped rather than landed on the decks and some have spilled overboard and had be be fished out. In really rough weather, the maneuver is too hazardous to attempt.

As soon as present construction equipment is cleared away, the Air Force plans to service the tower by helicopter from Cape Cod. Capt. Charles R. Nicholson of Adamsville, Ala., top man of the permanent force already aboard, says he expects his men will be able to land two big piesacki double-roter "flying bananas" on the tower by folding wings of the first close to the radar deck. They carry seven men.

Range Too Short.

Smaller helicopters could make a safer landing on the limited deck space, but they do not have the range to venture more than 100 miles from shore and return non-stop if they cannot find the tower in a fog.

Aware that life aboard the tower is no picnic, the Air Force has developed a rotation plan whereby every job has two men assigned. The men swap jobs with a 30-day interval between the tower and the shore radar base at Truro on Cape Cod. If a man is unable to get off when his tour is up, his relief later spends a correspondingly longer period aboard.

The tower, nicknamed after oil drillings rigs off the Texas coast, is a self-contained unit with rows of machinery below decks. The three legs, 1000 tons each, are of two-inch steel, 10 feet in diameter and filled with stone and concrete. They are 200 feet long, the length being split up between 50 feet in the sandy bottom, 50 feet through the water and 100 feet in air and through the double-decked tower platform.

Seek Deeper Water.

George's bank, the fishing shoal where the tower is located, provided codfish for New England for two centuries. In stormy weather fishing vessels always run for the deeper water rather than ride out a blow on the treacherous shoals.

Some fishermen considered the fixed tower a sitting duck for the first big storm. They are more inclined to think it's here to stay after it weathered a 24-hour blow with hurricane-force winds in the recent series of storms. At one time two-80-ton fenders broke loose and battered the tower legs for hours until they destroyed themselves. The third fender was never installed, and the idea—protection against collision from a ship—has gone back to the drawing boards.

Living quarters are more like a modern ocean liner than the usual service quarters. Pin-up pictures, the service man's art gallery, become "tapeups" out here because every wall and partition is heavy plate steel.

The kitchen is a stainless steel all-electric housewife's dream. A big coffee urn is always handy for self-service. Meals by a skilled staff of chefs are served round the clock for men working night and day shifts.

Power comes from huge diesel generators in the lower decks. Fuel oil is the major item that must be brought to the tower by tanker ships and the unloading is much like refueling between Navy vessels in the open sea with a long hose brought aboard and fuel pumped from the ship far below.

Two separate installations pump up salt water and turn out 2000 gallons each of fresh water a day. One plant distills the ocean water, another separates the salt from the sea chemically. In addition, there are reserve tanks that can be filled from water barges in the calmer summer months.

The big radar tower, one of four to be erected off United States shores, will be covered with arctic domes, huge plastic bubbles maintaining their shape by air pressure. To enter and leave the domes you must pass through double doors making an air lock. Requiring no supports, the plastic domes eliminate the possibility of blind spots on the radar scopes.

The net result of the whole radar installation is that the nation's fixed protective fence has been extended 100 miles offshore.

AIR GUARD SEEKS TELETYPE OPERATORS AND REPAIRMEN

Vacancies for teletype operators and repairmen exist in units of the Missouri Air National Guard, Lambert-St. Louis Field, it was announced yesterday.

Men with previous military experience in these specialties are preferred, but prior service is not required. Additional information may be obtained by visiting the National Guard hangar at the airport, or by telephoning Pershing 1-0458, Capt. Joseph Platte.

BRITISH DEVISE AMMONIA BOTTLE AS SMOG WEAPON

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

LONDON, Dec. 3—Ammonia bottles are being distributed to the out-patients of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, as weapons against the kind of smog that killed 6000 persons in 1952.

The device, still in the experimental stage, is designed to counteract the acidity of the air during a smog. It is the air acid that has been implicated in the respiratory deaths during the great smog.

Actually a clue to the possible usefulness of the de-acidifying properties of ammonia was obtained during a farm show of pigs, sheep and cattle at Smithfield, England. During the smog the prize cattle kept in immaculate stalls, died; while the other animals living among more natural surroundings survived.

It was thought possible that the ammonia gas given off by the animals' litter counteracted the sulphuric acid of the smog, thereby protecting the beasts.

The device given out by the hospital is designed by the Atmospheric Pollution section of the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research. It contains a solution of ammonia with a wick. During a smog the wick is pulled up and the gas is released.

Powdery Snows and Warm Beaches

By Dorothy Brainerd
Post-Dispatch Travel Editor

It is a happy fact that there is no closed season on vacation fun; it's yours at any time of the year. True, the winds may howl and the sleet may fall in Missouri, but as the winter sun makes its appointed rounds it beams upon many a gay vacation scene.

It warms the soft breezes that waft over wide Florida beaches, it deepens the color of the azure seas and coral tinted beaches of the Caribbean. It is the magic ingredient in that tonic one breathes deeply at western resorts, and the glint on the snow of sparkling ski slopes. It shines indiscriminately on Europe's Rivieras, the black sands of Hawaii, and the colorful lands of Mexico and South America.

So follow it where you will; seek your adventure or relaxation at home or abroad. With modern transportation the world is at your fingertips—and remember, there are dreary days ahead at home.

SWITZERLAND SIGHT

One of the sights to see in Switzerland is at Jungfraujoch, where a railway station has been carved out of rock in the heart of a mountain, 11,000 feet above sea level. Next to the station is an ice palace of vaulted illuminated chambers carved out of the blue-green Alpine glacier.

Floors, walls, ceilings and supporting columns are of ice, thus making the spot the coolest structure in Europe.

Riviera Harbor at St. Tropez

—Pan American World Airways.

Europe's Unusual Theaters Intrigue American Tourists

IT'S OPERA and theater time in Europe. From Reykjavik to Rome, the brightest stars of the music and drama world are appearing before the footlights, providing a rich bonanza in entertainment for the transatlantic "Thrift Season" vacationist.

Many of Europe's operas, concerts and dramas are presented in auditoriums as interesting to the tourist as the performances themselves. Some are intriguing because of their tradition, others because of their sumptuous decor, their ultramodern design or amazing accoustics.

Typical of the latter, reports the European Travel Commission is the Royal Festival Hall in London, certainly one of the most remarkable concert halls ever built. Designed to achieve accoustical perfection, this auditorium (which seats nearly 3000 persons) is so constructed that all sounds seem to come directly from the stage without blurring reverberations, blending or echo.

In order to achieve this accoustical quality and to eliminate any sounds from nearby Waterloo Station, the entire auditorium has been hung from transverse beams supported, in turn, by concealed pillars.

On the banks of the "Beautiful Blue Danube," about a thousand miles from Festival Hall, is another marvel of the musical world. This is Vienna's majestic State Opera House which re-opened to international acclaim earlier this fall. The original building, gutted by fire during the second World War, had been painstakingly rebuilt to the tune of $10,000,000. Today, the great 700-room structure has been equipped with every modern innovation in lighting, stagecraft and comfort.

Another world-famous opera house worthy of note is the one in Paris. Although some auditoriums (such as the Radio City Music Hall) may be larger, the Paris Opera—built 'way back in the 1870s—remains the largest theatrical edifice in the world. Its breathtaking marble stairways, vast mirrored foyer and the gigantic chandelier (once the precarious haunt of the Phantom of the Opera) are all too well known to require description here.

France, of course, has many other intriguing theaters, ranging from the elegant home of the Comedie Francais which first swung open its doors in 1799, to the cozy little circular arenas of Paris' two permanent one-ring circuses, the Cirque Medrano and the Cirque d'Hiver.

Heading south into Italy, the "Thrift Season" vacationist will find other theatres and opera houses of unusual interest. La Scala in Milan, home of so many operatic immortals, is famed for its perfect accoustics, imposing dimensions and towering tiers of galleries. A far older structure, and one no longer used, is the Teatro Farnese of Parma, a small theater which dates from the early sixteenth century.

A final ancient European theater worthy of mention is far to the north in Sweden. It is the Drottningholm Court Theater in Stockholm, built in the 1760s and used until the early 1800s. It then remained closed for over 100 years to be "discovered" and restored in 1922.

What's Going On in the Dominican Republic?

(What makes it the Fastest-Growing Vacation-Land in the West Indies?)

THERE'S the blue-on-blue Caribbean itself : : : palm-fringed beaches : : : mountain grandeur . : : year-'round perfect climate.

There's the full slate of sports, and sightseeing as found only in the brilliant tropics. (Bring color film!)

There are those specialties of this "Land of Discovery" that make the American visitor feel so understood: spotless cleanliness . . . modern, beautifully-run hotels, resorts, casinos, etc. . . . the prevailing courtesy, and knowledge of English.

And at Ciudad Trujillo there's the International Fair for Peace and Brotherhood, opening December 20! This trade-exposition, of world-wide importance, gives the businessman a perfect opportunity to combine a business trip and a glorious family vacation.

MICHIGAN SPORTS

TWENTY-TWO special events during January, February and March will highlight Michigan's coming winter sports season. Increased and improved facilities at more than 40 winter sports centers will place Michigan high on the list of the nation's winter playgrounds.

Included on the calendar are nine winter carnivals and ice-fishing festivals, eight downhill and slalom ski races, two ski-jumping tournaments, two speed skating championship races and an ice revue. All of Michigan's principal winter sports areas are represented in the list.

COLORFUL VACATION DOWN IN LIMA, PERU

The winter vacationer seeking a holiday in a hospitable city that is fairly easy on the budget might well consider Lima, Peru. Lying on the west coast of the continent at the foot of the Andes chain, Lima is the center of the old Spanish dominions in South America.

Viceroys ruled Spain's colonies from the city for over 200 years. Today, the city of 800,000 persons has not allowed new world commerce, industry, or even tourists to take away its world charm and graciousness.

Ideal climate for visitors is from October through April (which is spring and summer), according to Braniff Airways.

Shopping is another delight for foreigners in Lima. The country is rich in silver and gold deposits, and sterling pieces ranging from jewelry to flat silver and tea sets may be obtained at bargain prices.

Sightseeing in Lima varies from a trip to Pachechemac, religious site of the Incas a few miles from the city, to the interesting old palace built for Perichola, beautiful mistress of one of the viceroys. Other favorite stops are the chambers where the Inquisition trials were held and Lima's cathedral, largest in South America.

TRAVEL AGENT REPORTS ON EUROPEAN SITUATION

Many new areas have been opened to the European traveler with the lifting of restrictions by the United States Government on travel to the Soviet Union, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Rumania, and general travel conditions are considerably improved, according to Harold W. Baine, president of the Mart Travel Bureau, who recently returned from Europe.

Baine attended the twenty-fifth annual International Travel Congress in Lausanne, Switzerland, Oct. 10-15, and later spent several weeks touring the Continent. He reports that one of the most interesting subjects discussed at the convention was the new European family plan air fare in effect Nov. 1 to March 31. The new low rate makes it possible for families to travel to Europe in Thrift season at the lowest cost in air travel history.

Dominican Republic Fair To Be Magnet for Tourists

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, Dominican Republic—Bending every effort to complete before Dec. 20 a gigantic International Fair in which 26 foreign countries will participate, the Dominican Republic is looking forward to the biggest tourist season in history.

The Fair, celebrating 25 years of peace and progress during which time the country has achieved political and economic independence, will be spread over 125 acres of choice Caribbean shoreline just outside this capital city. Costing an estimated $25,000,000, the Fair will dramatize the extraordinary progress achieved by the Dominican Republic in every flied—political, social, economic and cultural. Seventy-one buildings will house the national and international displays, dozens of nightclubs and restaurants will sparkle on the fairgrounds and a grandiose amusement area or "midway" will provide diversion for an estimated half-million sightseers. A swank casino will offer dignified gambling facilities in luxurious surroundings.

Stock men, flower and art lovers will have a field day at the Fair. Originally scheduled for a few months in early 1956, plans have expanded so that the Fair will be open for spring and early summer visitors as well.

Foreign Participation.
Among the participating nations building their own facilities and pavilions are the United States, Spain, Venezuela, Cuba and the Holy See. The United States is providing a spectacular atomic energy demonstration in its pavilion. The Holy See is sending a specially carved altar for its building. Spain will send exquisite Spanish arts and crafts and will provide the finest Spanish cuisine and entertainment.

Among the nations participating through exhibits at the International Fair are Argentina, Canada, China, Colombia, France, Germany, Haiti, Italy, Japan, Mexico, The Netherlands, Panama, Peru, Thailand, Martinique and Trinidad.

A magnificent International Book Fair, named in honor of Dona Maria Martinez de Trujillo, First Lady of the Republic, will be of great interest to scholars, especially Hispanic bibliophiles.

Magnificent murals by leading Dominican and foreign artists including Vela Zanetti, the Dominican painter who painted a dramatic mural for the United Nations in New York, will be part of the exhibition.

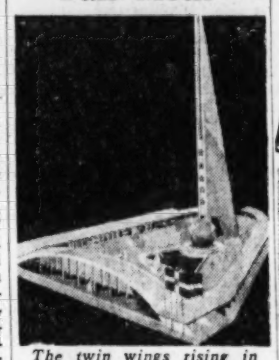
First-time visitors to the Dominican Republic will discover for themselves Dominican "merengue," a fascinating one-step featuring a slight dip which is becoming increasingly popular in the United States. The Tourist Office plans free instruction in the merengue, accompanied by native merengue musicians in the Tourist Office Pavilion.

Water and Light Theatre.
Every World' Fair has its super-spectacle. The Dominican one will be no exception. Paris at the turn of the century built the Eiffel Tower. New York in 1939 had its Trylon and Perisphere. The Rominican Fair will have a Theatre of Light and Water costing $1,000,000 and perfected by the great Spanish water display artist, Carlos Bugias, who is responsible for the magnificent Monjuich Fountains in Barcelona.

The Dominican display of colored illuminated fountains will be accompanied by beautiful music in keeping with the festive mood. The entire display will enhance the beauty of Ciudad Trujillo long after the Fair itself is over.

In addition to the International Fair, the Dominican capital will boast a number of other new tourist attractions. Among the most outstanding of these will be three magnificent new hotels.

Fair Motif



The twin wings rising in the background of this central motif of the Dominican Republic International Fair denote Progress and Peace, twin themes of the exposition.

CHRISTMAS EVENTS ON SCHEDULE AT HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

A visit to Hot Springs National Park, Ark., during the early winter season is a memorable one; the very atmosphere seems to be permeated with the warmth of the holiday spirit.

Streets are festooned with multi-colored lights; smart shop windows and lobbies of hotels and bathhouses are aglow with traditional decorations. Bath House Row, with its promenade lined with red-berried holly living Christmas trees draped with colored lights takes on added beauty, and on all sides the pine-timbered mountains cradle the city and park.

Many special events are planned for visitors. The high point of the season is the annual Christmas Eve presentation of the resort's "gift to its Yuletide visitors" in the national park at the north end of Bath House Row. The Pageant of the Holy Nativity is presented by members of the Hot Springs Choral Club and the Community Players. A candlelight procession of white robed choristers down the mountain trail to a tiered platform banked with evergreens is especially impressive.

Also included on the calendar is a program of Christmas music afternoon concerts, "Hanging of the Green" ceremonies, and the twenty-eighth annual "Candlelight Service."

JAMAICA'S COUNTRYSIDE

To get the real flavor of Jamaica, largest of the British West Indies, tourists are urged to visit more than one area.

Jamaica's countryside varies so tremendously from metropolitan Kingston and the tranquil rolling hills in the western Mandeville region, to the flat northern beaches and towering Blue mountains in the east, that visitors miss a lot if they confine their visits to just one area.

Bahamian Delicacy.
An important item of diet in the Bahamas is the conch—a large spiral univalve with firm, white meat used primarily for fritters, salads and chowders. Pronounced "conk," the pink-shelled marine life is harvested from shallow banks by Bahamian natives.

WINTER VACATION BULLETIN from SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Latest news about the attractions visitors like best in this world of warm sunshine and flowers

Palms and poinsettias. Typical "trademarks" of Southern California, seen anyplace here. Poinsettias twice your own height with fiery scarlet blooms as big as a dinner plate. Subtropic fan and date palms whose rustling fronds whisper a friendly greeting to you.

A magic isle. At Santa Catalina Island, 22 miles from Long Beach, you'll want to take the famous glass-bottom boat ride. Peer down into a great natural garden buried under the ocean: kelp forests, rocky castles, sea anemones. Sunken canyons, purple starfish, seagoing goldfish . . . And if you'd like to explore a Robinson Crusoe wilderness, head into Catalina's craggy hills. Wild mountain goats, boar and buffalo. A bird refuge with everything from eagles to talking mynas!

Hollywood at dusk. A sight you'll never forget. Head for the Hollywood Hills north of town as the sun slides into the Pacific, and the world's movie-TV-radio capital switches on its million lights. A winking carpet of lights from mountains to seaside.

Death Valley. Less than a day north of Los Angeles and rich in colorful scenes. Dry lakes where the Indians held horse races. Old borax works, abandoned gold mines, strangely eroded cliffs. Salt Creek with its inch-long salt-water sardines. The Funeral Mountains with their broad stripes of pink, brown, green . . . And at Dantes View see America's "basement" (Badwater) and "rooftop" (Mt. Whitney), her lowest and highest points, at the same time!

Winter camellia show. You've seen camellias, but wait until you get your first glimpse of Descanso Gardens. World's largest camellia show place with 48,000 plants, 800 varieties. Literally acres of blooms to feast your eyes upon (November-March). Pink camellias, snow-white ones and ruby-red beauties, all glowing softly under the gnarled old live oaks.

Movie star footprints. A "must"—seeing the Hollywood Blvd. theater whose forecourt has footprints and handprints of 125 film immortals recorded in concrete. An unusual history of the "picture business" from the sirens and sheiks of the '20s right on up to today's glamour queens.

Ships from all seven seas. At the harbor, an hour from downtown Los Angeles. See cruise liners steaming off for Yokohama or Le Havre; banana boats, freighters and tuna clippers docking from Panama, Reykjavik, the Galapagos. Salt air; seamen of every land; aromas of hemp and copra.

Warm sands and snow peaks. In the Colorado Desert 90 miles east of Los Angeles, there's a sight you have to see to believe. You stand on brilliant, sun-drenched sands and gaze at the frosty domes of Mt. San Gorgonio and Mt. San Jacinto . . . seemingly floating in the blue sky far above you. Summery warmth all around—fast ski slopes and mountain meadows not half an hour away!

Land of oranges. You've seen pictures of our famous orange groves. But there's no substitute for actually seeing them—stretching out mile after mile just an hour east of Los Angeles. Green, glossy trees . . . rich, golden fruit . . . with a backdrop of blue and purple mountains.

Home town of the stars. Beverly Hills, where so many top entertainers live, is just 20 minutes from downtown Los Angeles. Seeing these handsome canyon and hilltop homes is easy. Our All-Year Club Free Sightseeing Map spots homes of 80 big stars, guides you right to them. (See the coupon below.)

Subtropic city. You'll want to spend enough time in Los Angeles to see its many interesting sights. On Wilshire Blvd., you'll shop among palm, banana trees . . . Downtown, you'll explore our Spanish and Oriental quarters, see the Old Plaza where the city was born (1781) . . . You'll dine outdoors at a patio cafe, cruise cross-town in minutes on our new nonstop freeways!

This is only the beginning! You'll want to get in on the winter horse racing season, call on our old Spanish missions, soak up some sunshine, visit a Mojave Desert ghost town. And there's no better time than now! Most winter days are clear and balmy; sports are in full swing. Why not plan your Southern California vacation right away?

TROPICAL FORT MYERS

Located on U.S. No. 41, the Tamiami Trail, Fort Myers is the half-way point from either Tampa or St. Petersburg to Miami. It is a modern town of 20,000 persons, and serves as the shopping center for a five county area.

Adjacent to Fort Myers are the famed Island Beaches of Lee County—Fort Myers Beach, Sanibel, Captiva, and Boca Grande Islands. Facing on the Gulf of Mexico, these beaches offrr an extremely warm winter climate and a "South Seas" atmosphere that induces a relaxed and care-free mood.

Cattle Egret

This charming fellow, a cattle egret, is a top attraction on the Audubon wildlife tours in Florida. One and two day tours under the guidance of trained naturalists provide an opportunity to observe some 80 to 100 species of birds. Many vacationers visit Florida for the sole purpose of going on these trips, at present not offered in any other state.

Casual Living Stressed at Daytona Beach

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla.—A mistaken conception still exists throughout the North with regard to a Florida vacation. The feeling that Fabulous Florida is for the rich-in-pocketbook and not for the young-at-heart is erroneous.

The Daytona Beach Area, in the heart of the Sunshine State, caters to the visitor who isn't trying to or cannot go "all out" expense-wise. Casual living is within the reach of all. The "Motel City of the World" offers ultramodern accommodations, overlooking a truly beautiful beach at reasonable prices.

It is only natural that such a down-to-earth community would appeal to the sportsman. Play is the call of the day, and play it will be this winter. Three exacting championship golf courses are available for a very nominal greens fee. Fishing is usually rewarding whether it be surf, bridge, deep-sea, or fresh water. Water skiing is a major activity. Tennis, shuffleboard, lawn bowling, boating, handball, swimming and horseback riding round out the full outdoor schedule for the sport.

Sitting Pretty

—City of Miami.

This pretty vacationer wears a straw beach hat as she perches happily on a coral rock.

'FAMILY-TYPE' SUN SEEKER FINDS CLEARWATER IDEAL

Clearwater, Fla., located directly on the Gulf of Mexico and midway down the peninsular state, is fast becoming the winter playground of countless foHowers of the sun.

Comparatively moderate rates for a winter season have been established by motel and hotel operators.

Besides the sea and sun which can be found in most Florida Coastal locations, Clearwater offers a well-rounded vacation for the "family-type" sunseeker. Located directly on the improved Highway 19, the city is within comfortable driving distance of most of the state's major attractions, and the beach is safe for youngsters.

Sarasota Founding.

The founding of Sarasota, Florida, was conceived in Scotland and the town plat was drawn in Edinburgh. First sales from the plat of Sarasota were made in Scotland and England during the fall of 1885.

ACCENT ON SPORTS IN FT. LAUDERDALE

A city of waterways, Fort Lauderdale is the mecca for winter vacationers who are more interested in aquatic and outdoor pleasures than in night life.

To be sure, there is ample after-dark entertainment for those who desire it, but the accent in this busy resort center hugging the Atlantic between Palm Beach and Miami is definitely toward the wide-open spaces.

Next to the constant sunshine and winter warmth, the foremost attraction is Fort Lauderdale's spacious public beach. More than 30,000 can be accommodated on the five-mile strand at one time. For those who prefer fresh-water swimming to the surf, there are dozens of pools. Both the beach and the pools offer excellent sunning facilities.

Just as the climate is favorable for swimming, so it is ideal for boating, fishing, water skiing and kindred water sports. Many visitors make Fort Lauderdale their headquarters because of its 140 miles of picturesque inland waterways and the superb docking for boats available at Bahia-Mar yacht harbor and downtown along New river.

Others are lured by fishing. Big-game trolling off Fort Lauderdale for sailfish, marlin, dolphin, kingfish and countless other varieties is tops. The city sponsors a gigantic tournament for anglers from November through April.

FORECAST HEAVY TRAVEL TO MIAMI AND CARIBBEAN

Travel and resort authorities expect from 10 to 25 per cent more visitors to the Miami area this winter, according to a survey by the City of Miami News Bureau. More equipment and better service can be expected by all transportation facilities on the basis of this belief.

Eastern Air Lines will offer a 20 per cent increase in available seats. Its run will provide 10,000 seats daily in and out of Miami.

Delta looks forward to a 20 per cent gain from its points in the Midwest and Gulf areas.

The Illinois Central will operate more schedules to Miami starting Dec. 16 and will continue their vacation package plan through the winter season.

Warren Freeman, chairman of the American Hotel committee of American Society of Travel Agents, forecasts a 15 per cent increase in visitors to the area based on more reservations and heavier inquiries.

Airline and steamship officials expect more visitors than ever before to take advantage of Miami's proximity to Caribbean and Central American resort areas.

The Latin American division of Pan American World Airways, BOAC, KLM, TAN and Guest airlines estimate an increase in travel of from 15 to 30 per cent southbound. PAA forecasts traffic to Jamaica, Haiti, the Dominican Republic and Puerto Rico will double this winter.

RECREATIONAL PROGRAM AT HOLLYWOOD-BY-THE-SEA

The city recreation department has announced a wide range of activities for winter visitors to Hollywood-By-the-Sea, Fla. An average of five programs a week will be presented in the Hollywood bandshell, including concerts and variety shows.

The biggest production during December will be the annual Christmas Chanukah pageant Dec. 18-20. This musical presents the views and thoughts of Hebrews, Catholics and Protestants at this time of the year.

Other programs offered without charge include advanced palm craft, shellcraft, painting, enameling, Hawaiian dancing, sewing and dress design and exercise courses.

Vacationer May Spend Much or Little in Miami

MIAMI, Fla.—Sunning, swimming and fishing away from winter-time snow provided the parlay which established this city as a world-famed resort. This parlay still is the big deal in a Miami vacation. But new adornments constantly are being added.

This season you can visit the "world's largest salt water aquarium," cruise Biscayne bay in a paddlewheel riverboat while enjoying typical riverboat entertainment, or catch a preview, showing of a Broadway play.

The seasonal calendar of sports and cultural events developed over the years already is in full swing offering a variety of events and activities to choose from daily and nightly.

The horses are running at Tropical Park and the dogs at Biscayne Kennel Club. The Basque game of jai alai opens at Biscayne Fronton in mid-December.

The annual $15,000 Metropolitan Miami Fishing Tournament begins at the same time. Sailing and speedboat regattas are being held virtually every weekend on Biscayne bay, featuring skippers from all over the country in the top events.

The forthcoming holiday season is crowded with a full program of Orange Bowl Festival events.

The University of Miami symphony is presenting its regular series of weekly concerts featuring world famed guest artists. And the opera season opens in January.

Sightseeing in Miami is a fascinating experience for most visitors.

At one edge of town is an 800-year-old monastery transplanted from Old Spain. At the other extreme is the University of Miami, a showplace of ultra-modern architecture. Farther down the line is a coral castle, carved and erected by a single individual.

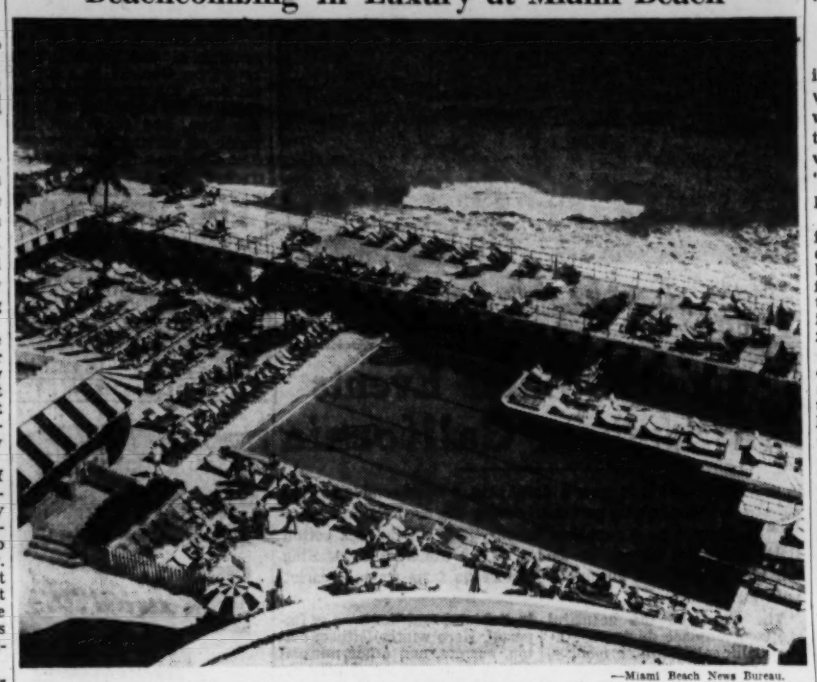
Most visitors make at least one sightseeing tour by boat. Various cruises, starting from the City Yacht Basin, offer views of millionaires' mansions on man-made islands in the bay, a glimpse of sea gardens on the ocean reefs, and moonlight cruises with dancing aboard.

Reef fishing trips from the City Yacht Basin can be made for as little as $3.50, and charter boats for private parties are available at $65 a day.

Thousands of angling fans find they get satisfying results fishing for free from bridges, sea walls and causeway banks in Biscayne bay.

This may serve to illustrate the fact that visitors today can spend as much or as little as they like for a Miami vacation. This applies both to entertainment and living accommodations.

Beachcombing in Luxury at Miami Beach



—Miami Beach News Bureau.

The ultimate in beachcombing luxury is provided by Miami Beach hotels with cabana colonies, swimming pools and sundecks overlooking the blue waters of the Atlantic. This is a typical winter vacation scene.

SUNSHINE PARK

The Orlando Recreation Department maintains one of the finest year-round tourist centers in the South, called Sunshine Park, located a few blocks from the center of the city.

Among the activities in the park are lawn bowling, roque, shuffleboard, horseshoes, chess and bridge.

Sunshine, Sea and Fun Miami Beach Attractions

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—The appeal of palms and seashore has never been more brightly furbished by vacation lodgings and recreation than at Miami Beach this winter.

Already thousands of season-long visitors are here, but thousands more hotel rooms and apartments await vacationers who will be arriving for the Orange Bowl festivities at the end of the month and for the fishing, swimming, golf and entertainment of the months beyond the year's end.

Three new hotels, half a hundred new apartment buildings and several sizable additions to existing structures have added accomodations for more than 5000 persons to a holiday spot that previously could house comfortably more than 125,000 visitors at any one time. Construction-wise, 1955 has topped the three preceding years by substantial margins.

Because of this great array of lodgings, and its complementing entertainment and recreation facilities, little planning need go into a Miami Beach vacation. Advance reservations are seldom needed except in mid-season. February and March, unless one desires some particular hotel or apartment. As for things to do and see, there's swimming, sunning, fishing, boating, golf, tennis, horse and dog racing, night clubs and a host of other diversions always at hand.

Despite its deserved reputation for luxury living, Miami Beach isn't solely for the wealthy. Those who need not count the cost can find here the ultimate in comfort, but those who must keep a weather eye on the budget still can have a fine visit.

If rates in the big oceanfront hotels are $30 to $40 a day, there's a modern and comfortable place across the street or down the block for a third or fourth that price. If your hotel or apartment does not have a swimming pool and cabana colony, there's a public beach nearby where the sun is just as warm and the water just as blue. If you are not a member of an exclusive private golf club, there are two excellent 18-hole links for public play within the city.

If every day at the races and every night at one of the supper clubs is too expensive, there are municipally operated civic centers where concerts, movies, chess and checkers, cards and dancing may be enjoyed at little or no cost. Tennis, shuffleboard and other games may be played in the parks.

Buses provide transportation almost everywhere within the city and to the mainland for a few cents, and sightseeing excursions to many interesting attractions for a few dollars. Events in the Miami Beach auditorium range from symphony concerts to collegiate basketball and professional boxing and wrestling.

Fishing at its best, for sail and marlin in the Gulf Stream, may be enjoyed all by yourself in a private boat with captain and mate for $75 a day. Or you can make up a party of six, split the expense six ways and have a fine morning or afternoon at the sport on the same boat for less than $10, bait and tackle furnished. Larger boats that drift fish over the reefs will sell space at $3.50 per fisherman for half a day.

TAMPA'S LATIN QUARTER HAS OLD-WORLD CHARM

Tampa, Fla.—A large budget is not needed by the traveler who wants to witness the old world charm of foreign countries. Each year, thousands of visitors take an inexpensive trip "abroad" in Ybor City—Tampa's Latin Quarter.

In Ybor City, the foreign flavor of Spain, Italy and Cuba can be found in a few square blocks. And unlike many other foreign settlements in this country, the Latin sector of Tampa is not just a window dressing for the benefit of visitors.

Tampa's Latin population tops 48,000. Spanish and Italian are spoken in Ybor City stores, restaurants, clubs and coffee houses—often to the exclusion of English.

Social life in Tampa's Latin Quarter centers around their clubs, theaters and fiestas which carry forward the highlights of life in the parent countries.

Besides its sightseeing attractions, Ybor City boasts the finest of Spanish restaurants. The atmosphere, food and service offered visitors matches the best of the Old World.

Visitors will also find the coffee houses, street vendors, curio shops and shoppers bargaining over items—just as in Spain, Italy or Cuba.

Several of the Tampa cigar factories have regular sightseeing tours of their plants each weekday. The visitor can watch skilled fingers turn out the finest of clear Havana cigars.

Many thousands of visitors have found a few days in Tampa are equal to a week in a foreign land. And a trip "abroad" in Tampa costs less in both time and money.

NO DECLARATIONS

Visitors to Jamaica, one of the fastest growing Caribbean playgrounds, no longer must fill out baggage declarations.

This document has been eliminated by the British colony for tourists as well as business travelers, according to Pan American World Airways. The move stems from an intensive campaign to cut travel red tape launched by the Airlines Association of Jamaica.

MISSISSIPPI BOASTS MANY IMPROVEMENTS

JACKSON, Miss. — Vacationers contemplating a trip to the Deep South this winter and spring will find that Mississippi has a full schedule of events for their pleasure, and that many resort area improvements have been made.

Pilgrimage events have been scheduled throughout March and April by such towns as Natchez, Vicksburg, Columbus and Holly Springs. The Mississippi Gulf Coast, an especially popular winter playground, also will observe Mardi Gras Festivities along with nearby New Orleans and Mobile.

During the past 12 months many improvements have been made along the Coast, following completion last year of a new 28-mile long man-made sand beach. Opened this month was the final link of a new super four-lane highway paralleling the water's edge from Bay St. Louis through Pass Christian, Long Beach, Gulfport, Biloxi, Ocean Springs and Pascagoula-Moss Point.

This area also has witnessed completion of a number of plush new motels, and most modern Coast hotels now boast their own swimming pools. Also in the planning stage are a number of new hotel additions.

Throughout most other sections of Mississippi from the Tennessee line to the Gulf, visitors will encounter many fine new motels, restaurants and improved playground facilities.

Upon entering Mississippi at the Tennessee border motorists will travel only a short distance before encountering the first of four new flood control dams, two of which have been completed in the last two years. They are located along U.S. Highway 51 between Memphis and Grenada.

Also recently completed is a new State Park overlooking the 30-mile Sardis Lake just east of Batesville.

Two hundred odd miles south at Jackson, the capitol, commanding arrowhead shaped signs indicate the entrance to the first 70-mile paved line of the historic and picturesque Natchez Trace.

Vacationers making the Gulf Coast their eventual goal will do well to bring golf clubs and fishing tackle. The area has four excellent 18-hole golf courses and some of the finest fishing waters to be found anywhere in the South.

Nassau's Paradise Beach

—Bahamas News Bureau.

"Sunshine in Nassau" is a familiar phrase to winter vacationers and it would be difficult to imagine a more appealing sunlit spot than the British resort city's Paradise Beach.

Many Midwinter Events In Southern California

MAKE A DATE to pick a date, plan a beachcombing party for midwinter, play golf nearly every day or watch thoroughbreds race on a sunbaked track. . . . Walk through cotton fields white for harvest or among 48,000 camellias in dazzling full bloom, or across an outdoor poinsettia farm waving scarlet with giant plants.

The rare and the beautiful are commonplace during southern California's winter months, when the sun shines 70 per cent of the time (according to United States Weather Bureau statistics) and visitors enjoy the out of doors most of the time (according to the area's All-Year Club).

Because of the subtropical climate, winter features some of the year's most interesting scenes and most enjoyable outdoor events — all within easy distance from downtown Los Angeles.

On New Year's day, rare and beautiful flowers combine with the designer's skill to build incredibly lovely floats — 60 of them—for the Pasadena Tournament of Roses. More than 3,000,000 blooms are used for the parade that takes three hours to pass a given point. The parade is followed by the annual Rose Bowl football classic between the top teams of the Big Ten and Pacific Coast Conference.

A short distance away, thoroughbreds race during the sunny winter at beautiful Santa Anita race track, also an easy drive from downtown Los Angeles. The winter racing meet, including six races each with purses of $100,000 or more, begins the last week of December and continues into March.

Riverside county's annual Date Festival and Camel Races are held in Indio during February. Indio is the capital of the lush Coachella Valley, the "Arabia of America," the only place in the Western hemisphere where dates are grown commercially. The festival includes an Arabian Nights pageant, freshly picked dates for visitors, camel races and an exhibit of the county's farm and mineral wealth.

Beachcombing is popular throughout the winter months, all along the 200-mile stretch of Pacific Ocean shoreline, from San Diego on the south to Santa Barbara. San Diego holds its annual New Year's day yacht regatta on San Diego bay, with some 30 sailboats racing across the "harbor of the sun."

Golf tournaments are held near the coast, in the valleys, and on the desert during the winter. The Los Angeles Open and the San Diego Open are held in January, and the Palm Springs Open in December. Brawley, in the Imperial Valley, sponsors a lettuce golf tournament, with the winner getting a carload of freshly-harvested lettuce, destined for eastern snow-covered markets.

California's Midwinter Fair is also held in the Imperial Valley in February—at the town of Imperial. Here winter lettuce, cotton, carrots, and other unusual winter crops are on display. At the same time, eight national groups which helped tame the Imperial Valley desert and convert it into a rich winter salad bowl for the nation are honored during the Festival of Nations.

Descanso Gardens in La Canada, in the foothills back of Los Angeles, is a rare spectacle during the winter months. Some 48,000 camellia plants, constituting the largest camellia garden in the world, are in full bloom — whites, pinks, deep scarlets, variegated varieties. The Gardens are now a Los Angeles county public park open daily.

Torchlight Procession.

The Christmas festivities at Sun Valley, Idaho, are gala and colorful, with the jingling of sleigh bells, carolers singing familiar Christmas hymns, and the traditional visit of Santa. High-lighting the celebration again this year will be the torchlight procession of 75 ski instructors and ski patrolmen down Dollar mountain.

NEW SKI RUN

Sun Valley's new ski run, partly completed last year and called in lieu of a better name the Question Mark, has now been officially christened Holiday Run.

It also has been extended during the summer to meet the sunny open slopes at the top of 9200-foot Baldy mountain.

Some skier arriving for the opening of the Union Pacific resort on Dec. 17 is going to ski down the great timber-free ridge to the beginning of Holiday Run, and then have the thrill of carving the season's first ski signature down the untracked slopes.

Young Brave

Indian ceremonials that antedate the coming of the white man dot the calendar of holiday activities at Santa Fe, N.M. Here a very young brave performs with a junior size tom tom. Many colorful Indian dances are scheduled at nearby pueblos between Christmas and New Year's.

Tucson and Phoenix Both Ideal Winter Resort Spots

Swimming Pools and Sightseeing, Horseback Riding and Dude Ranches All Part of Modern Arizona.

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Thirty miles east of here, at Apache Junction, Highway 60 loops off for an 80-mile stretch that runs to the twin cities of Globe-Miami. The country around it is desert and high mountains and some of the scenery has acquired colorful names, such as Cathedral Rock and Walls of Bronze.

The highway runs straight into the Roosevelt dam area, which is desert irrigated into miles of bright-green farmland. One mile beyond the dam a side road leads to the Tonto Ruins, the finest cliff dwelling in southern Arizona. This whole stretch of road is State Highway 88; in other years it was the Apache trail, a marauding ground for Apache braves who came down from the big mesa country.

What has happened to this road personifies modern Arizona. The trail is gone, replaced by a fine highway. But the terrain is exactly as it was in the days of the Apache raids: open desert, spiked with tall cactus; mountains the color of bronze, a big sun in a big sky.

Both this city and its sister resort center, Tucson — 120 miles to the southeast and 60 miles from the Mexican border —lie in the heart of the Apache trail region.

Each year the area is attracting more and more winter vacationers, and the 1955-1956 season is expected to be the biggest yet. There's not much danger, however, of anyone being crowded in these wide open spaces. There is plenty of room for everybody.

Resort owners say that a large percentage of their guests come from the Midwest area—St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Detroit—according to American Airlines.

One important factor in the growth of the tourist business here has been the rapid increase in the number of lower-priced accommodations. Particularly in December — the beginning of the season—rates at guest lodges, dude ranches, motor hotels and resorts are lower than they will be during the height of the season from January through May. Even during the heavy season, however, there are facilities for any type budget.

The differences between Phoenix and Tucson are in size and altitude. Tucson is 2400 feet above sea level; Phoenix is 1080. That makes for slight —but only slight—differences in temperature. The weather in both places is warm and dry and at night temperatures drop 30 or 40 degrees. A daytime reading of 90 may give way to a bracing 50 or 60 in late evening. Neither city is exposed to wind or smog.

In the winter, there is skiing on the mountain slopes. A mile or so below, vacationers use swimming pools which are just about standard at all ranches and resorts. In between these extremes, there is practically an endless range of activities for visitors — riding, square dancing, sightseeing, gold and uranium prospecting (though it's not necessary to find these to finance a vacation), rodeos and Indian ceremonials, golf tourneys and county fairs, theater and music—and just plain loafing.

It's possible for the vacationer to turn western—fancy western with dude outfits or working western with coarser garb, or he can live as he does at home.

Phoenix, with a metropolitan population of 266,000, lies at the edge of the great mesa country, in what Phoenixites call the Valley of the Sun, geographically described as the Salt River Valley. The Grand Canyon and the Painted Desert are north of Phoenix; the high mesa land is to the west; the White Mountain-Blue Mountain fir and evergreen region lies to the east and northeast.

Phoenix is the state capital and the largest city in Arizona. It also is a resort town, as distinct from the "working" and "dude" ranch accommodations stressed in the Tucson area.

Tucson, with a population of 118,000, lies athwart the road which runs to Nogales and south along the west coast of Mexico to Hermsille and Guaymas, the great fishing resort. It is a modern city, but if one looks carefully it is possible to find the places where the old Pueblo wall once stood as a defense against Indian raids.

Within driving distance of the city are Tombstone and Nogales, the Casa Grande Ruins, Colossal Cave, the fabulous Painted Rocks and Gateway Pass, the open-pit copper mine at Ajo, the San Xavier del Bac Franciscan Mission founded in the seventeenth century, and the Tumacacori Mission on the road to Nogales.

'ETERNAL SUNSHINE' IS CLAIM OF MEXICO

Approximately 500,000 Americans every year cross the Mexican border into the land of "eternal sunshine," where temperatures vary only slightly and there are no sharply defined seasons.

Sightseeing in Mexico is a pleasure at any time of year, with attractions for everyone. For those who want fun there are magnificent resorts and all kinds of sports, golf, deep-sea fishing, exciting jai alai games, mountain climbing, hunting or just restful relaxation.

For the student of archeology there are pyramids and ruins of ancient cities which were once thriving metropolises, constructed by industrious Indians centuries before the white men from Europe landed to overrun and conquer the country.

For the traveler interested in Mexico's history, culture and architecture magnificent sixteenth century churches and edifices are open to visitors, and historic monuments, museums, cultural institutions and even massive government buildings invite study.

Life moves at a consistent enchanting pace in Mexico, whether in the cosmopolitan capital of Mexico City or in picturesque villages off the beaten trail. Nearly every day is a fiesta day in some Mexican province or town, and on feast days descendants of the ancient Toltecs, Aztecs, Chichimecas, or Mayas tribes will turn out in colorful regional costumes to participate in picturesque dances that have remained unchanged throughout the centuries.

On other days they stroll past the tourist in native costumes on their way to market.

Everything in Mexico pulsates with vitality and color according to Delta Air Lines. Bullfights attract crowds of visitors every Sunday from October to March; horse racing takes place from October to July; there are night clubs and cabarets and dancing and floor shows; restaurants with every type of food; theaters and many shops featuring such products as textiles, handcrafts, jewelry, leather and suede articles and perfumes.

Side trips to such points of interest as Cuernavaca, Taxco and Acapulco are a "must."

No passports are required for entry into Mexico. A tourist card, valid for six months, can be obtained at any Mexican consulate or from border immigration officials. A small-pox vaccination also is needed.

SNOW FOR WINTER FUN? PLENTY OF IT IN CANADA

What's so tough about the Canadian winter? Ask any of the thousands of vacationists who head for Canada when the snowtime season's at its peak. They'll tell you the Canadian winter is one of the year's most delightful seasons, and, legend to the contrary, it's far from being frigid.

Take a look at the record of average winter temperatures in typical Canadian cities. Vancouver's January temperatures average 36 degrees Fahrenheit, Banff's nine above, Toronto's 23, Montreal's 14, Charlottetown's 18. These are a long way from being Arctic-style thermometer readings.

Coupled with these reasonable temperatures is plenty of winter sunshine, which means that in the Laurentians, for example, one can suntan in the shelter of an ice palace in easy fashion, and shirt sleeves aren't out of place on the sundecks of the area's ski lodges. Better make the shirt one of flannel or woolen fabric, though; after all, it is winter.

Not that there's any shortage of snow in Canada. Even Vancouver gets an average of close to 29 inches, while Quebec enjoys a 124-inch average fall, and Montreal 112 inches. Toronto, so near to New York State, has better than 61 inches of white magic in an average season.

Living Christmas Tree.

The world's largest living Christmas tree at Wilmington, N. C. will be lighted Dec. 17, and its 4000 colored lights will shine each night through Dec. 31.

NEW YORK CITY A FAIRYLAND FOR CHILDREN AT CHRISTMAS

New York City is a land of enchantment for children during the Christmas season.

All of Manhattan's famous stores will be gaily decorated, and for one of the world's most exciting free shows there is nothing like a window shopping expedition along the City's great thoroughfares.

Youngsters are enthralled by the wonderful Christmas tree with its thousands of sparkling Christmas lights located among the towering sky-scrapers of Rockefeller Center.

There are special concerts for children, stage shows and movies, as well as special art exhibitions.

LAWYERS SPLIT OVER CHANGING JURY SYSTEM

Some Urge Revision, Others Oppose It — All Agree Standards Could Be Improved.

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP)—Have you ever served on a jury? How many times have you begged off, on the ground that whatever you do for a living is too important?

Your answers may be the key to an even more important question:

Is something wrong with our jury system?

Many in the legal profession think there's no better way to make certain that an accused gets the treatment to which he is entitled. Others think there is need for a change.

One group which is studying whether there is such a need set off a storm when it eavesdropped on a number of unsuspecting juries in Wichita, Kan. The fact that presiding judges and attorneys for both sides were in on the planting of concealed microphones and mechanical recorders did nothing to still the outrage in high places.

Laws to be Sought.

As a result, the Department of Justice, as well as a number of legislators, have announced they intend to seek laws when Congress reconvenes next month, making invasion of privacy of the jury room a federal offense.

Trial by jury has been traced back to Frankish origins, and may even go back to the Romans. It has survived with few basic changes through the years, and the Wichita incident, set off by a University of Chicago research team, brought reactions like that of the Senate Republican policy committee, which called it further evidence of "the insatiable curiosity of intellectuals to peer into the private lives of citizens."

Dean Edward H. Levi of the University's law school, explained that the study—under a $1,400,000 assist by the Ford Foundation—is "solely to improve the jury system."

Shortly before the storm broke, Dale W. Broeder wrote in the University of Chicago Law Review a resume of criticisms of the system, commenting at one point, that "consideration and comparison of the functions the jury is thought to perform should provoke a study of the whole system."

Agreement on One Point.

Although the jury system has a few strong critics, it has many strong defenders. At only one point, apparently, do they see eye-to-eye: standards in the selection of jurors can be improved.

Court of Appeals Judge Jerome Frank maintains that the system "will remain the weakest link in our judicial system, reform it as we may."

Harold R. Medina, a colleague of Judge Frank on the Court of Appeals, says, "It has not been a perfect instrumentality for justice, but no more so is the administration of the Government of the country."

The solution to the problem, he adds, lies in improved techniques in selecting panels of prospective jurors; better methods of juror training, better methods of instructing jurors; more careful screening processes to weed out those unfit—physically or mentally—to sit in judgment.

One of the "soft spots" in the system, he says, is the almost incredible number of exemptions from jury duty provided by the laws of the various states.

Exemptions Listed.

Although there is no uniformity about the exemptions, in most states they include at least some of these:

Lawyers and their clerks; stenographers and secretaries; physicians; dentists; pharmacists or druggists; embalmers, undertakers, morticians or funeral directors; optometrists; chiropractors and osteopaths; veterinarians; nurses; teachers and professors; clergymen; certified public accountants, actuaries; newspaper reporters, editors, publishers, printers and linotype operators; radio announcers and engineers; certain railroad employes; seamen, pilots and steamboat personnel; ferryboat men, employes of telephone and telegraph companies; express company workers; bank tellers, cashiers and bank presidents; millers; government officials; firemen; national guardsmen and militiamen; police; attendants in institutions such as almshouses, state hospitals and asylums; mail carriers and postal employes; jail employes; fish and game wardens; forestry agents; customs house officers; coroners and overseers of roads.

"This doesn't make sense, does it?" asks Medina. "These exemptions should be cut down radically if we are to get the best possible jurors."

Jurors' Handicaps.

In addition to being critical of the selection processes in juries, Broeder and Judge Frank are also critical of the function of the jury.

"Feats of memory required of a jury are prodigious," says Broeder, citing a common law rule forbidding jurors to take notes.

He says that jurors usually have no means of separating crucial facts from trivia; frequently remember emotional and dramatic incidents instead of significant ones. He points out the jurors are operating in a strange and unaccustomed place—an arena of conflict, a trial surcharged with emotions, a courtroom often crowded.

To all this defenders of the jury system disagree—except in the matter of exemptions.

Judge Frank, who has repeatedly suggested a three-judge panel as a substitute for trial by jury, has pointed out that such a procedure would speed up the administration of justice and cost less money.

One state supreme court judge, a former trial attorney and former district attorney, conceded that such a system would cut down the backlog of cases.

"However," he added, "the purpose of a trial is the administration of justice, not to cut corners in the interest of saving of time and money. I feel very strongly that any attempt to listen in on jury deliberations—with or without consent—seriously interferes with the right to a fair trial.

"The only thing wrong with the jury system today is that too many of the people who talk glowingly about the impartial administration of justice, the right of a trial by a jury of one's peers, a citizen's responsibility to vote and serve on juries, are unwilling to make the sacrifice themselves.

"There's nothing the matter with the jury system that a better attitude by our citizens about jury service, wouldn't cure up instantly. You don't need concealed microphones and tape recorders to figure that one out."

JEEP WHICH BEGAN TRIP IN ALASKA IS NOW IN CHILE

SANTIAGO, Chile, Dec. 3 (AP)—Frank and Helen Schreider have checked into Santiago on a 20,000-mile run by amphibious jeep from Alaska to South America's lower tip.

In high spirits despite hardships in crossing rivers, jungles and swamps, the Schreiders, of Valley Center, Calif., soon will start out on their final 3000 miles to Tierra del Fuego.

Before reaching their goal they must cross the generally rough waters of Magellan Straits—"and we are going to cross it, and not on the ferry," said Helen, who is 29 years old.

Frank, 31, and his wife saved for eight years to buy and fit their jeep and finance their dream trip which started from Circle City, Alaska, in July 1954.

Since then the Schreiders — and their German shepherd dog Dinah—have crossed some 125 rivers, navigated 600 miles in the Pacific ocean, hacked their way through jungles and scooted ahead of sharks.

BLONDE TEACHES DETECTIVES THEY ARE MERELY MEN

Class Flunks as Cute Decoy Keeps Eyes Off Make - Believe Public Enemy No. 1.

By HILLEL BLACK

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3 (AP) —An unobtrusive man and a blue-eyed blonde, wearing a form-fitting sweater, sat down in front of 20 of the city's most keen-eyed detectives.

The woman told the officer at the desk that she needed a pistol for her protection, inquired about getting a permit.

As they talked, she looked over the other men in the room.

"My, but it must be wonderful to be a detective," she trilled.

The policemen grinned. A few minutes later, she and her companion left. Three minutes after that, the door burst open, an FBI agent rushed in.

"That man who just was here," he exclaimed. "He's Public Enemy No. 1!"

"Okay," said the man who had done the questioning, turning to the others. "Describe him."

Was There a Man?

About half the group chorused: "What man?" Others variously described him as wearing a brown suit, instead of gray, and put his age at from 42 to 50. He was 31. Without a doubt, their eyes had been on the blonde.

"The class flunked that one," said Norman McCabe, special agent in charge of the FBI here, "but they learned something that will be hard to forget—just how little people actually see and remember."

McCabe was running a class, part of an FBI training program, and this was an observation test. The blonde and her companion were both from the FBI, too.

The 20 handpicked city detectives who attended the intensive course—100 hours of study over three weeks— also were shown FBI tricks and techniques in collection and preservation of evidence, surveillance, arresting and disarming suspects, emergency firing with either right or left hand.

They were taught how much hearsay evidence is worth, too.

Scrambling Message.

An FBI agent whispered this sentence into the ear of one of the detectives: "The girl said that three men would bring the car to Thirteenth and Columbia Avenue."

In turn, each detective whispered it to the man next to him. The sentence finally came out: "The girl said that three men were laying down in the back of the car at the corner."

Then one detective remembered that midway in the relay, he forgot to mention the girl. What he wanted to know, he said, was how did she get back into the message?

The FBI also impressed on its students the importance of the commonplace.

A policewoman posed as a suspected shoplifter. While two of the students questioned her, she fondled a folded newspaper. Once she even dropped it and picked it up again.

The detectives ignored the newspaper, didn't bother to examine it. When the interview was over, they were told that it contained the incriminating evidence they were looking for.

Thomas J. Gibbons, Philadelphia police commissioner, was so enthusiastic about the course that he plans to set up two more for other detectives next year.

Some Gratifying Results.

The course, McCabe said, "is designed to sharpen the wits of the student so that he will retain what he sees and hears and be able to put true facts together. These lessons show how difficult it is to see and hear accurately."

Near the end of the course, McCabe was willing to concede that progress had been made.

A man, carrying a water bucket, rag and safety belt entered the classroom. The detectives eyed him with care, noting the color of hair and eyes, facial characteristics, clothes, then eagerly volunteered their observations.

"It was the most perfect description of a window cleaner you ever heard," McCabe said. "Actually, though, he had nothing to do with the course. The man just came in to clean the windows."

CONFERENCE NEXT SATURDAY ON TRAFFIC COURT PROBLEMS

A one-day traffic court conference for judges, prosecutors, policemen, lawyers and other interested persons will be held Saturday at University City City Hall, 6801 Delmar boulevard, starting at 9 a.m., under auspices of the Municipal Judges Association of Greater St. Louis in co-operation with the Northwestern Traffic Institute and American Bar Association.

Speakers, on a wide variety of subjects related to traffic law enforcement, will include James P. Economos, director of the American Bar Association's traffic court program; Robert L. Donigan, Northwestern Traffic Institute counsel; Municipal Judge Earle W. Frost of Kansas City; Col. Hugh H. Waggoner, Missouri Highway Patrol superintendent; Judge Laurance M. Hyde of the Missouri Supreme Court and Dr. R. B. H. Gradwohl, director of the St. Louis Police Department laboratory.

Still Carrying 75-Year Torch.

BUCHAN, South Africa, Dec. 3 (AP)—Hugh Fraser Ross was going to be married in 1880, but the girl's uncle stopped the wedding because she was only 16. Less than a year later she died. "I never wanted to marry another," said the old British soldier on his 103rd birthday.

Moorish Maidens Have No Wish To Be Veiled Harem Beauties

They Would Rather Have Husband to Themselves, Study Sociology—Traditionalists Blame Ben Youssef's Daughter.

By ERNIE HILL
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

TANGIER, Dec. 3 — In this land of Moorish palaces, dancing girls and the harem, the womenfolk are becoming dissatisfied with wearing veils and being one of a number of wives.

No longer is it the ambition of teen-age Moorish beauties to join the Sultan's harem. They want to study sociology and have a husband all to themselves.

To those who cherish the old order, these modern ideas are most distressing.

They blame Princess Lala Aicha, 23-year-old daughter of Sultan Sidi Mohammed Ben Youssef of Morocco, for putting these ideas into the heads of Moroccan girls.

Wears Paris Clothes.

Princess Aicha has discarded the veil. She wears Paris clothes, drives a fast automobile, rides horseback in pants and urges other young women to break with the past.

An organization called the Union of Young Moroccan Women has been meeting here.

The Moorish maidens have come out flatly against polygamy, harems and white slave traffic.

"We must make homes for our husbands and share their lives," says a beauty named Hamida. "That must be our goal.

"To those of us who wish to become doctors and professional women, we must be ready for our husbands to have another wife or two to do the work in the house."

Zakia, another young emancipated woman, says that Moorish girls do not want to become suffragettes or bobby soxers. They just want normal busy lives in homemaking.

Survey Among Men.

Another woman, Noufissa, says she has conducted a survey among young Moroccan men about the kind of wives they want.

"I have found only one Moroccan man," says Noufissa, "who disagrees that equality is a good thing. This young man insists he wants his wife to be a quiet little doll able to alternate between the role of wife and dancing girl. She would read only cook books. He would deny her every right of a cultural life.

"But it is one stroke of the bell that is exceptional."

The Moroccan women are the first to admit they have a long way to go.

Wealthy men prefer to have three or four wives under Moslem law. They like their women to wear veils covering their faces and to stay home awaiting the master's return.

The number of women who have discarded the colorful flowing jellabahs and contrasting veils in favor of western dress is extremely small.

Rules for U.S. Airmen.

The 10,000 American airmen based in French Morocco are excluded under the agreement with the French from marrying any of the native girls.

Religion and tradition are still very strict and the Union of Young Women realizes it will be several generations before they are allowed to hold jobs, vote and send their husbands down to the corner to buy groceries.

Change is coming gradually, however, and the day will arrive when even a Moroccan sulton is limited to three or four wives and barred from having a harem full of teen-aged beauties to adorn his life.

Mohammed was explicit on the matter of having more than one wife so that will not be changed so long as the Koran is the holy word of Islam.

WARTIME ERSATZ COFFEE STILL POPULAR IN REICH

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 2 (AP)—The unpopular ersatz coffee of wartime is a big seller now in Germany.

Some people prefer its taste to the real thing, but its biggest appeal is the price, less than a tenth that of real coffee. The latter, imported from South and Central America, costs 10-20 marks ($2.40-$4.75) a pound, depending on the grade.

In World War II, the substitute coffee was made from roasted barley or oats, mixed with sugar beets or sweet turnips. Barley is still the principal ingredient but manufacturers have improved the flavor. Ersatz also has been made available in "instant" form.

MIRACLE HEARING AID INVENTED BY ENGINEER

NO CORD!

Worn Entirely in the Ear

Audiphone Company Exclusive! A completely new type of hearing device has been announced by Mr. K. A. Dahlberg, president of hearing aid manufacturing firm bearing his name.

This new "Miracle Ear" can be worn in the ear, he said. There are no cords, wires or tubes in any manner connected with the device, and the complete unit weighs less than ½ ounce.

Mr. Dahlberg added that no longer do the hard of hearing have to put up with bulky batteries or headbands. It absolutely eliminates clothing noise because there is nothing at all worn in the clothes.

It is truly a miracle ear, and for the first time true, panoramic hearing is possible, eliminating the blind spots in hearing.

Mr. Dahlberg continued that this is something for which hard-of-hearing people have waited a long time, and states that his company is proud to be the first and only company to offer this electronic miracle to the hard of hearing.

SAUDI ARABIAN RAKES U.S. FOR BACKING BRITAIN

Spokesman Says London Invents Soviet Threat in Order to Extend Own Imperialism.

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

CAIRO, Dec. 3—A slashing attack on the Middle Eastern policies of the United States, Britain, Turkey and Iraq was delivered here in a private interview by Yussuf Yassin, deputy foreign minister of Saudi Arabia. His country is in the market for weapons denied it by the United States, he said.

Yassin had just finished a rough session with Henry A. Byroade, the American ambassador here, presumably dealing with deteriorated Saudi-American relations.

Often the spokesman for Prince Feisal, the Saudi Foreign minister, Yassin is a dark, intense man with a black, pointed beard and a firm, hard manner. He mixes bitter accusations of the United States, from whose oil men his government obtains a $250,000,000 annual oil income, with complaints that his past overtures have not been heard.

The Saudi Arabian gesture in renting the United States a bomber landing field was "unrequited."

Rakes Imperialism.

"The Near East will improve only if the United States stops supporting British and French imperialism," he asserted. He called the British capture of the Buraimi oasis "the worst act of international treason since Pearl Harbor." Saudi Arabia lacked weapons to retaliate, he said, because the United States had stalled Arab efforts to buy them.

The blow by draftees from the Trucial Oman "with British officers" has shaken the standing of King Saud with the 100,000 nomads of the region affected.

"We are not worried about losing a few oil lands," said [illegible]. "But how can we tell [illegible] people that we are pulling out, abandoning our tribesmen to the British?"

The disputed Persian gulf frontier is 400 miles long, he said, and has a fixed population of 62,000 scattered in seven states, all under British protection.

Terms U.S. a Sucker.

In terms unusual for a diplomat, but specifically authorized for publication, Yassin hit the new American-subsidized alliance of northern barrier states against Soviet aggression. He struck especially hard at Turkey, Iraq and Britain, and represented the United States as an innocent sucker hoodwinked into belief of a Russian menace by the British.

Asked whether the Saudi dynasty did not feel its oil wealth in need of protection from the Soviets, Yassin replied: "The British have sold the Americans the idea of a Soviet danger in order to dig deeper into Iraq and perpetuate their influence."

He represented Iraq as seething with potential revolt and ready to desert the American-subsidized alliance with Turkey, Iran and Pakistan as soon as "public opinion" can be heard. When war breaks out, "a new crowd" will take over in Iraq, he said, suggesting that Iraq would then fall in with the Egyptians and Saudis, turning against the West.

Arab Iraq's role as ally of Turkey is artificial, he said. "The Turks hate the Arabs. The Arabs hate the Turks, their former masters. If animosity has rank, the Israelis are No. 1 enemies of the Arabs, the Turks No. 2."

No Criticism of Russia.

Iran made a mistake accepting American aid, he said, "because it interrupted friendly approaches by the Soviet Union." Pakistan stumbled into the American alliance "because the United States realized that Pakistan needed weapons not against Russia, but against India."

The whole Baghdad pact was rejected by Saudi Arabia because it would "turn us into a battlefield," he said. There was a danger of a Soviet-American war in the Middle East, he admitted, but he refused to criticize Soviet policy in the slightest particular.

He accused the United States of stalling on providing arms "exactly as it did with Egypt. After 10 years' talk we cannot buy a single tank. The Americans sold us armored cars and they were defective. We lay millions of dollars on the line and get only questions like 'Are you ready for this equipment? Can you use it? Do you need it?'"

"We warn the United States: We have dollars and can get arms anywhere. Continue following the policy of old maid Britain and you will get negative results and lose the Middle East."

U.S. YEARBOOK ON WATER OFFERED BY REP. PRICE

Representative Melvin Price (Dem.), East St. Louis, has some copies of the 1955 yearbook of the Department of Agriculture available for his constituents on request, he announced yesterday. It is titled, "Water," and consists of 752 pages on many aspects of the use of water.

The boog has 95 chapters, and covers such topics as the importance of water in history, desalting sea water, weather cycles, irrigation, drainage, farming in dry regions, sewage disposal and water laws.

Price suggested that requests be sent to his Washington office.

Children's Books To Suit all Tastes

A Yuletide Abundance of Good Things

By MARY JANE RANDOLPH

REFLECTING the abundance of good things at Christmas time, children's books for Christmas giving are off the press in bounteous number, ready to extend part of the happiness of this full season into the coming year.

Books of all sizes, types, and colors heap the counters: Really fine literature of today and yesterday, the world's best poetry, fairy tales, hero tales, legends, fables, biographies, nature stories and humor; also trash—the world's worst tales of unrestrained violence.

The discriminating shopper, with an eye to quality, will choose from the pile of children's books with the same care evidenced by his progressing from glove counter to shirt department, list of sizes in hand. Only by so doing will he find the perfect gift for the perfect child—the enduring book of restrained emotions, the book to establish desirable standards and crystallize good taste.

Old stories become new for a new batch of children, toddler to teen-ager, in The Illustrated Treasury of Children's Literature, a beautiful collection of some of the best of the past, edited by Margaret E. Martignoni (Grosset & Dunlap, $4.95). For the very youngest, the exquisite opening section on slick white paper carries original pastel illustrations of Beatrix Potter's "Peter Rabbit," Palmer Cox's own adorable "Brownie Year Book," unforgettable selections from Eugene Field, Christopher Morley, and A. A. Milne, as well as Mother Goose illustrated in beautiful colors by Leonard Weisgard, Kate Greenway, and C. B. Falls, to mention only a few.

The greater part of the book is devoted to selections for the middle grades and for older children. Samplings from "Black Beauty," "Tom Sawyer," "Huckleberry Finn" and "David Copperfield," as well as that greatest of children's books, "Little Women," are likely to arouse in the child the desire to read the entire classic.

INCLUDED also are endearing and, I believe, enduring contemporary works: Felix Salten's "Bambi," Mary O'Hara's "My Friend Flicka," and Marguerite Henry's "Justin Morgan Had a Horse." Many fine poems are interspersed.

Reading aloud from this collection will be a source of pleasure for another generation to come. The title index for quick reference and the format, featuring end papers lithographed in full color, durable attractive binding, and colorful jacket add to its appeal.

Children four to nine will be delighted with a revised edition of Favorite Stories Old and New compiled by Sidonie Malsner Gruenberg, with illustrations by Kurt Wiese (Doubleday, $3.95). Grown-ups, too, will enjoy these ageless stories from all the world, from all time: Tales of laughter, animal stories, myths and fables, Bible stories, fairy tales and Irish, Dutch, Persian, African, Swedish and Chinese folk tales.

For pre-school children, animal stories predominate. Dogs, frogs, budgie birds, horses, rabbits, deer, kangaroos, and bears, bears in great numbers, take turns occupying center front.

Ludwig Bemelmans, on the inside paper jacket of Parsley (Harper, $3.50), says, "Instead of reading about this book, just turn the pages and take a look."

Despite the fact that she brings out four new books this year, Miriam Schlein maintains the high standard set in her first three "concept" books for the youngest lookers and listeners. In Big Talk, illustrated by Miriam Schlein's husband, Harvey Weiss, (William R. Scott, Inc., $2.25), the illustrator-author team employs wonderful full-page pictures and advisedly simple wording, in limited quantity, to show that growth requires a clear realization of where we are now and, above all, faith. Big and little kangaroo activities demonstrate the point.

LAZY DAY (William R. Scott, $2), another of Miss Schlein's understanding stories which stress the importance of a child's feelings, opens with a truly lazy boy sprawled across a double-page spread by her illustrator husband Harvey Weiss. In Puppy House (Whitman & Co., $1.75), Miriam Schlein combines the familiar with just enough new ideas for the young child's growth. Katherine Evans's lively pictures, many of them in color, assist toward this end.

It's About Time (Wm. R. Scott, $2), is a Schlein concept book in which Leonard Kessler's amusing drawings help make a point, as they did in "Heavy Is a Hippopotamus" and, "Fast Is Not a Lady Bug." On two consecutive years, the last two books won recognition in The New York Times's "Ten Best Illustrated Books of the Year" for children.

Patsy's Pet, written and illustrated by Charlotte Steiner (Doubleday, $1.50), parades a variety of impossible pets for apartment house dwellers. Finally and happily just the right one is found. Surprise! A Budgie bird!

The incomparable Margot Austin in Brave John Henry (Dutton, $1.75), illustrates with the droll, distinct pencil drawings of an expert the kind of make-believe boy-dog-cat story that is really funny to little children.

Bear books galore will afford visual pleasure for the picture-book age and mental exercise for beginning readers. A Ball for Little Bear (Aladdin, $2.25), is an Ojibway Indian legend charmingly retold by Emily Brown, with illustrations by Dick Mackay.

In Marian Flood French's whimsical Mr. Bear Goes to Town (Follet, $2.), the humanized bear maintains as he flees from the staring crowd, "People should not frighten bears." Lisl Weil's two-color pictures move this funny story along fast.

Smokey the Bear is a true story by Jane Werner Watson (Simon & Schuster, $1). Feodor Rojankovsky's wonderful, large paintings of the New Mexican bear world include one easily read sign: "Smokey's Rules" which list the precautions children can take to prevent fires in the bears' world.

Despite the absurd name, Kewtee Bear by Allan Reed, Bert Stout, and Truman Quigley (Children's Press, $1.50), is something special for Christmas giving. The gay little story is chock full of Katherine Evan's brilliant illustrations in color.

Dahlov Ipcar in World Full of Horses (Doubleday, $2.50), paints with simplicity full-page pictures for her story of horses in grandfather's day and today.

Old timers have been revived. Frog Went A-Courtin', the old, old ballad retold by John Langstaff, is superbly illustrated by Feodor Rojankovsky, (Harcourt, Brace & Co., $2.50).

A-glitter with the color, light, and atmosphere of each season is Thornton W. Burgess's Stories Around the Year with Phoebe Erickson's exquisite paintings of animals, large and small (Grosset & Dunlap, $1).

As for this year's Peter Rabbit, a supersized picture-book splendidly illustrated by Leonard Weisgard (Grosset & Dunlap, $1), I feel nothing can surpass the inimitable Beatrix Potter's own pastel pictures of her own story, slick white paper, postage-stamp sized edition and all.

The Walt Disney edition of Ward Greene's Lady and the Tramp (Simon & Schuster, $1), is, of course, from the motion picture.

Children three to eight may be led to some of the world's fine poetry in The Golden Picture Book of Poems selected by Ilse Hayes Govoni and Dorothy Hall Smith with pictures by Grace Dalles Clarke (Simon & Schuster, $1). Here are poems by Rose Fyleman, Walter de la Mare, Carl Sandburg, Vachel Lindsay and many other perennial favorites.

MANY of the picture-story-books delight both the toddler and the beginning reader. Artist-author Lucy Ozone gives us such a book, All in One Day (Whitman, $2). In it, she very cleverly illustrates familiar daily activities for the very young child and hand prints in large letters on each page one, two, three, or four words to describe these activities. The words may be referred to frequently by the child learning to read.

Snow Birthday, by Helen Kay (Ariel, $2.50), has a surprise climax that is fine fun for small children; Barbara Cooney, a favorite children's artist, collaborates with illustrations in four colors.

A year's batch of children's books would be incomplete without a new story from another favorite, Laura Bannon. In The Little Sister Doll (Albert Whitman & Co., $2), this author-illustrator tells with picture and story about a birthday party, a lost doll, and a faithful dog. Little girls will love it.

Gene Zion's The Summer Snowman, with pictures by Margaret Bloy Graham (Harper, $2), is a gay picture book in colors. Gayest of all is the original humorous story.

Children's manners are minded in two very acceptable books, both free from moralizing. For pre-school to seven-year olds, Dr. Frances R. Horwich of television fame writes Miss Frances' Story Book of Manners (Rand McNally, $2.95). With the aid of Nina Gow's two-tone illustrations, basic manners are covered entertainingly, conveying the realization that they make life more pleasant for everybody.

In Manners to Grow On (Doubleday, $2.50), Tina and Manning Lee, her illustrator husband, deal with the basic consideration for others which results in good manners. It is well organized and attractively illustrated, for children six to 12.

Seven to 10-year-olds may choose from a host of absorbing stories by fine writers. Competition with TV is threatened if the child receives any of the following:

The House at the City Wall, by Sophie Schieker (Follett, $2.50), a worthwhile story of family life in an old German town is enhanced by Howard Simon's fine pencil drawings.

Nancy Dingman Watson's Toby and Doll (Bobbs Merrill, $2.75), is a choice book about a Vermont boy and his devoted dog. Expressive illustrations in line and color are by Alden A. Watson.

Alta Halverson Seymour gives us The Top O' Christmas Morning (Follett, $2.50), a story of Ireland and the fifth of this author's thoroughly delightful annual Christmas - around - the - world - books. Mary Stevens's soft pencil drawings enhance the flavor of the Irish countryside.

Betsy Warren's The Donkey Sat Down (Steck Co., $1.50), is a humorous account of the beast called Taffy because he was so hard to pull. Pages of the jolly story are salted with the St. Louis-born and reared author-artist's illustrations reminiscent of the country south of St. Louis on the Mississippi bluffs where Mrs. Warren vacationed as a child.

Another St. Louisan, Alice R. Meyer, gives us Through the Moon Gate (Comet Press, $2), a slim book of entertaining short stories from the Orient. Appropriately, pen drawings add to the beauty of the understanding short stories and make them more real to the child.

Nature of the Short Story

Either It Flies or It Falls on Its Face

By JESSAMYN WEST

THE short story form is an ever present temptation to the writer to try to pass a miracle; it is an invitation to avoid the laborious construction work which the novel requires for its presentation of human beings, in favor of the lucky (or inspired) lightning bolt which will reveal in one blinding flash an event so significant that those persons involved will be seen with a clarity which even prolonged narration cannot achieve. The word, please note, is "clarity," not "completeness."

The short story form invites the writer to be a semi-wizard, a near-poet and an extended epigramist; it dares him to hit upon by divination or incantation or desperation the event, the action, the situation, which will reveal not only the nature of the human beings involved in the action, but which will indicate the direction their lives are going to take because of it. While it is true that there is not time in most short stories to show characters developing or changing, there is time to show the event, after which one feels the characters will never again be quite the same.

When this suggestion of change is done successfully, the reader participates in the action of the story to a greater degree than he does in the action of the novel. His participation is greater because he must infer more. The language of the short story is more highly charged, the action more symbolic, the conclusions less concretely "demonstrated." The reader has to do more for himself in the short story than in the novel and to this extent the popularity of the short story in the United States may be interpreted (if one wants to be a little fanciful) as a part of the do-it-yourself craze. Or it may even be regarded as one form of audience-participation show.

THIS does not mean that the reader of the novel does not participate in, identify with, and empathetically experience what is going on in its 490 pages. It does mean, however, that there is more "demonstration" in the novel than in the short story. The short story has to suggest more per word than the novel. A nimbus of unexpressed but suggested meaning hovers over its surface.

The short story might be defined as a pact between reader and writer to permit 5000 words, three or four characters, the span of a few hours or days, and the interrelations of the characters during this short time to convey meanings of a more than temporal significance.

I keep emphasizing the reader in this discussion of the short story because without the great increase in the present day reader's narrative alertness, in his desire to have meanings suggested rather than spelled out and his preferences for an evocative rather than a pedestrian language, the modern short story could not exist.

I use the word, "modern," to indicate that short story whose action is significant in terms of what is narratively yet to be, and which accepts the fact that a man is what he does. These two presumptions exclude the older self-contained "end-stopped" story and the need to describe and talk about the characters.

The present day reader says to the story writer: "Do not tell me 'about' these characters. Let me, instead, see them involved in an action in which they expose themselves sufficiently for me to be able to infer what they are like." So the modern short story is the result of a pact by which the writer, with the reader's consent, attempts to bring off the miracle of multum in parvo. If no reader sees the multum in the parvum, the miracle has failed.

The short story writer's arts and techniques are the visual aids by which he hopes to make his revelations apparent. The miracle of the short story, like that of any art, is the removal of blindness in order that the non-apparent can be seen.

The short story writer takes a greater risk than the novelist. The novelist does not attempt these lightning strokes of revelation. It is true that there are great satisfactions to be had from even what is called a "pedestrian novel." The short story, however, cannot be pedestrian. Either it flies or it falls on its face.

A POET, I have forgotten which one, was asked why he did not write novels. He replied something like this: "The novelist is always having to write sentences of this kind—'True to her promise, Mrs. Pembroke, dressed in the cobalt blue merino in which Henry Bolingbroke had first seen her, appeared punctually at 4:30 and waited impatiently until Percy, the new coachman, drove up behind the matched greys, to take her to what well might prove the most momentous rendezvous of her life.' I cannot bear," the poet said, "to write sentences like that."

The short story writer, like the poet, has to write fewer sentences of that kind than the novelist. If the short story is like, in some respects, what is most up-to-date, the do-it-yourself and audience participation crazes, it has its resemblances also and without any contradictions involved — with the Elizabethan stage.

I say "without contradiction" since the Elizabethan stage had its own do-it-yourself and audience participation characteristics. The audience then set the stage for the playing of the dramas it saw, just as today the reader of the modern short story accepts a minimum of realistic stage settings in the matter of backgrounds and costumes.

For a time the modern short story appeared to be limiting itself by the assumption that there was some magical virtue in telling the story from a single point of view. All stories are obviously told from the viewpoint of someone. Not to recognize this and to use the particular way of telling best for each story is narrative folly. But to make the consistent use of a single viewpoint one's standard for measuring the merit of a story is folly of a less limited order.

The best story tellers today shift so subtly from viewpoint to viewpoint that many of the layered meanings and riches of the novel are encompassed in the shorter form. This is the direction, I believe, in which the best short story writers today are moving.

IT is true that the single viewpoint can, by its limitations, intensify. It can do for the narrative what a fountain's mechanism does for the flow of water available to a fountain. The water of a fountain, forced through a single aperture, goes higher, emerges more showily and makes a more distinct, if also more artificial sound than if managed in other ways. I am holding no brief against fountains. I do however admire water in other forms also.

Most of my own stories have been written from a single viewpoint. I am, as of the present, a believer in the riches of the multi-viewpoint.

But, methods of telling aside, I cannot hear the word, "short story," without experiencing some of the same quickening of breath and tightening of veins that I experience when I hear the word, "poetry." The short story has neither the poem's incandescent flash nor the novel's steady daylight sunshine. But it combines elements of both with a candle power not to be sneezed at. Or sneeze if you want to. This is a candle whose flame won't be put out easily.

Notable Novels Of 1955

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN

THE most provocative novels that came to my notice during 1955 were of European origin. I did not read the whole list so it is possible that some domestic product of the purest and most arresting quality may have escaped me. But it seems unlikely that it also would have been ignored by the other watchers of the skies.

In any event, Dr. Thomas Mann's tour de force of erudite humor known as "The Confessions of Felix Krull" is an immensely engaging book, one of the few that could be read a second time with the certain knowledge that its freshness would not be diminished. Felix Krull is a rascal but a rare one; so rare that some of his victims regard it as a privilege to be duped with such consummate style.

What distinguishes Felix Krull from the ordinary rogue is the dynamic power of his artistic impulses. It is this, rather than a vulgar yearning for riches and power that leads him to an instinctive rejection of conventional morality. In a sense, therefore, he represents the artist in action. At the least he resembles the artist in that he undertakes to light up the world with his imagination and to hypnotize his audience into a suspension of disbelief.

"Not Honour More" by Joyce Cary is memorable for its passion. The communicated intensity is what gives the novel an enveloping warmth and makes it possible for the reader to identify himself with a central character whose humanity has been warped.

"THE CYPRESSES BELIEVE IN GOD," a two-volume opus by Jose Maria Gironella, deals exhaustively with the agonized period of modern Spanish history that preceded the Civil War. As history it suffers from an obvious pro-Franco bias; but its penetrating analysis of Spanish mores and Spanish character makes it quite evident that the immediate causes of the war were not the basic ones.

Then there is the unique Ivy Compton-Burnett, whose "Mother and Son" is another exercise in the kind of humor that seems to be without a recent prototype. It consists almost entirely of dialogue and everybody talks alike. Moreover, the plot, of itself, is as implausible as a Victorian melodrama. Its dry, pungent style is what counts and it counts in every page. These were the Europeans.

Having referred to style several times, I must speak of Jessamyn West, whose discussion of the short story may be found in another column on this page. A collection of short stories published as "Love, Death and the Ladies Drill Team" illustrates Miss West's faculty for telling much in little. The affecting nature of these stories owes as much to what's implied as to what's revealed. But the reader is never left wandering in a maze of possible meanings; his imagination is directed with a fine precision. Each of these stories is not only a marvel of compression; it conveys as well a breadth of humane feeling and suggests a rich antecedent background.

I WAS strongly impressed by the "Loved and Unloved," a novel by Thomas Hal Phillips, which revolves around a fatal enmity between two Mississippi boys, and am surprised that so little has been written about it elsewhere. Mr. Phillips has both literary and human sensibilities. I am sure he will be heard from again.

In "The Changelings" by Jo Sinclair, a predominantly Jewish neighborhood in a Midwestern city is threatened by an "invasion" of Negroes seeking better homes for themselves. The irony of this war between the poor and the poor is not lost on the author but she is affected more deeply by its pathos. Both the characters and the general scene are observed closely; and their defects and qualities are sympathetically described.

Robert Ruark's "Something of Value" is a comprehensive documentary treatment of the "Mau Mau" rebellion in the British Crown colony of Kenya. Despite its vulgarity and sensationalism, it is fundamentally an honest document and certainly it is a revealing one, vivid in detail and convincing, most of the time, in its characterization. These were the Americans.

Books for the Anxious

A Voluminous Literature Tell Us All How to Lighten Our Burdens or Lay Them Down

By A. M. BUCHAN

ANNE MORROW LINDBERGH

IN a recent interview, Edward Weeks, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, expressed a hope for "a book about the prevalent feeling of insecurity, the increase in the number of cases of melancholia, alcoholism, mental sickness." It could, he said, be a great subject, very moving. And so, of course, it is, but an even more moving and symptomatic subject is the prevalence of books on this very topic. A slight glance at today's publications and a sampling of a few best-sellers suggest that modern man, and perhaps even more noticeably modern woman, spends most of his days with a finger on his spiritual pulse, feeling for the missing beat that indicates how he, too, is a sufferer from the heart-sickness of our "age of anxiety."

A heading for a whole category of today's books is Samuel Smiles's old title, "Self-help." Is a man hurt, or lonely, or tense, or worried, or restless, or irritated, or anxious? Some prophet or other is prepared to tell him how not to be. Does he suffer, as all mortals must, from a lack of peace of mind or soul? Somebody advises him in a book how to lay his burden down. Does he find no meaning in life, and is he oppressed with the "problems" of his days? He is given rules on how to live healthfully, and how—with the hope, one imagines, of discovering a Grail—to embark on the quest for meaning and the search for identity.

He is offered the gift of power and reward and self-knowledge, and only a handful of his mentors remind him, as Socrates and the Preacher of the Old Testament do, that power is fleeting, that the reward is in the seeking, not in the goal, and that self-knowledge hurts as deeply as it heals.

HOW has it come about, this fever of self-examination? Here again there are books and books with ready answers. Some blame it, in the fashion of nineteenth century Positivism, on two world wars, a depression between them, and the haunting fear, within the last year or two, that a fantastic prosperity cannot last. Because one of the common means of diagnosis is a variant of Freudian theory, the cause of the disease is laid at Freud's door equally as remedies for it are expected from psychoanalysis. Poets and sensitive folk, like Anne Morrow Lindbergh, trace their malaise to the increasing complexity of civilization and are eager to go to the sea or the mountains or a Trappist monastery for the simplicity and solitude and the "world to oneself" that are certainly hard to obtain in the city.

Even the sociologists, not usually prone to this kind of speculation, wonder if an urban existence strips from man the sense of "belonging" that he used to rely on in the small community, turning him into a spiritual Ishmael, a rootless wanderer on the face of the earth.

In former times, it would seem, people were less troubled than they are now over the "quest for identity." They were fairly content to be identified with a church or a farm group or a piece of earth no broader than a wagon could traverse in a day's journey. Especially was this true for a woman in yesterday's world. Except for the rebel who, like Virginia Woolf, pleaded for a room of her own, she found her happiness in caring for house, family, and a narrow range of community chores. Her identity was not so precious or distinct as to be lost in devotion to family and friends.

HER daughter, on the other hand, is oppressed, as were Mrs. Gruenberg and Krech, with the "many lives of modern woman" in her roles as wife, mother, and individual. Having even wider responsibilities than her mother's for the children's care and the husband's welfare, she adds to the total of her yearnings one for a "rich, vital, and satisfying life" of her own.

So, believing that times have changed and that new habits of living have bred a new discontent, the man or woman of today finds the old doctrines of self-help unedifying. The self-reliance that Emerson advocated for his generation appears brazen to an age that finds "self" unrecognizable since Freud and Jung reduced it to fragments that only the analyst may disentangle. The ancient Salvation Army formula of welcoming the sinner in—still operative in Alcoholics Anonymous as in the Army itself, and backed in principle by the authority of no less a person than Dr. Erich Fromm—has a taint of too much simplicity to appeal to quasi-sophisticated moderns.

The Gospel of Work, though given an up-to-date gloss of advice on how to live 365 days a year and make each day count, frankly leaves today's citizen feeling very weary; he is tired already from the pressure of too many duties and the conviction that many of them are worthless anyhow.

Even "service," the standby of pulpit and club, has a rather obnoxious odor when many a man, busy serving and saving his neighbor, is dubious about his own happiness. "What must I do to be saved?" he asks, in Bunyan's familiar phrase, and he has the right to inquire, when so many physicians—ministers, psychiatrists, psychologists, sociologists, poets, artists—offer advice, how many of them have first healed themselves.

ON the surface, the glut of books about anxiety and confident living as an antidote suggests that our generation is enduring an acute attack of spiritual jitters. A shrewd commentator on marriage remarks that "a crisis is not hopeless until it is fully dramatized," and certainly it is fashionable to play the role of the Anxious Person. A girl quarrels with her boy and Martha Carr's column puts her on a stage. A wife is bored with her husband and Dr. Peale airs her grievance in Look magazine. Like every other woman, a gifted woman finds less time for art or solitude than she would like to have, and she dramatizes herself as the victim of age-long tyranny.

Not content with being analyzed, a form of self-dramatization in itself, a goodly number of psychiatry's clients provide Dantesque accounts of their journey through the hell of depth psychology.

In spite, however, of this sickly habit of merely brooding over symptoms, a deep-seated restlessness is apparent in our society. Whatever its causes, our anxiety may go no deeper than our parents', though it appears to be more widespread. After several generations of education and economic opportunity, the average modern man sees ahead of him far more ample goals than his grandfather had. He has a chance to become not one but many men—father, worker, citizen, thinker, poet. All of these many men he would like to be, and, being human, he can not be, or, at least, not in the front rank everywhere. So he must put up with "frustration" as best he may.

FOR this kind of person, the advice that Dr. Peale and his associates offer is admirable, in spite of highbrow sneers. It focuses on the measure of contentment to be found in doing a little job well, living agreeably with one's neighbors, and having confidence that problems can be met as they arise. On such a code, with a leaven of faith added, the wilderness was conquered.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh's "Gift from the Sea" goes deeper than this into questions about the "self" that have troubled poets and mystics for centuries. On holiday to an island, she tries to discover once again a belief in herself that has been nibbled away by the teeth of too many duties.

She pleads for simplicity and solitude to heal the wounds of her soul, in this plea being one of a great company that includes Thoreau and Alice Meynell, Amiel and St. Theresa. More and more strenuously, physicians are making out this prescription for the current restlessness — enough of a holiday from business and people and newspapers and the telephone to give one a sense of being on top of the day's incidents instead of feeling smothered by them. It is a well-tested recipe for spiritual sanity.

IN the area of the moral and mental illnesses of today, only the experts are competent to speak—about alcoholism, neuroses, deviations from our accepted codes. These serious disorders send far too many into hospitals, and they keep perpetuating themselves from generation to generation. Now they are fortunately being discussed in books for the layman, but he must remember that he is no more capable of handling them than he is of setting a fractured bone. In this caution Dr. Peale is much wiser than some of his critics, being willing to recommend a psychiatrist when a personal dilemma is serious enough to warrant it.

In fact, what is really surprising about today's publications is the amount of sane and useful advice being offered on the spiritual ailments of our time. For a few dollars, any man or woman may have a diagnosis, hints of a typical case-history, a set of do's and don't's not too hard to follow, and, what is most comforting, a conviction that he is not the only sufferer.

There is a catch, however. It is one that doctors of body and soul have known from the beginning—that nobody, by taking thought or by reading a book on self-help, can add a cubit to his stature. Apparently a cloud of anxiety is part of the human climate. The heart of man is restless, and the saints have hinted that it should be. So that the only advisers to guard against are the ones who cry peace where there is no peace, offering an easy and inadequate comfort. Among the gifts from the sea that Mrs. Lindbergh may find in her next book is the one of perpetual restlessness, for this gift, too, the heart of man prizes.

Decline of Fiction in Last Decade

By A. MERVYN DAVIES

WHAT has happened to fiction in the literary market? Why has it apparently dropped from its old time top place on publishers' lists? Has the quality of fiction changed—or is the drop in sales due to a change in the taste of the reading public? To what extent has television affected the situation?

The Post-Dispatch put these questions to a group of book publishers and received in reply answers which, while varying considerably, throw some light on contemporary America's reading habits, the changes that have occurred in them, and the outlook for the future.

There is general agreement that there has been a decline, both relative and absolute, in the bookstore demand for fiction — although Edward E. White Jr. of J. B. Lippincott Company declares that there is nothing wrong with the fiction market that some really good fiction might not cure.

According to Malcolm Cowley of the Viking Press, bookstore sales of best-selling novels have declined by 50 per cent or more in the last nine years. Other types of fiction have declined less.

In fact, according to Mr. Cowley, the audience both for good collections of short stories and for symbolic, or avant garde, fiction has grown rather than declined since World War II.

BUT the fact that in the bookstores nonfiction has grown more, and fiction less, important does not necessarily mean that there has been a change in public taste. The decline in bookstore sales may reflect merely a change in methods of distribution.

Thus a novel with a bookstore sale of 50,000 copies may have a book-club sale of 300,000 and a soft-cover sale of more than half a million, and another million might borrow it from libraries.

That there has been a definite change in public reading taste is indicated by the fact that in 1940 the magazines of America devoted about 69 per cent of their editorial space to fiction and the remaining 31 per cent to non-fiction; whereas in 1954 the situation was exactly reversed. And, says Mr. Bennett Cerf of Random House who made this observation, "I would say that the same percentages would apply in the book market."

"The most important reason for the change in my opinion," says Mr. Cerf, "is that life itself has become so complex and exciting and the present-day pace so fast and furious that fiction just can't keep up with it all."

Pyke Johnson Jr., of Doubleday & Co. sees fiction and non-fiction supremacy following a cyclical pattern which varies with the supply and with the interest of the time. "In the depression and during the war we didn't have everything we wanted, so people took refuge in a world of fantasy where plenty was available in other lands and other centuries. Now we do have plenty and having gained it, people are curious to understand its values and are searching beyond the obvious to find answers. . . . Hence more non-fiction."

MR. JOHNSON reaches the conclusion that the present religious revival and interest in facts rather than in fiction is attributable to a desire to understand more completely the riches we have at hand and the problems that seem to come with them.

In Malcolm Cowley's view the real threat to the future of American reading and publishing is not television or suchlike change in people's habits, but the fact that children in the family are no longer acquiring the reading habit. So, when he answers the question, what should be done about the situation, his reply is: "Children should be taught to read and write and spell and punctuate the English language. That is something they are NOT—repeat NOT—being taught today."

Reading With the Ears

The Record Player Is a Stage Now With a Growing Repertory of Great Works

By RUFUS TERRAL

EVERY record player's a stage now, with a rich and growing repertory. Whole plays are performed on the new long-playing records. Short stories and poems and scenes from novels are read by the authors or by accomplished actors and actresses. Students can hear drama ranging the gamut from the old morality play "Everyman," with Burgess Meredith, to Anton Chekhov's "The Sea Gull" and the Old Vic Company's performance of T. S. Eliot's play about Thomas a Becket, "Murder in the Cathedral."

Sixty complete plays in four languages are available on records. Including readings and other classifications, the St. Louis Public Library has more than 100 records of the spoken word on its shelves for lending. The Turntable Theater—on anyone's 33⅓ r.p.m. record player—opens up an entirely new world of entertainment and cultivation to the listener.

My own listening to plays on records started a couple of years ago, through an interest in the minor resurgence of poetic drama in the writings of Christopher Fry, Gian-Carlo Menotti and T. S. Eliot. It was, I quickly found, a new and unique art form, as different in its way from radio as from the living theater, the movies and television. The focus it placed on the human voice seemed even sharper than that of radio. One reason for this heightening of intensity, perhaps, was that the sound effects so lushly engaged on radio were omitted or kept within restraint.

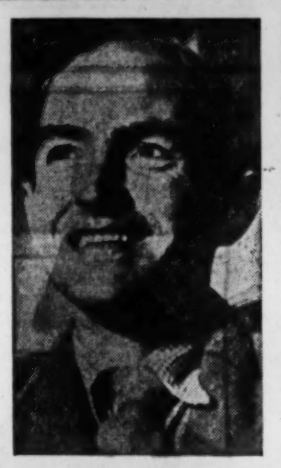
AT the same time, the recording of spoken lines without any concessions to compensate for the absence of the visual images made it often hard to keep track of who was speaking. There was one further difficulty also. If the language were very full of pictures, ideas or phrases which exfoliated in one's mind, as in the case of "The Lady's Not for Burning" and all the rest of Fry's plays, one fell behind on the continuing progress of the play while thus engaged.

Consequently, I learned that while T. S. Eliot's "The Cocktail Party" could be assimilated with perfect ease by reading the text while listening to the record, it was best to read a scene of Fry or Menotti ahead before playing the record, and then to follow it on the text.

For the person who is listening to plays on records for the first time, let me recommend what seems to me now, after further experience, to be a happier way of getting into the swing of it. It is always a good idea to have the text at hand, but there are some recorded plays which can be easily followed without the aid of the text. Such performances, I suggest, are those of John Gielgud, Pamela Brown, and Dorothy McGuire in the Theater Guild production of "Hamlet;" Gielgud, Brown, Dame Edith Evans and Celia Johnson in Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest," and, though to a somewhat lesser degree, Dylan Thomas's "Under Milk Wood," which is spoken by a cast of more than 30.



CHRISTOPHER FRY

THE "Hamlet" is read with such clarity of enunciation, and it is recorded with so much acoustical skill, that every word stands out sharp and bright. Music and sound effects are put to good purpose. Where the play has been cut to get it on four 12-inch sides, narrative bridges the gap and adds forward thrust to the action, which further enhances the ready accessibility of the language to the ear.

Dylan Thomas's "play for voices" is somewhat less easy to follow with the ear only because the poet often creates abrupt and inventive compound words in which much of the beauty and meaning of his poetry are locked. The very unfamiliarity of their pairing sometimes leaves them in doubt without visual confirmation.

These three plays, Menotti's "The Consul" and Bernard Shaw's "Don Juan in Hell," with Charles Laughton, Charles Boyer, Agnes Moorehead and Cedric Hardwicke, appear to me to represent, among those I have heard, some of the finest possibilities of recorded theater. Disparate in material and production as they are, they all possess in common the allurements of presence and excitement.

The disembodied voice is apt to display a certain static quality, and to become tiresome on more than short exposure, unless cunningly used. Shakespeare is of course ideal for this purpose; the limitations of the Elizabethan theater made it necessary for him to fashion his scenery out of language or go without it, and the scenery that resulted is manifestly superior to anything that could be formed of tangible stuffs. The Theatre Guild "Hamlet" shows that this same magic of language can supply the unseen forms and movements of the players as well.

WE come now to the question whether the reading aloud of poetry—or, as a subsidiary question, any other kind of literature—should be done by the authors themselves, or whether it should be left to professional actors and actresses. Personally, I early conceived an unshakable distaste for hearing the spoken words poets made out of their written words, and nothing has occurred meanwhile to make me change my mind.

Readings of their own poetry by Edith Sitwell, Robert Frost, Archibald MacLeish and W. H. Auden, to name only a few, are available on lps. Contrariwise, it is possible to hear the poetry of one whose life was devoted to writing poetry read by one whose life has been devoted to speaking lines beautifully and feelingly—as in Judith Anderson's reading of Edna St. Vincent Millay or Basil Rathbone's reading of Edgar Allan Poe.

As fine a poet as Dylan Thomas plainly seems to suspect that poets are not their own best readers. The poet, he writes, "slows up a line to savour it, remembering what trouble it took, once upon a time, to make it just so, at the very moment, you may think, when the poem needs crispness and speed."

THOMAS'S own readings supply one sort of answer. He made two albums of them, which have sold 25,000 copies, but though they are intensely interesting for what they tell about Dylan Thomas, they are not really very good reading. They are stuck in a monotone and achieve no change of mood or pace.

In contrast, his "Under Milk Wood," performed by a cast of professional players, sets off this poem—a Welsh "Spoon River Anthology" or "Our Town" or more nearly still perhaps, "The Wasteland"—with spoken words which seem to me to follow faithfully the changing lights and colors of the written words.

There will always perhaps be room for both approaches to the reading aloud of poetry—by the authors, for the autobiographical and sentimental values; and by trained actors and actresses, for the more perfect marriage of the theatre arts.

IT is impossible to shun the temptation to say something at this point about the remarkable recording William Saroyan has made of excerpts from his "Jim Dandy" and "Rock Wagram," even though doing so will knock into a cocked hat my theory that authors should not read their own writings.

I had hitherto entertained some doubts of Saroyan's genius as a writer, but his recording has removed all these doubts and established a conviction that he is a genius as an actor into the bargain. At some time, preferably soon, this amazing fellow should be put into a nice juicy part in some play, preferably one by William Saroyan.

His reading from his writing is apposite as I think only the mind that conceived the intention could have made it. He is tender and vulgar both by turns and simultaneously; his gusto is irrepressible and irresistible; and while Time magazine suggests delicately that he might have done better if he had stuck to sarsaparilla during the recording session, I cannot agree.

It is now possible, through the wizardry of records, to hear the complete performances of "Macbeth" and "Romeo and Juliet" by the Old Vic Company, Racine's "Andromaque" and Moliere's "Le Misanthrope" by the Comedie Francaise, Christopher Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus," Henrik Ibsen's "A Doll's House," and Stephen Vincent Benet's "John Brown's Body" with Raymond Massey and Judith Anderson. The listener may hear readings from Chaucer, Coleridge, Dante, Dickens, La Fontaine, the Bhagavad Gita, Matthew Arnold, Dryden, Dumas, Goethe, Goldsmith and the Ramayana. He may hear the voices of William Faulkner, Andre Gide, Christopher Isherwood, Colette, Truman Capote, Edna Ferber, Thomas Mann and W. Somerset Maugham. And these are only a start.

The little circle of the phonograph turntable is at last beginning to encompass a respectable and indeed remarkable portion of the world of the theatre.

Texas as a Provocation to Literature

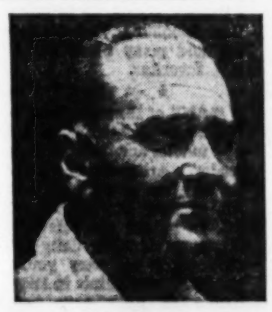
By RUTH WALKER

IT is a gloomy and highly un-Texan thing to say at Christmas time, but 1955 has seen as severe a drought over the literary fields of Texas as over the dry pastures and burnt-out corn fields. It is doubtful if any cloud-seeding could have broken this drought; possibly only a brisk breeze from some other direction could stir up a little of the fresh seasoning Texas writing so sorely needs.

The year just ending has been a fallow one; Texas writers have about pumped the underground springs of native literary material dry. The local folks seem "writ out" and the re-hashers are very tired. It is as had already happened in the art field: the bluebonnets and cactus and the oil derricks have been painted over and over, and the jaundiced eye sees little else to record on canvas.

There is doubtless much material left in Texas that would catch a fresh writing talent, and that talent may have to come from out of the state. In fact it was an "auslander," with an eye not dimmed by dust, Dobie or dogies, who produced the only really fresh book about Texas in 1955. He, Robert Wilder, author of "The Wine of Youth," saw, from afar, that Texas is becoming an urban and industrial state, a political and economic factor in the life of the nation, and he had the insight to write a Texas novel from this angle. It put to shame all the yarn spinners, the pioneer portraitists, the harkers-back, the boasters, the interpreters—and Miss Edna Ferber.

It realized that oil and politics and building fast cars, airplanes and military bases, graft and race-relations were part of Texas life; that everyone in Texas didn't wear boots and ten-gallon hats, dip snuff, say you-all, eat sowbelly and beans, and recall granddaddy's troubles with the Indians.



ROBERT WILDER

He saw no need to admit that rattlesnakes existed or that folks used cow chips for something besides fertilizer, two of the hack items that Miss Ferber could not avoid.

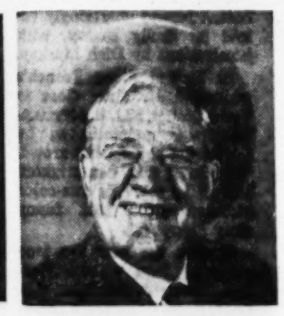
SO Robert Wilder's book may go to the head of the 1955 class — and he no Texan. Only one of Texas's possibly half dozen first rate writers saw print this past year, which justifies the estimate of fallowness—J. Frank Dobie. The old warhorse came up with a collection of "Tales of Old-Time Texas," part history, part legend and folklore, and not one of his best efforts. Others who belong on Texas's top literary shelf, for various reasons, are either silent or "in process"—Tom Lea, doing what is hailed as a "monumental" piece of work on the King Ranch (a subject which has been begging for such treatment); Roy Bedichek, graceful writer and amateur naturalist, who is said to be writing his autobiography; Dillon Anderson, called to Washington to assist the President with "security." Warren Leslie and John H. Griffin, who wrote pretty good novels (but not about Texas) a short time back, are resting on their oars.

In their absence, Texas readers, who aren't exactly avid or clamoring for high grade literature, have had to fall back on biographies of eminent or colorful Texans (H. R. Cullen, Houston philanthropist, and G. B. Dealey, late of the Dallas Morning News); studies of the main Texas cities, which present a problem in that the cities change so fast, and attempts to explain or psychoanalyze Texas. This theme has been a stumbling block to many who have tried, and Frank Goodwyn was hardly more successful in "Lone-Star Land." The single novel by a Texan, brought out during the year, "Haunted Hacienda," had the lonely virtue of not being as long as the author's earlier "Sironia, Texas."



J. FRANK DOBIE

LUCKILY, Texas isn't infested with dreamy writers—one even wishes they would dream a little more rather than rush along with their outpourings of dialogue, native talk, and exhaustive energy.

But they have left the dreamy stuff to Paul Horgan, just across the border in New Mexico. Nor is it troubled with existentialists, or anything approaching them. But it literally crawls with poets, even up in the forks of the creeks. These fellows can neither rhyme nor meter, but they have a constant and irresistible urge to set sorry stuff down in verse form. Not one of them is likely to find a place in any respectable anthology, but that doesn't stop them.

There is usually some fair stuff brought out in Texas's quite dignified magazine "The Southwest Review," a quarterly which has been moseying quietly along for many years. And oddly, some of the best writing, and much vastly interesting material was brought out, early in the year, in, of all places, a newspaper. The Houston Post, for its seventieth anniversary edition, solicited and got, from many of the state's outstanding literary figures (and from members of its own staff), an assortment of articles on various facets of Texas life, history, geography and customs, accomplishment and thought, that could well have been preserved in book form.

Here, for a mere dollar, were the sound historian, Dr. Walter Prescott Webb, writing of the civilization of Texas with his usual erudition but more than his customary lucidity; Fred Gipson, the author of homely, sometimes juvenile little books, writing better than he knew how, and with an effortless humor, of the talk of Texans.

Here were Frank Dobie and Hart Stillwell, with interesting material, but not quite up to their artistic par; and assorted newspaper men, like Bill Bedell and Frank Tolbert, who finally got a chance to cut loose with some of their enthusiasms for their native state. For all its summaries of the past, this paper was put together with a forward look. And it made use of some of the finest art work in Texas.

It is the new Texas that must command attention of writers from now on. The bluebonnet poets and cactus painters and the tall-tale tellers are about through. Texans themselves don't buy many books, and those who do prefer for the most part, writing of wider appeal.

There is often recalled, in Texas, the remark of the old-timer that "what Texas needs is a little more water and a better class of people." That might be paraphrased: "What Texas literature needs is fresh material and a little better writing."

New Study by St. Louisan Undertakes to Show That Calvinism Was Foundation of American Freedom.

FOUNDATION OF AMERICAN FREEDOM, by A. Mervyn Davies. (Abingdon Press, 253 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by HUSTON SMITH

JOHN CALVIN

ANYONE who sets out to prove, as does Mr. Davies in this book, that the foundation of American freedom is—of all things—Calvinism, is going to have to do some arguing.

John Calvin's entire concept of government was authoritarian. As "Pope of Geneva" he insisted that it was the citizen's duty to submit. He was utterly opposed to religious liberty. He was fiercely intolerant, with a reputation for persecution. His spiritual descendants, from the Presbyterians of Scotland to the oligarchs of the Massachusetts colony, inherited his theocratic ideas and took on the coloration of his intolerance in general. Wherever the battle for religious liberty was fought—in Holland, England, or America—it was won against the opposition of Calvin's disciples. As one scholar has put the matter, "If Calvin ever wrote anything in favor of religious liberty, it was a typographical error." Today in South Africa the staunchly Calvinistic Dutch Reform Church is supporting apartheid.

Yet the foundation of American freedom, Mr. Davies contends, is Calvinism.

The stature of his book, obviously, must be gauged by (a) the extent to which he makes his case (b) without minimizing the evidence to the contrary.

ON the second count this book comes through as a distinguished piece of historical writing. Mr. Davies's feeling for Calvinism is evident from the opening page onward, but it never leads him to ignore or whitewash negative evidence. Servetus burning at the stake, the fiercely intolerant Synod of Dort, the extreme predestinarianism of Jonathan Edwards, "that strange throwback of the eighteenth century"—it is all here, with a good deal more which the average reader will have forgotten if he ever knew.

The purpose of this book, however, is to remind us of "another Calvin and another Calvinism," less familiar to the popular imagination yet vitally related to the freedom which has come to be associated with liberal democracy, for liberal democracy "arose in precisely those countries — Switzerland, Holland, Rhenish Germany, Scotland, England, Wales, France (until it was crushed by the Bourbon monarchy)—where the Reformed faith (Calvinism) put down its strongest roots and effected its deepest penetration. . . . Either that fact was purely accidental," the author writes, "or it must be possible to trace some direct, causal connection between the two developments."

THE connection is to be found, this book persuasively argues, in the rigor with which Calvin and his followers squared off against the three great enemies of freedom in their day. Against the totalitarian state, which was rapidly moving into the vacuum created by the dissolution of medieval Christendom, Calvin championed the autonomy of the church, its right to freedom in the pulpit, and its supremacy over magisterial interference in general.

Against the danger of internal abuse of power within the church itself, Calvin championed a church which was democratically constituted. Against the danger that freedom would deteriorate into libertarianism—a danger frankly articulated by Calvin's contemporary Machiavelli — Calvin preached God sovereign, transcendant in majesty, whose will cannot be ignored with impunity, and who wills justice among his people.

That these points do not constitute the sum of freedom as known to the modern world, the author is the first to admit. Political democracy, the right of the individual to worship God as his conscience dictates, the inappropriateness of calling upon the state to enforce ecclesiastical decrees — these crucial additions to the supports of freedom were entirely beyond Calvin's vision and remained for the future.

Calvin was no Jefferson—Mr. Davies never blurs this point nor suggests otherwise. But he does contend that against his own environment, 250 years earlier than Jefferson's, he was fully as remarkable. Moreover it was his achievements, and those of his successors, that paved the way for the Enlightenment liberalism which made Jefferson and others like him possible.

In this sense the American story begins before our Founding Fathers or even Locke. It is the early links in this ideological chain which culminates in the Constitution of the United States that this book is concerned to recall and honor.

THIS brings us to the first question mentioned at the outset: Does the book establish the case it argues? The answer depends on whether it is contending that Calvinism is the foundation of American freedom or one of its foundations. If the former, it claims too much.

Even as I was reading the book there chanced to come across my desk a monograph titled Judaism's Influence in the Founding of the Republic with subheads that sound very much like many of the things Mr. Davies discusses: "Pilgrim Code Based on Old Testament Laws" and "Thomas Paine Quotes Scripture for His Purpose," and the like. We have all seen similar studies, each valid in its own way, correlating American freedom with Baptists, utilitarians, and even monastic rule.

The truth seems to be that American freedom is too large to be attributable to any single source. But if we take the author to be saying not that Calvinism is the sole foundation of American freedom, but one which is both tremendously important and commonly underestimated, he has chosen a vital thesis and established it well.

It is always pleasant to be able to add that the author is a St. Louisan and a member of the Post-Dispatch staff and one of whom his community can well be proud.

Art and History

ARTS AND IDEAS, by William Fleming. (Henry Holt, $10.)

WHAT Dr. Fleming of Syracuse University has attempted here is nothing less than a synthesis of the fine arts with the events of history. This is a formidable undertaking, requiring both the outlook of the historian and the talent of the artist. The author appears to possess both of these, and his book successfully integrates these two fields.

"NOW ISN'T IT A FACT THAT YOU WON'T LISTEN TO LOGIC UNLESS I MAKE A SCENE?"

"I LOVE YOU, TOO, ROGER, BUT HOW WILL I EXPLAIN TO MY FAMILY?"

The Longest War in History

EVER SINCE ADAM AND EVE: A PICTORIAL NARRATIVE OF THE BATTLE OF THE SEXES BY 86 FAMOUS CARTOONISTS, compiled by Alfred Andriola and Mel Casson (McGraw-Hill, $3.95).

Reviewed by DICKSON TERRY

AS every man knows, there is and always has been a war going on between the sexes. I can't speak for women, but I know that about the time a man-child begins to toddle he hears an atavistic whisper in his ear, whereupon he takes up the cudgel and wades in without asking what or why. He carries on the battle through childhood, youth, middle-age and old age, but about all he ever has to show for it is scars.

So it goes, and probably has since Adam and Eve. Those pictures cave men scratched on the walls probably had something to do with it, and if it has served no other purpose it has been providing cartoonists with material ever since.

Some of the results have been good and some pretty bad—as for example the typical mother-in-law joke—but it must be said they have come closer than anyone else to pinning down this subtle relationship which seems to defy analysis.

At least they've pinned down the funny side of it, and it has never been pinned down better than in this collection of some 150 cartoons, drawn by 86 of the country's best. It is divided into eight sections, and while it purports to be devoted to the battle of the sexes, and quite often is, it might better be called a chronicle of the frustration and confusion which surrounds what we call love, courtship and marriage.

THE first section is devoted to incubation and birth. Item: a confused husband looking at a tiny sweater his wife is knitting. "Oh, I meant to tell you," she chirps. "It wasn't psychosomatic after all."

The second section, called The Small and the Mighty, is a stage of life filled with pratfalls and pitfalls, and here we find a couple of small fry emerging from the tunnel of love, the little girl with arms folded in disgust, and the little boy trying to explain with "What do ya expect? I'm only five years old."

The section called Growing Pains picks up where the girl next door looks at the boy and suddenly for the first time in her life she knows what she wants. Here we have, among a lot of other wonderful cartoons, one by George Lichty. A mother is having one of those talks with her wide-eyed teen-age daughter. "I'm trying to warn you about men," says mother. "Stop screaming 'How wonderful!'"

The section called Hot on the Trail is "dedicated to the men and women who so tenaciously struggle on this battlefield of lust and romance and chase each other into a holy state of matrimony." The best part of this section is a group of 14 interpretations by Abner Dean, and if you happen to be a member of the Dean cult that's all you need to know.

The section on married life, labeled "Hooked," goes through all the vicissitudes from the troubles of the newly married to the frustrations of the veterans. Here is the fed-up husband who shoves a bouquet of flowers at his wife and barks, "Here! Happy birthday, for God's sake!"

In the middle-age section man and wife are beside their swimming pool. "Isn't it about time for your afternoon dip, Edna?" he asks solicitously. Visible above the surface of the pool is the dorsal fin of a swimming shark.

THE last scene of all deals largely with the unknown realm of angels and devils, and toys with the idea that the battle goes on, even into the next world. Thus we have a couple ascending to heaven, wings and all. The wife is looking at the husband with angry contempt. The henpecked husband is confessing, "you were right Martha. They were not mushrooms."

If you have a favorite cartoonist, you will probably find him here, and at his best. And no matter what your taste in cartoon humor, you will find plenty to laugh at in this chronology of the hot war, done with humor, satire and, of course, affection (but not too much.)

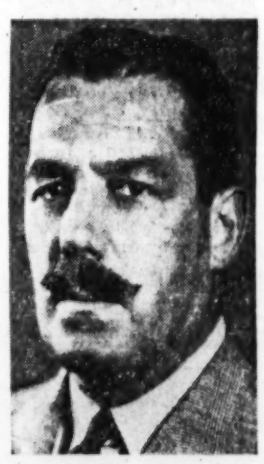
Two Fascinating New Yorkers

MR. NEW YORK. THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF GROVER WHALEN. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, 305 pgs., $5.)

LIFE WITH FIORELLO. A Memoir by Ernest Cuneo. (The Macmillan Co., 209 pgs., $4.)

Reviewed by STANLEY WALKER



GROVER WHALEN

THE persons who lived and suffered and gaped in New York City in the decades after the close of World War I were seeing an important and fascinating slice of history being made, though they may not have realized it at the time. The literature on the period, already voluminous, continues to grow. These two books are the latest footnotes to the epoch.

One is by Grover A. Whalen, who through the administrations of seven mayors was in charge of the committee which welcomed notables to the city; the other is by Ernest Cuneo, lawyer and newspaper man and one-time law clerk and close associate of the rambunctious, high-minded and exasperating Fiorello LaGuardia. Both are valuable, though in spots sadly reticent, even evasive.

For a long time, in certain snooty sets, it was the custom to dismiss Grover Whalen as a glorified floorwalker, a stuffed shirt of the purest ray serene, a handsome facade which concealed a monumental mediocrity. This was not fair. True, his looks, and his smooth manner, and his notable raiment, made him remembered as a front man, but he was a great deal more than a glorified clothes horse and handshaker.

HE was, and is, a competent merchandiser. He was always one of the world's most effective salesmen. He was the brains and the drive which put over the great New York World's Fair in 1939. He served eighteen months as Police Commissioner under Mayor James J. Walker, and he was a pretty good commissioner, though inclined to flourishes and ruffles. His services to his city have really been considerable. True, he was not cut from the cloth from which great statesmen come, but he was useful to the commonwealth, and his heart was generally in the right place—and under the prettiest blue shirts to be found anywhere.

The resplendent, smiling, tactful Grover was born in the old Al Smith' country near Brooklyn Bridge on New York's lower East Side. His folks were not rich, but they prospered somewhat, and little Grover used to collect the rents from the inmates of the family's tenement properties. He first began welcoming celebrities to New York under the administration of John F. (Red Mike) Hylan, whom he served for a time as secretary. Most of his autobiography tells of these splendiferous welcomes, and it is engrossing stuff—Kings and Queens, Channel swimmers, war heroes, aviators, an so on.

WHEN the current Mayor, Robert Wagner, took office, for some reason Grover was shoved aside from his historic role as greeter. It was a shock to the community. As Don Skene, a journalist now long dead, once remarked to a foreign visitor whom he had been assigned to interview, "If you haven't been welcomed by Grover, you're not here." But if Mr. Whalen is heartsick over his dethronement he gives no indication of it in this book. In fact, he doesn't even mention it. As always, he is a man who gives the impression of telling all, when actually he has many reticences.

Mr. Cuneo tells an extraordinarily vivid story. He is a lively, dramatic, gee-whizzy sort of journalist. He knew the ineffable LaGuardia, as Congressman and Mayor and private lawyer, very well indeed, and his memoir (that's about all it is, for it actually contains little of the meat of history) helps explain how so many persons, though habitually insulted by the honest but mercurial and boorish LaGuardia, nevertheless regarded him with much respect and affection.

Both Mr. Whalen and Mr. Cuneo have (besides evasiveness), one important point in common. Neither can spell the name of the late great New York lawyer, the Mephisto of the bar, Mr. Sam Untermyer. They make it "meyer," which always gave old Sam a slow burn.

FICTION

Psychologically Adrift

A DREAM OF KINGS, by Davis Grubb. (Charles Scribner's Sons, 357 pgs., $3.95.)

Reviewed by DOROTHY ROUDEBUSH

THIS absorbing novel by the author of "The Night of the Hunter" is made up of one part Old South and Civil War, one part young love, one part stark prose, one part lyricism—the whole heavily overlaid with psychopathy to the point of oppression. Surely the two young protagonists — the abandoned Cathie and the orphaned Tom, in the care of stern Aunt Sarah—deviate so far from the normal as to be considered almost psychopathic.

Cathie has long since lost touch with reality, as she dreams of her father's return as a king from some nebulous mission into Kansas. He will return "riding proud, in scarlet, and with silver pistols in his belt," and she will share his throne. Until then, she will haunt the temple of his boat, the Nellie Queen, whose white lace glows spectrally from the river bank.

As Tom grows up with Cathie he comes to brood as she does, but without so much focus to his sorrows. Every incident which engages these two pathetic children looks sinister to him. Time after time despair leaps up to seize him. Tom's excessive reaction to the emotional crises of the story are hardly those of a rational person, even allowing for the irrationality of youth.

THAT Davis Grubb manages to keep the reader sympathetically involved with these two unstable, unrealistic characters is evidence of his superior ability as a novelist. Some relief comes, it is true, from the frequent kitchen scenes played by the superstitious Negro women; and from the fairly normal scenes at the neighboring household of Miss Dulcie, whither Cathie and Tom both flee for comfort.

The plot of "Dream of Kings" is a simple one. It concerns the two forsaken youngsters, Cathie and Tom, as they grow to realize that what they took for hatred in their hair-pulling days is an inverted form of their desperate love and mutual dependence. To escape that realization which she feels bears the mark of disloyalty to the dream of her father, Cathie runs away more than once from Aunt Sarah's forbidding house. For the same reason, coupled with an overpowering sense of guilt for his first act of love, Tom goes off to wander among strangers and to fight with Stonewall Jackson, whom he darkly identifies with Cathie's avenging father.

THE author tells his story well and with a richness and intensity of language. While it is filled with melodramatic incidents he has created such a Gothic mood that they are acceptable. Furthermore he has selected and painstakingly constructed them so that they become inseparable from the development of his characters with which he is chiefly concerned. This is a book to be read slowly and savored to the full for its expert expression.

This reviewer will quarrel with it on only one score, and that, a matter of taste. Mr. Grubb violates restricted territory when he describes Cathie's coming of age. Yet he must handle this delicate subject, for Cathie's reaction to her own maturation holds tragic consequences for her and also for Tom. It is doubtful whether Grubb could have made his story without venturing into this bold theme. Yet it remains bold, and in questionable taste.

An Ironic and Gay Story of The Seaside

A VIEW OF THE SEA, by Elizabeth Fair. (Funk and Wagnalls Co., 282 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by ANNE O. BASSAGE

MR. HERITAGE was a cultured white haired single gentleman, whose motner had taught him to beware of widows. Yet, regrettably, one of the late Cannon's daughters was a widow. Even more regrettable was her pretty daughter Lucy. For Lucy derailed conversation when she was present, and she had a young man with a noisy motorcycle.

The Cannon's daughters were Mr. Heritage's friends in the village. To be sure they had come down in the world. They were now no more than inn keepers. But still the memory of Cannon Newby was green and his sermons, though remarkably long, were remembered with pride and awe.

Mr. Heritage's godson Edward turned up. Edward was a young eligible architect responsible for the new terrace of houses which would have their beauty proclaimed in the railroad stations and so turn Caweston into a paradise on earth.

Mr. Heritage began his schemes when he discovered Edward's tendency to go off to Seaview House—not to see the sea but to view Lucy. Mr. H. wanted Edward for himself. Mr. H. needed Edward to complete the picture of aesthetic - old - gent - discoursing - learnedly - to - his - promising - godson! And so he set about the disposal of Lucy.

And he nearly succeeded!

This is a gay slightly ironic summery tale of English seaside life. Miss Fair lives in a similar village and so she draws her characters with knowledge and love.

THE YOUNGER BROTHERS: THEIR LIFE AND CHARACTER, by A. C. Appler, with a foreword by Burton Rascoe. (Frederick Fell, 245 pgs., $3.50.)

THERE are those who regard the Younger brothers, Cole and Jim, as worse bandits than ever were the Jameses or the Daltons. The Youngers rode with Quantrell in the Civil War years and they were on hand at the attempt to rob the bank at Northfield, Minn. A. C. Appler of St. Clair county, Mo., wrote the classic account of the Youngers, but it has been out of print since 1892 and only four copies are known to have survived. Now it reappears after 60 years as 100-proof Americana, with an introduction by Burton Rascoe who finds it unexcelled for "emotions, hatreds, revengeful feelings and sheer lust for carnage and destruction."

THE STATURE OF THEODORE DREISER, edited by Alfred Kazin and Charles Shapiro, introduction by Alfred Kazin. (Indiana University, 303 pgs., $5.)

THEODORE DREISER, who once was a reporter on the Globe-Democrat, is one of the most controversial of American novelists. This collection of criticism of Dreiser's work is sure to add to the stature of the realist who wrote "Sister Carrie" and "Jennie Gerhardt" a half century ago. Here are appraisals by, among others, Edgar Lee Masters, Sherwood Anderson, Stuart Sherman, H. L. Mencken, Sinclair Lewis, Malcolm Cowley and Granville Hicks. Alfred Kazin writes in his introduction that Dreiser "hurts because he is always looking at the source." The Post-Dispatch reviewed "Sister Carrie," Jan. 26, 1902.

HENRY GEORGE, by Charles Albro Barker. (Oxford University Press, 696 pgs., $9.50.)

AMERICAN intellectual history could not be written without accounting for Henry George, author of the world-famous "Progress and Poverty" and land and social reformer who electrified New York City with his remarkable campaign for mayor 70 years ago. His influence comes down to our day through the Henry George School of Social Science and its activities in many cities, including St. Louis. The author, a history professor at Johns Hopkins University, became interested in Henry George in the depression '30s for it was in a similar period that the advocate of the "single tax" made his war on "the slavery of poverty."

LET'S GO TO PRESS: A BIOGRAPHY OF WALTER WINCHELL, by Ed Weiner. (Putnam, 270 pgs., $3.75.)

THIS is a fast-moving story of the boy who "came up from the city streets," tapdanced his way into big-time vaudeville and then turned to journalism, radio and television to become one of the leading informers—or misinformers, as some think—of the American people. Ed Weiner, who has known Winchell for a quarter century and has followed the many Winchellian feuds, says frankly that estimates of his subject range from our "No. 1 Patriot-Journalist" to "the biggest menace to security since Benedict Arnold." He goes so far as to say that Winchell became a mouthpiece for McCarthy a year ago, but finally wavered and then abandoned the Senator. Lacking a "clearly definable political position" today, he sticks to "Broadway gossip."

MARK TWAIN: SELECTED CRITICISM, edited by Arthur L. Scott. (Southern Methodist University Press, 289 pgs., $5.)

DEVOTED followers of Missouri's most famous man of letters—and they are without number—will relish this collection of "the cream of Mark Twain criticism from its start in 1867 down to the present." The editor is well qualified for his work since his specialty is Mark Twain and he teaches a course in the creator of Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer at the University of Illinois. Among the critics whose views are quoted are Holmes, Stockton, Howells, Phelps, Sherman, Van Dyke, Bradford, Van Doren, Parrington, Calverton, DeVoto and Canby. This is a book that the University of Missouri would have done well to publish.

JUSTICE WILLIAM JOHNSON: THE FIRST DISSENTER, by Donald G. Morgan with a preface by Benjamin F. Wright. (University of South Carolina Press, 326 pgs., $6.50.)

IT took a strong character to stand up for his opinions against Chief Justice John Marshall. Such a man was Justice William Johnson of South Carolina, appointed by Jefferson in 1804. Johnson was a staunch believer in individual liberty and social welfare and his views, so often turned down by the Marshall court, have come into their own in recent years. The author, a professor of political science at Mount Holyoke College, has produced a notable addition to American history and biography.

Year's Best Sleuths

The Detective Is the Moving Force in the Modern Crime Story and He Must Be Up-to-Date

By FAY PROFILET

THIS has been an entertaining year for readers of mystery fiction. They have been offered a wide ranging array of novels about crime and its detection by numerous distinguished authors, many of whom are famous in other writing fields.

These stories achieved such a high grade of excellence because the experienced writers of mystery novels were faithful to the rules of their craft.

A good detective story must be literate; a well-planned plot with a logical conclusion is imperative; authentic atmosphere must be created; entertaining dialogue preferably spiced with humor is valuable; characters must be sharply drawn, and the detective, his looks and personality, is of the first importance. The author must keep faith with his reader. He may not employ such out-moded gimmicks as bringing in the heretofore unmentioned twin of the suspect as the murderer or in any way fail to give the reader a sporting chance at solving the case. And the novel must create suspense and sustain it.

THE activating force of the crime story is the detective. The tough private eye who shoots a cop, smacks down a blonde and reaches for a double Scotch on the rocks all in the matter of minutes is no longer tolerated. The present day detective more often is a trained investigator with the resources of a Police Department laboratory at hand or an amateur sleuth willing patiently to follow clues and take great risks.

Many famous fiction detectives reappeared on the 1955 crime scene. Georges Simenon, national president of the Mystery Writers of America, is the creator of Inspector Maigret. In "Inspector Maigret and the Dead Girl," one of several books written by the Belgium-born Simenon this year, the inspector is at his best in reconstructing the girl's entire life by a tab in her dress.

FRANCES and Richard Lockridge, noted husband and wife writing team, have produced a husband and wife detective team in their Mr. and Mrs. North series. Pam and Jerry North are never more delightful than in "Death of An Angel," when Pam shadows the killer on a quiet Sunday in Park avenue. The Lockridges are also the authors of another series featuring Capt. W. L. Heimrich of the New York State Police.

ANOTHER policeman, fast gaining in popularity, is Ralph Lindsey, rookie trooper of the Massachusetts State Police. Ben Benson has presented him in two thrillers this year, "The Silver Cobweb," and "Broken Shield."

Erle Stanley Gardner's Perry Mason uses his legal talent to solve most of his cases. In his latest, "The Case of the Nervous Accomplice," he puzzles a board of directors with his knowledge of law affecting the lateral support of real property. Michael Shayne, Miami detective, who is featured in stories by Brett Halliday can take on all comers in a good fight and can outwit the most agile-minded murderer. He gives a good performance in the novel, "Stranger in Town."

Miss Maude Silver, who delights the readers of Patricia Wentworth's stories, solves a complex case in "Listening Eye," as she "thinks things out" all the while busily knitting.

These are samples of the year's best.

World Problem

Chester Bowles Says We Must Understand Revolutionary Aims of Other Peoples.

THE NEW DIMENSIONS OF PEACE, By Chester Bowles. (Harper & Brothers, 391 pgs., $4.50.)

Reviewed by DONALD GRANT

FOREIGN policy to a great extent is a matter of emphasis. An American Secretary of State is bound to operate in a framework of circumstances that anyway exist. The world's power constellations cannot be ignored; the orderly development of the underdeveloped areas is a continuing imperative; the United States has a long-range interest in peace, stability, and an international environment favorable to the values and aspirations of this nation. Furthermore, no American Secretary of State can burst the limitations imposed by the character of the President under whom he serves.

Having said this much, however, the interest in a statement of "foreign policy" by a man who could be the next United States Secretary of State is hardly diminished. Emphasis remains, and Chester Bowles wisely has confined himself to a statement of emphasis, specifically avoiding firm policy recommendations. His emphasis, to judge by the present volume, would be in the direction of more foreign economic aid, perhaps less tied to military considerations; more consultation among allies; an attempt to draw a more specific line in Asia and the Middle East, the crossing of which by Communist aggressors would cause hostile American reactions—and most importantly, the systematic support by United States actions of the revolutionary aspirations of the people of Asia, Africa, the Middle East and Latin America.

The word "revolution" is a tricky one: the present Secretary of State, John Foster Dulles, finds it an uncomfortable word. He avoids using it if he can, particularly in reference to peoples whom he admires and would have United States policy support. Bowles, by contrast, savors the word. Dulles feels "evolution" is better, more moderate; Bowles feels it lacks force. The difference between the men possibly more than anything else is a difference in style. Dulles, in fact, admired the job Bowles did as Ambassador to India, though for political considerations he removed him from the post. The stylistic differences between the men are profound.

"Although we were born in revolution and our numbers have been constantly refreshed from overseas," writes Bowles, "many of us have become cut off from the hopes and aspirations of a majority of the world's people.

"Although we are one of the most literate nations on earth, scarcely one American in a hundred has more than a rudimentary knowledge of the history of Asia, Africa and South America, where the bulk of mankind lives and where the shape of the future may largely be decided. . . ."

A GOOD part of "The New Dimensions of Peace" is devoted to filling this gap—in knowledge, but more importantly, in sympathy. From the addresses and final communique of the Bandung Conference of Asian and African countries, last June, and from his own experience abroad, Bowles extracts a summary of the needs and wants of the people of the underdeveloped areas:

"1. Democratic self-government, free of foreign influence;

"2. A full measure of human dignity regardless of race, creed or color;

"3. Rapid economic development, broadly shared;

"4. The abolition of war and the creation of expanding areas of goodwill."

Bowles then goes on to coordinate the needs of the underdeveloped areas with the realities of the world power struggle and United States foreign policy. He finds within the American tradition ample resources to meet the revolutionary needs of the world today:

"A century that began with Lenin, Sun Yat-sen, Gandhi and Wilson was certain to be shaped by ideas. The struggle for the minds of men has now become sharp and clamorous. It is, I believe, the spirit of Lincoln that the world expects from us, and it is only by recapturing some of that spirit that we can successfully cope with the new world that is now taking shape.

"On Feb. 21, 1861, at Independence Hall, Lincoln summed up America's message: 'All the political sentiments I entertain have been drawn from the sentiments which originate in and were given to the world from this hall. . . . It was not the mere matter of separation of the colonies from the motherland, but the Declaration of Independence, which gave liberty not alone to the people of this country, but hope to all the world, for all future time. It was that which gave promise that in due time the weights would be lifted from the shoulders of all men, and that all should have an equal chance.'"

BOWLES, as a man and as an expounder of ideas, is as thoroughly American as the most chauvinistic patriot could wish—but his Americanism is broad, not narrow, a part of the greater fraternity of mankind.

In this book Chester Bowles has come to the heart of the world problem, in this second half of the twentieth century. He has brought to it great knowledge, experience, goodwill—and a highly readable style of writing.

The road ahead he has illuminated leads to survival. More importantly, it leads to the realization of values without which mere survival, for civilized, intelligent human beings, is hardly worth the effort.

Children's Books to Suit All Tastes

niversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin, Ruth Cromer Weir heads the long list of biographies with her well written Benjamin Franklin: Printer and Patriot (Abingdon Press, $1.50). Ingri and Edgar Parisi D'Aulaire's picture-book Columbus is exquisite in every detail of picture, story, and book-making (Doubleday, $3).

Numerous series have been enlarged. Among them, Signature Books (Grosset & Dunlap, $1.50 each), adds The Story of Louisa May Alcott by Joan Howard and Earl Schenck Mier's Thomas Jefferson.

The cornucopia overflows with interesting and instructive books for girls and boys verging on adolescence.

Charles W. Follett award winner for 1955, Minutemen of the Sea, by Tom Cuff (Follett, $2.95), combines a thrilling sea story with a beautiful piece of bookmaking. This hitherto untold account of the first naval battle of the American Revolution, occurring as it did five days before Bunker Hill, gives the illustrator, Tom O'Sullivan, a wealth of subject matter for his soft pencil sketches of life on land and sea during the 1770s.

Well written stories of heroic yesterdays cover a wide range of historical experiences. Texas frontiersman Stephen F. Austin, whose life was dedicated to the service of others, inspires Carol Hoff's Wilderness Pioneer (Follett, $3.50).

A panoramic view of 500 years at Sault Ste. Marie, The Mighty Soo (Follett, $3.50), is sketched by that marvelous weaver of fine children's stories, Clara Ingram Judson. The author will be remembered for her distinguished biographies of five American presidents, one of which appeared annually beginning in 1950 when "Abraham Lincoln, Friend of the People" was brought out.

the period, 1860-1861, plus original illustrations by Nicholas Eggenhofer.

Dramatic stories that will keep pre-teens glued to their seats are told in The Big Book of Train Stories (Grosset & Dunlap, $1.50). Stories by Margaret Wise Brown, Louis Slobodkin, Miriam Clark Porter and many others, true train stories like "Casey Jones" and "The Runaway Train," and train stories from various parts of the world make up this story-book-type edition appropriately illustrated by the favorite Leonard Weisgard.

EVENTS of past centuries come alive in volumes of fictionalized history. To the exciting London of 1750 went John Newbery, in honor of whom the Newbery Medal for distinguished children's books is named. His energetic search for the sort of book that will be gay and fun for children to read is detailed in Josephine Blackstock's Songs for Sixpence (Follett, $2.95).

Pepys' Boy tells of the lad who is brought to life by Rachel Varble (Doubleday, $2.75), and who encounters young William Penn in his runaway escapades. He would be the same lad mentioned with despair in the 17th century classic, "Pepys' Diary."

Hardships of western pioneer travel by steamboat and on foot combine with a fine story of family feeling in Elsa Falk's Winter Journey (Follett, $2.75). In contrast, the present day family's travel adventure, Rolling Home, by Jeanne Massey (Holt, $2.75), depicts crises a-plenty as the extensive Riggs family rollickingly rolls along in trailer and station wagon from Connecticut to California where Pop Riggs has taken a job.

Strong family feeling is caught and well portrayed in James Knox's book Sunday's Children (Houghton Mifflin, $2.75), in which this minister's son writes a warm humorous story around the memories of his own childhood.

Of general interest to middle-aged children as well as to adults are two very readable storybook sized histories crammed with pictures, one, an American history, the other, a world history. Earl Schenck Miers and the Newbery Award winner, James Daugherty, combine their talents to give us the dramatic Rainbow Book of American History (World Publishing Co., $4.95).

MIERS sounds the tone in his short preface describing the easy going Mark Twain's love of American history, ringing up the curtain thus: "As you begin this adventure, you are a Viking. The year is 1000 A.D. The winds are strong in the North Atlantic. A surprising voyage awaits your ship with its stout square sail . . ." After a description of the air age and atomic energy "from which unimagined riches can flow," he concludes his postscript:

"The modern Viking, soaring through the clouds above America, sees everywhere signs of the greatness of God. It is indeed the one truth in which we all believe. It is indeed our richest heritage."

Daugherty's 200 generous illustrations, most of them in great sweeps of beautiful color, are an integral part of this panoramic scene of great moments and events told through the lives and experiences of Americans.

Book Store Dedication Speaker

DR. JAMES L. SULLIVAN, executive secretary-treasurer of the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, Nashville, dedication speaker for new Baptist book store here at 10 a.m. Monday.

Store Another Effort To Serve Baptists Better

The relocating of the Baptist Book Store here at 3528 Washington boulevard is but another evidence of the continuing efforts of the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention to serve Baptists with religious books and supplies. The new store is on the first floor of the two-story building purchased in October by the St. Louis Baptist Association.

Miss Clarice Taylor has been manager of the store since September, 1952. She formerly served for three years as manager of the Baptist Book Store in Owensboro, Ky. She received her early education in Owensboro and is a graduate of Georgetown, Ky., College.

Miss Taylor is a sister of Eldred M. Taylor, superintendent of missions and evangelism with the Kentucky Baptist Board of Missions.

The St. Louis store is one of the forty-eight owned and operated by the Sunday School Board, which serves this area.

Many Bibles, But Few Are 'Look-Alikes'

Thousands of volumes of Bibles are sold in the St. Louis area each year through the various book outlets. Thousands more are distributed as gifts. But few of the volumes are exactly alike in size, typography, binding, etc.

There are as many as 65 to 100 varieties of bindings or translations available at many stores here.

The price of a Bible may be as low as $1, or as high as $250, while a number of those sold are collector's publications which sell for $25 to $50.

There are pulpit, lectern, Masonic, Eastern Star, Rebekah and other specialized volumes, put out for specific uses. Here in St. Louis, anyone desiring the Bible in German, Italian or Spanish, as well as the English and American versions, may acquire one, at varying prices.

For the open house week of the new Baptist Book Store at its new location, the Bible display will include one volume being exhibited which is not part of the sales stock. It is the Oxford Coronation lectern Bible, being brought here by a representative of the Oxford University press, and is one of the few existing replicas of the Bible used at the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II of England June 2, 1953.

BOUND IN SCARLET

Viewing this book, St. Louisans will note that the press took this opportunity to produce a new Bible which also could meet the "insistent demand from many churches, school chapels and the like, for a lectern Bible smaller and less costly" than some others in use and yet reflecting modern typographical distinction, the group has written Miss Clarice Taylor at the store here.

For the queen's coronation the King James version was bound in scarlet Niger Morocco with a white leather panel on the front. It was designed by Lynton Lamb, British artist, and executed by Sangorski and Sutcliffe, special hand binders. In the design is the royal crest, crowns and the initials ER.

LONG PRINTING JOB

The type for the queen's Bible was specially set by one monotype operator who created a record for the fastest time in setting up a Bible in the history of Oxford, which has been publishing the Holy Bible since 1632. Even so, the press told Miss Taylor, it took the operator from mid-February to November of 1952 to set the type, since there are 773,692 words in the Bible.

The printing, direct from type instead of from the usual electro plates, took five months to complete. The Bible has 1440 pages but is only two and one-fourth inches thick because it was printed on Oxford India paper.

Over-all dimensions of the coronation Bible are 13x9¾x3¾ inches.

Twenty-five numbered copies of the volume were printed on special India paper, of which the first copy was the Coronation Bible itself. There also is a standard lectern edition which may be obtained for general use. It is printed on a different, but durable paper.

Anti—Intellectualism

Both Scientists and Poets Suffer From It but Audience for Poetry Has Always Been Select

By WILL WHARTON

ST. LOUIS has been fortunate recently to be host to poets and critics of such stature as Wyston Hugh Auden and John Crowe Ransom under the auspices of the Oreon E. Scott Symposium. Both as a poet and a lecturer, Mr. Auden has always been provocative and picturesque, and it is not surprising that his remarks in St. Louis have been cited in many current discussions among local literary groups.

In meeting the general public rather than his colleagues and advanced students, it was almost inevitable that Mr. Auden touched upon such problems as the precarious position of the poet in our day and the supposed obscurity of modern verse. The English-born writer, now an American citizen, conceded that there are riddles in most of the best American and English verse, but he stressed the increasingly important role of the critic who interprets a poem. Having the poem interpreted is an educational experience for the reader and the success of the poem depends on whether the explanation is a natural one and does not extract from the riddle some idea repellent to the cherished beliefs and traditions of the reader.

Departing from Auden's text, it should be added that how much of a riddle is in a poem and how easy it is to solve depends upon the educational background and field of interests of the reader. Some readers may not need the services of the critic. Nonetheless the general inference to be drawn from Auden's talk is that in an everprogressive Western world poetry has advanced with other arts and sciences. It is today not better, not worse, than older verse, but it is more resourceful, more complicated.

THE headline of one report on Auden's talk neatly summarized him as implying that the push-button age is cramping the poet's style. Such a talk, however, cannot be capsuled. To me Auden's message was hopeful because it implied that the poet must adapt himself to changing conditions, and surely numerous local poets in his audience must have derived benefit from his specific diagram of how this can be done.

The realistic approach of Auden was refreshing because as he implies it is useless to bleat about the poet's loss of audience. One might take issue with his remark that society will never let the poet earn a living simply by writing poetry. The truth of this depends on the age and society.

Taking society as a whole and scanning past ages, the idea that a poet might earn a living writing verse is a hangover from certain periods when this was actually possible. There have been times when narrative poems could be best sellers like novels. Probably Keats could be mentioned as a milestone along the road to a buyers' market and then almost no market for verse. His publisher had some hopes of profit, but as such things work out, neither Keats nor his potential readership was in the mood that would make Keats a best seller. Inevitably it was a Scotsman, Sir Walter himself, who sensed the trend and rather than compete with Byron in narrative verse, turned to novels which sold very well.

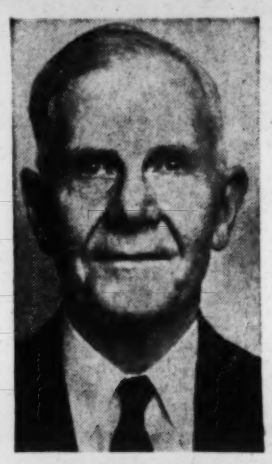
THE profit-making periods for poets have been brief ones in our literature. Up to a certain time in England, writing verse was not considered a means of making money. At one period verse was an accomplishment of gentlemen who would have been disgraced had they accepted payment for their outpourings and who, if they were not accomplished duellists, often shunned a by-line. With the ascendancy of the Queen Anne bourgeoisie, professionalism began for verse writers, but not without losses in other fields, since the change in trend had a large share in putting playwrights like Congreve out of business.



JOHN CROWE RANSOM

The point of these remarks is that when modern poets complain about loss of audience they forget that (except in certain periods) poets never had more than small audiences. They also forget, in an age of specialization, that poetry must fit into the demands of the age. It simply depends on how much of an audience the poet wants.

Actually, in view of other more serious problems that confront us, the poet's problem is minor. Far more dangerous to our welfare is the unfortunate attitude of the public toward scientists. Commenting on this, the president of a large corporation in St. Louis remarked recently, "Students' minds and those of their parents have been poisoned by the insidious cloud of anti-intellectualism which hangs over this country like a great shroud."

SHORTLY after the appearance of this statement by Dr. Charles Thomas, a news release from Iowa State College noted that in the previous 18 months, more than 30 members of the engineering faculty there had resigned to take better paying jobs. Of course the public distrust of intellectuals evidences itself most tangibly in insistence that college instructors work for peon's wages.

The anti-intellectualism Dr. Thomas mentions is a consequence of the fact that as a colonized nation, the United States absorbed millions of poorly educated immigrants. A mass inferiority complex developed whereby inward misgivings about shortcomings in culture were shouted down by scorn of learning and culture, and for our country the archetype of the intellect became not a figure like Goethe or Dr. Johnson, but the "absent-minded professor." The professor was gibed good-naturedly, but his new colleague, the scientist, is feared and hated. As Dr. Thomas put it, "Science has become identified in the minds of a great many people as a sort of super 'Svengali,' responsible for all our dilemmas."

Poet Auden in his talk distinguished between verse writers who are poets and those who are historians. Poet Karl Shapiro in a similar lecture some years back probably phrased this more aptly by expressing the division as between "mythic poets who believe in the transcendental value of art and historic poets who believe in the propagandistic value of art."

A HEALTHY development in the field of verse would be the emergence of some historic poets who—remembering that they are not alone in their isolation from the public and endurance of its scorn—would use their talents to propagandize for a more favorable attitude on the part of the public to scientists and other intellectuals, plus higher salaries for college instructors. The scientists and professors, eventually in a more benign frame of mind and with more money to spend as a result of such propaganda, might in turn purchase more books of verse. I cannot claim that this would bring general happiness to humanity, but it would be just one more small step in the tedious process of making this a less unendurable world to live in.

A Letter to Mr. Lincoln

By HARNETT T. KANE

IN the highly colored career of Belle Boyd, most celebrated of all the Confederate spies, two successive Christmases were never to be forgotten. On one holiday the blonde agent of the South knew the grimmest hour of her life; on the next, she enjoyed probably the happiest.

At that first season of good cheer, the 21-year-old Belle suffered the bitter knowledge that her bridegroom lay in a Federal prison, and that he might meet death at any time.

Her husband had been a Northern Navy man, and his ship had captured hers at sea, when Belle left North Carolina for England as a secret agent of the Confederacy. In highly romantic fashion young Samuel Harding fell in love with his handsome enemy; as a result he got into Union difficulties and was dismissed from the service. Then he followed her to England, married her, returned temporarily to America—only to find himself accused as a Southern spy in his own right!

Thus, on December 25 of 1864, Belle Boyd stared bleakly into a London fog, praying that her husband would somehow be returned to her.

Twelve months later, in the next holiday season of the British capital, the slim blond Confederate had her man back, and the future looked bright again. Between the two dates Belle wrote one of the most remarkable letters ever to be hidden in long-secret war records in Washington, D.C. Only recently have certain of these documents been opened, and during a period of research this writer came upon her message to Abraham Lincoln.

The youthful Belle addressed President Lincoln, not as a suppliant for favor, but as a woman offering a blunt trade, a deal. She told him that she had been informed that if she suppressed her pending memoirs, President Lincoln might let her husband go.

Belle added: "I think it would be well for you and me to come to some definite understanding." Her memoirs would contain, the Southerner advised Lincoln, "a great many facts which would discredit the Union government, many things of which the world on this (the English) side of the water little dreams."

AND so, Belle Boyd told President Lincoln, if he would release her husband she would not bring out her volume. In a final passage she gave Lincoln a "deadline"—the beginning of March. If Sam Hardinge were not free then, she would "at once place my book in the hands of a publisher."

Not many people sent such a message directly to the President of the United States. There is no evidence that Lincoln acted on the basis of what Belle wrote. Nevertheless her husband did go free about a month after she addressed Lincoln, and shortly before her deadline.

Belle could be happy again; and today Lincoln authorities have a rare letter to study, casting new light on the character of the good-looking, light-haired lady agent. Belle was involved in many dramatic activities as the most fabulous spy of the war; she eavesdropped on Union military conferences; she ran out to battles with word that saved campaigns for the South. But this letter to Lincoln may rank with the most daring of all her attempts.

Some called her "the Confederacy's Joan of Arc," while others described her as "Dixie's Mata Hara," depending, of course, on which side they favored!

SWING TO RELIGIOUS TOYS IS REPORTED

Popular Game Is 'Going to Jerusalem'—New Doll Says Prayer.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP)—Newest trend in the Christmas toy trade, currently booming at the record sales of $15,000,000 a day, is the swing to religious toys and games.

Biggest new game of Parker Brothers Inc., world's largest producer of games for children and adults, is "going to Jerusalem," based on the revised standard version of the Bible. A copy of the four Gospels is included with every game.

Brightest new star in the giant line of Ideal Toy Corp. is "Patti Praise," a talking doll which repeats the prayer, "Now I lay me down to sleep," whenever it is tucked in for the night.

Toy sales this year should top one billion dollars for the first time in history, said Benjamin F. Michtom, board chairman of Ideal Toy. He put the industry's 1955 volume at the retail level at $1,100,000,000, slightly lower than the $1,250,000,000 estimate of the toy manufacturers association.

Two Big Months.

Michtom said November and December normally account for 61 per cent of all toys sold and nearly 75 per cent of all toys over $2. This would bring holiday sales to a record $700,000,000, about 8 per cent above the 1954 holiday total.

It will be a record $100,000,000 year in the games industry too, according to Robert B. M. Barton, president of the 72-year-old Parker Brothers firm of Salem, Mass.

"More people are playing games today than ever before," said Barton. "I expect this trend to continue and become much more evident within the next 10 years.

"The home today is again the center of family activity. With the widespread popularity of the automobile, people used to believe you might live at home but you had to leave it to get real enjoyment.

Pendulum Swings.

"Now the pendulum has swung back after 30 to 40 years. Television has brought people back home to stay. Today's new homes not only have living rooms but game rooms as well."

Parker Brothers is a privately-held corporation. Its annual sales and earnings are a closely guarded secret. Barton did say his firm expected to more than double its annual business within the next decade.

Parker Brothers' "monopoly" has been a runaway best seller in the games field for 20 years. Its sales totals have never been officially disclosed but trade sources place it conservatively in the neighborhood of $12,000,000.

Toys are most successful when they answer a real need. A good example is that perennial favorite the "betsy wetsy" doll. It stemmed from a mother's appeal to Benjamin Michtom in 1934 for something to appease her little daughter, terribly upset over a new baby in the family. Michtom devised a doll that did almost everything the new baby did so that the 2-year-old could treat it exactly as her mother did the newborn baby. It was an instant hit.

This striving for realism explains the success of another new hit—Ideal's "magic lips" doll. When held close to the cheek and squeezed about the middle, this doll opens and closes its mouth with a slight suction, giving the actual sensation of a kiss.

ANNUAL REINDEER ROUNDUP IS UNDER WAY IN FAR NORTH

OTTAWA, Dec. 3 (UP)—Some 25 Eskimos began Canada's annual reindeer roundup this week, the Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources said yesterday.

The reindeer, 6500 of them in five herds, roam a 16,700-square-mile area east of the Mackenzie delta. They will be driven to corrals on the reindeer range i nthe Aklavik area for the winter. About 500 mature steers and surplus females will be culled for slaughter, and the meat, nearly 70,000 pounds, will be sold in the area. The number being slaughtered is less than in previous years because of a decrease in the reindeer population, attributed to an apparent dietary deficiency.

Women to Sweep Streets.

WILLENHALL, England, Dec. 3 (AP)—The town council has asked Willenhall women to sweep the streets. "We can't get men to do the work because of the labor shortage," public works chairman Cyril Andrew said. The women will get the full rate—just under £8 ($22.40) a week.

31ST GIRL SCOUT FESTIVAL TODAY

'March of Toys' to Be Highlight of Event.

Girl Scouts and leaders of the Girl Scout Council of Greater St. Louis will attend the thirty-first annual Gift Festival at 2:30 p.m. today in Convention Hall at Kiel Auditorium.

The festival, sponsored by Stix, Baer & Fuller Co., is for the benefit of underprivileged children in the St. Louis area.

Highlight of the afternoon program will be a "March of Toys" in which Girl Scouts will bring gifts they have made to the center of the hall, where they will be distributed to child-care agencies approved by the Social Planning Council.

Entertainment at the event will include group singing, antics of clowns from Moolah Temple Shrine Circus and four tableaux picturing "Festivals Around the World."

Members of Troop 614, District 5, will present Christmas stockings they have filled to the children at St. Domenica Orphans' Home, 1340 Partridge avenue, Thursday. The project fulfills part of the requirements for Child Care and Seamstress badges.

The Girl Scout Carolers will sing in a program at 2:30 p.m. Saturday for the children's art class at the City Art Museum. The group, which will be dressed in medieval costumes, will sing four songs.

Residents of Rugh Manor Rest Home in St. John will be given cookies by members of Intermediate Troop 760, Overland Trails District, tomorrow afternoon. The girls also will sing a group of Christmas carols.

Senior Troop 827, Florissant Valley, will camp next weekend at Winter Cabin at Girl Scout Camp Cedarledge, near Pevely, Mo. They will be accompanied by their leader, Mrs. Arnold Cook, a licensed camper.

MUSEUM OPENS SALE OF 421 ART OBJECTS

367 Are Dealer-Owned—54 Works by St. Louisans Included.

"Collector's Choice," a Christmas sale and exhibition of 421 art objects from many different countries and periods, opened to the public yesterday at the City Art Museum. Included are 54 works by 30 St. Louis artists who have won awards in the museum's last 10 Missouri shows.

A major purpose of the sale, it was explained by Charles Nagel, director of the museum, is further to stimulate intelligent art-collecting here. A wide base of popular support by art-interested persons is the best backing a museum can have, he said. A preview for the museum "Friends" was held Friday.

Prices of 367 objects chosen by museum officers from New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and Toronto galleries range from $4 for "Florida Rat," a John James Audubon print, to $1020 for a pair of Sevres porcelain vases. All 367 pieces are here on consignment.

Other extremes at the press preview were three $8 prints by Hiroshige, Japanese master; Audubon prints of the wolverine, arctic fox and prairie marmoset squirrel, beginning at $9, and Byzantine, Italian and Chinese statuettes priced between $900 and $1000.

Chronologically, the range is from a terra cotta figure of the Mother Goddess from ancient Sumeria, about 3000 B.C., to an abstract lithograph by Alfred Manessier of Paris, winner of first prize in Pittsburgh's current Carnegie Institute International Exhibition of Contemporary Painting. Also represented are such other modern Europeans as Marino Marini, Hans Erni, Picasso and Rouault.

There are delicate and appealing classical antiquities in bronze and silver, Italian Renaissance statuettes in bronze and a portrait-like pair of pottery figures from China's Han dynasty.

A number of handsomely-made useful objects are available, such as constituted the museum's "Italy at Work" exhibition. Among the museum's attractive gift suggestions are cigarette boxes, bowls, earrings and faience ware from noted European centers.

Diversity and balance are the collection's keynotes. America is represented by everything from pre-Colombian pottery to oil paintings by Jimmy Ernst and Randall Morgan, prints by Leonard Baskin, Adja Yunkers and Ben Shahn and a drawing by Stephen Greene, formerly of the Washington University School of Fine Arts faculty here.

Missouri show prize-winners with from one to three pieces on sale follow:

Hillis Arnold, Fred Becker, Edward E. Boccia, Fred Conway, Herbert Cummings, Eda Lincoln Cushing, Patricia Degener, Fred Dreher, Marguerite Drewes, Herbert Faintich, William Fett, James Harmon, Louise Horwitz, Edward Menges, Jean Morrison, Elizabeth Phelan.

Charles Quest, Maria Regnier, Siegfried Reinhardt, Ron Rish, Raymond Scheller, Aimee Schweig, Melvina Calvert Schworm, Ann Scott, Helen M. Smith, Marie Taylor, Betty R. Vollmer, John Wallace, Rodney Winfield.

The sale will end Dec. 18.

Self-Help Dictionary

Arabic As She Is Spoke by Tourists

By Art Buchwald

PARIS.

THOSE who are planning to travel to the Near East in the near future will be happy to know there is a dictionary available which covers almost every situation. It is called "The English Arabic Conversational Dictionary" (Ungar, $4.50) and was used by a friend of ours, television actress and model Nancy Berg. Miss Berg recently toured Egypt, Lebanon and Jordan.

NANCY BERG . . . "HO, THERE! PUT ME ASHORE."

The dictionary, written during the days when both Great Britain and France were carrying the White Man's Burden in the Arab world, has many helpful sections which Miss Berg said she put to use.

Upon arriving at the Cairo airport she turned to the section on Arrivals and said in her best Arabic: "Ho, there! You, boatman! Put me ashore." When the porter seemed startled she turned to the next phrase: "What do you want for putting me ashore? Anyone would take me for a franc, at the utmost two francs. Well, I will give you two and a half francs, but mind, you must take no other people in the boat but me."

The dictionary indicated the first thing a porter would say to her was: "You can satisfy the mind of the customs house officer with a trifle," to which she was instructed to reply in Arabic: "That is your business—do the needful."

● ONCE OUT OF CUSTOMS, Miss Berg turned to the section on what to say "To a Beggar Whom You Give Nothing." You must say in Arabic: "God give you something" or "God give you sustenance" or simply "I have nothing with me."

Miss Berg did well at her hotel, but on going to a cafe she started a discussion when using the book. She complained "The tembek is not well squeezed out." (Tembek, Miss Berg discovered, was a Persian tobacco smoked in hookah pipe only.)

Miss Berg learned how to ask for a camel, a tent and a Turkish bath, in a matter of days.

The only difficulty she said she had with her dictionary was when she used the section of "Offers" or "Thanking." It told her how to say: "I do not know what to offer to give you pleasure," "I beg you to accept this trifle from me," "Take it out of love to me," "I have nothing that does not belong to you," "My all is in your purse."

But she was saved from embarrassment by the following phrases titled "Dissatisfaction and Reproaches." They were "Why do you always play me such stupid tricks?" "Why this wickedness?" "I am very dissatisfied with you," "Beware a second time" and "Leave off at last."

● FROM RADIO FREE EUROPE in Vienna comes one of the stories they are supposed to be telling in Hungary now.

At a Communist instruction school the teacher gave a lecture on national income. He said that Hungary has 867,016 cows, 2,389,534 pigs and 18,093,112 chickens. After the lecture he called for questions.

Comrade Kovacs timidly raised his hand from the back of the room and asked:

"If there are really so many cows, where is the beef and milk? If there are really so many pigs, where is the pork? If there is really so much poultry, where are the eggs?"

The teacher declared the meeting over, and announced he would answer this valuable question the following week.

At the next meeting he said: "Hungary has 867,016 cows and the meat goes to the workers' canteens, the milk is sent to the hospitals, the pork stands at the disposal of the consumers, and the eggs are sent to the market."

Once again he asked if there were any questions.

A voice from the rear shouted: "At least we know what you do with the meat and milk and eggs. Now we'd like to know what you did with Comrade Kovacs!"

Christmas Cards

By Emily Post

DEAR MRS. POST: In what order should Mary and John Smith be printed on Christmas cards, and in what order handwritten? Secondly, if I have personal friends who have never met my husband, it is suitable to send cards with both our names to these people?

Answer: (1) When the names on Christmas cards are to be printed, the usual order is Mary and John Smith, but there is no final rule except when children's names are included. In this case John's name appears first. If the names are handwritten by Mary she in politeness writes John's name first and vice versa. (2) Even if some of your friends have never met your husband that makes no difference. This card would be suitable to send to anyone who is a personal friend of either of you.

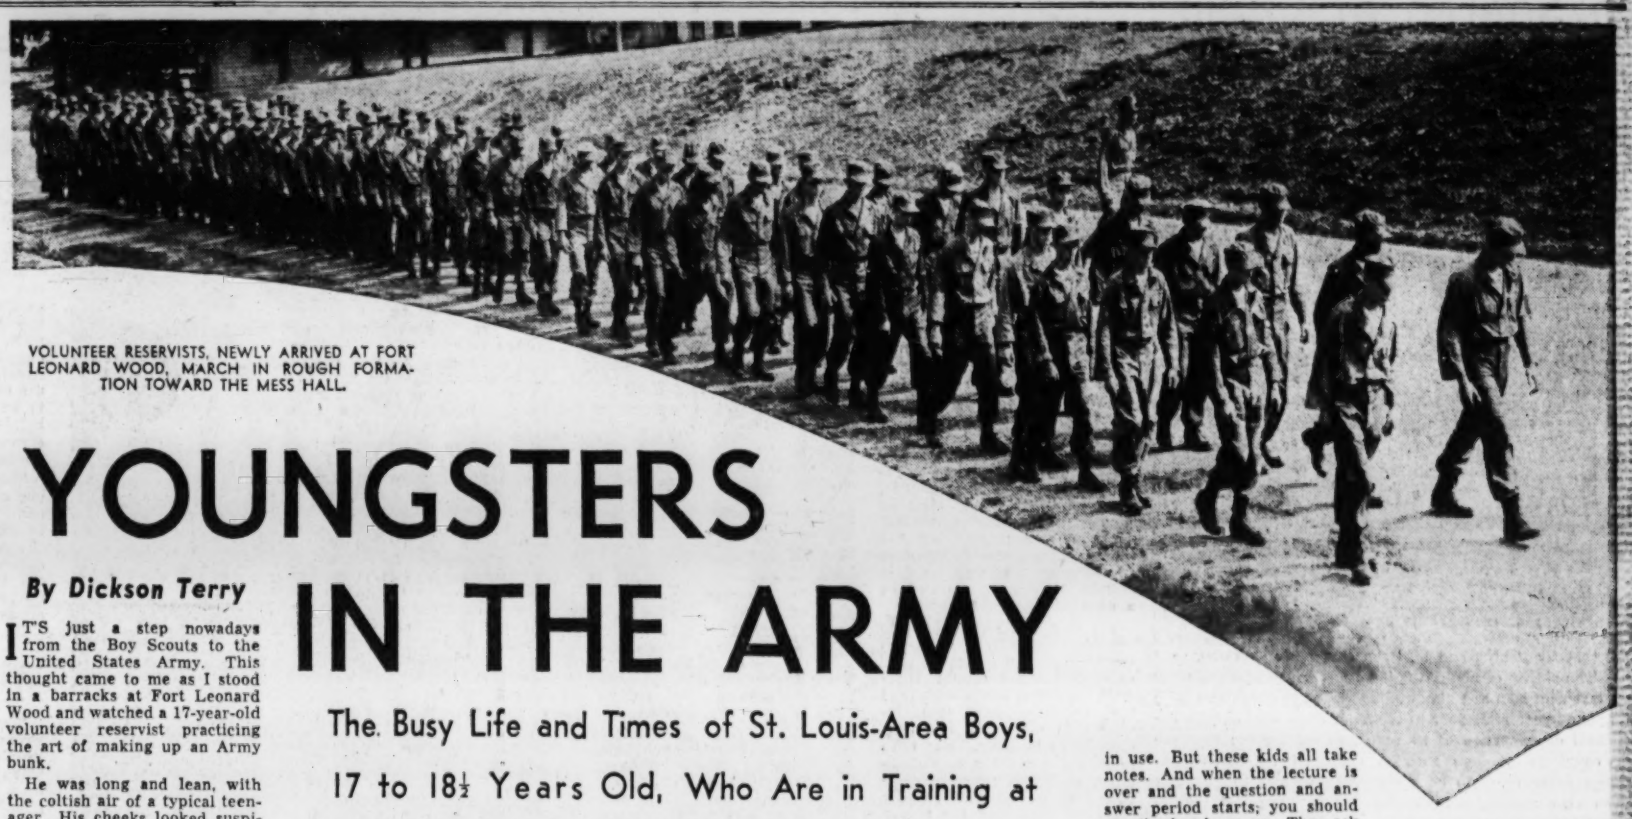
DEAR MRS. POST: My son is in the fourth grade at school. At Christmas nearly all of the children bring presents to the teacher. Most of them bring candy, and as a result the teacher goes home laden with candy which she couldn't possibly eat. I would like to buy a slip for my son to bring to his teacher, but was wondering if it would be in good taste.

Answer: If you know the teacher personally and the kind of slip she would like to have, it would be proper to give it to her. Otherwise it would be too intimate a present to give a stranger.



VOLUNTEER RESERVISTS, NEWLY ARRIVED AT FORT LEONARD WOOD, MARCH IN ROUGH FORMATION TOWARD THE MESS HALL.

YOUNGSTERS IN THE ARMY

The Busy Life and Times of St. Louis-Area Boys, 17 to 18½ Years Old, Who Are in Training at Fort Leonard Wood Under Volunteer Reserve Act

By Dickson Terry

IT'S just a step nowadays from the Boy Scouts to the United States Army. This thought came to me as I stood in a barracks at Fort Leonard Wood and watched a 17-year-old volunteer reservist practicing the art of making up an Army bunk.

He was long and lean, with the coltish air of a typical teen-ager. His cheeks looked suspiciously as though they hadn't yet felt the touch of a razor. I asked him if he had been a Boy Scout. He stopped making the bed and looked at me with mild surprise.

"Sure," he said, "I was a Boy Scout up to about a couple of years ago."

Now, at 17, he was a soldier in the United States Army, a member of the youngest group of soldiers the Army has trained in modern times.

His name was James Rogers and he came from East St. Louis. He was fairly typical of the 481 boys who have reported to Fort Leonard Wood to take advantage of the Army's new reserve act.

Young Rogers had been a junior in high school, he told me as he put the finishing touches on the bunk, and when he heard about the program he quit school right then and joined up. Why?

"I just decided to come in and get it over with in six months instead of two years," he explained. He was referring to the two years of active duty he would have had to serve had he waited until draft age and been called up. "I figured I could finish high school in the Army," he continued, "and then learn a trade. I want to be a mechanic."

Rogers had been a soldier for two whole weeks when I talked to him, and still liked it. Liked it fine, in fact.

"Man, they feed you real good," he grinned. "I've gained 15 pounds in two weeks." I looked with some wonder at his spare frame. "That's with my combat boots on," he hastened to add. "I guess they must weigh five pounds. But then too, I only weighed 117 when I got here."

SEATED on another bunk was Robert Lee Newhouse, another 17-year-old, of 4030A Olive street. Around Newhouse were a lot of parts of an M-1 rifle. He was cleaning the gun with the loving care of a teen-ager with his first .22 rifle. He had never owned a gun, he said, and he quite obviously was impressed with having been trusted with this fascinating mechanism which could kill a man a mile away.

"They taught us how to take it apart and put it together again," he told me, "and I learned how to do it in an hour."

It would be several days yet before he would be ready for actual target practice, but you could tell he was itching to shoot it. "I've shot a twenty-two a couple of times," he said as he ran his hand over the gun. "But this here is a little different."

Many things are a little different at Fort Leonard Wood these days since the 17- and 18-year-olds started arriving, but the Army is adjusting nicely to the situation. Sometimes it's a little hard to tell whether you're at a regular Army camp or at Beaumont Boy Scout reservation, but that's part of the Army's plan, and according to Col. Kenneth McCrimmon, who is in charge of the youthful battalions, it's working out fine.

The reserve act, under which the youngsters joined up, provides that boys between the ages of 17 and 18½ can have six months actual training, the same as is given any inductee—except perhaps a little more intensive because of the time element—after which they become civilian reservists for the next seven and a half years. This means they must report for drill once a week, for which they receive a day's pay, and must attend camp for two weeks each year. If they wait and get drafted, they have to put in two years active duty, followed by four more years in the reserve.

The 481 young volunteers at Fort Leonard Wood, 140 miles southwest of St. Louis, live together in the same area and train together, Col. McCrimmon pointed out. The Army's approach to the problem of handling them is summed up in three words: gentle but firm.

A hand-picked staff has been assembled to train the boys, Col. McCrimmon explained. The men are selected, he said, for "unimpeachable character and ability to train." In other words, men who can set a good example for the boys."

The officers and non-coms have been instructed not to swear at the young volunteers and to treat them, in the words of Maj. Gen. Frank O. Bowman, post commander, "with cheerfulness, absolute fairness and impartiality."

"In short," says Col. McCrimmon, a youngish man with a strong, open countenance, "it's a sort of father-and-son relationship." There are many aspects of the situation which obviously make such a relationship necessary. Since the young soldiers are minors, questions arise, such as drinking. They have been warned they are not to drink, and the tavern owners and liquor dealers in the neighborhood of the camp have also been warned against selling them beer or whisky.

They wear no distinguishing insignia. It had been planned at first, said Col. McCrimmon, to give them an identifying arm patch, but it was decided it would have a bad effect psychologically to set them apart in any way.

AFTER eight weeks at camp the boys get a two-weeks' leave, after which they are shuffled according to what branch of training they are to follow. This is determined by aptitude tests and the needs of the reserve unit to which they will be attached after the six-months' basic training.

A boy, for instance, who is going into the infantry will be sent to Ford Ord, Calif., or Jackson, S.C. If he is going into anti-aircraft, he will be sent to Fort Bliss, Tex. If he is going into engineering, he will spend his whole six months at Fort Leonard Wood, an engineering center. Six Army centers are participating in the program.

The boy himself may make a choice of training, Col McCrimmon said, but whether he gets his choice will depend on his aptitude and the needs of his reserve unit. After the second eight weeks of training, the boy will take his place as an individual in a unit of the branch he has been trained in. The final six to eight weeks is the unit training phase in which he will simulate training missions with his unit.

How do the youngsters look compared to regular Army inductees?

"Well," said Col. McCrimmon, "line up two companies and you couldn't tell them apart at 25 feet. But on closer inspection, and talking to the youngsters, you'll find considerable difference."

The average inductee is likely to be anything but starry-eyed and eager.

"But these men are volunteers," says Col. McCrimmon, "and that makes the difference. No one dragged them in here. They have a motivation, which makes the main difference in their attitudes.

"You can see it in their receptiveness to training. For instance, every trainee is required to carry a notebook and pencil to all class-room instruction. The inductees carry them, but you won't see one in a hundred in use. But these kids all take notes. And when the lecture is over and the question and answer period starts; you should see the hands go up. They ask intelligent questions too. They want to learn."

THE boys are given questionnaires to fill out soon after they arrive, and one of the questions inquires into their motivation for volunteering under the program. Some typical answers:

"Six months sounded a lot better than two years for something you don't know anything about."

"Because I will be able to go straight from college to a job without having to spend two years in the Army."

"I came to see if the Army was like they said. It's not. I like it."

The boys are up at 5:45 a.m., possibly earlier than most of them had ever been up before. It seemed a little rough at first, one of the boys told me, but you get so you like it. Immediately after reveille there are 10 minutes of physical training, with breakfast at 6:15.

A typical breakfast consists of chilled grapefruit sections, hot cereal, scrambled eggs, hashed brown potatoes, buttered toast, jelly, milk and coffee.

A typical lunch: smothered ham steaks, O'Brien potatoes, parsley corn, salad of fruit and lettuce, bread and butter and chocolate cream pie.

The boys are allowed two bottles of milk per meal instead of the usual one, if they want it. They always do, a mess sergeant reported.

After breakfast they return to the barracks for housekeeping duties before falling out at 7:30 for the morning's training. The first few weeks are devoted to classroom work and preparatory rifle instruction. In the rifle instruction course they learn how to align a correct sight picture and how to hold their breath and "squeeze the shot off."

On the day I was there, the first contingent was getting its first actual shooting on the range, and even though it was a chilly day with a drizzling rain, they were as eager as Eagle Scouts after a new merit badge.

They spent the afternoon shooting at man-sized targets several hundred yards away across a rugged terrain. They were a little surprised at how hard the targets were to hit.

"But it's fun, I like it," said Harvey Pilsing, a 17-year-old St. Louisan.

Ordinarily the volunteer's training day ends at 4:30 p.m., and after dinner he is free until bed time. But this day they were being kept on the range to practice firing in the dark.

Late in the afternoon, a huge Army truck arrived with field mess, which was set up in the stacking area, where the boys had left their packs. When firing practice ended, they were told to count off. They didn't just count off, they yelled off. You could hear them two hills away.

WHEN they marched back to the stacking area, mail was waiting for them. As soon as they had been dismissed, they made a run for the mail sergeant and almost knocked him down. Most of them had letters from home, which they tried to read hurriedly in the failing light.

At the call for mess, they grabbed their mess kits and lined up for huge helpings of noodles with rib ends of beef, green beans, tossed salad, bread and butter and cake.

Sitting together on the cold ground in the semi-darkness, wolfing their chow, was a group of St. Louis boys. One of them was Robert Solomon, 807 University place.

"I like it," said Solomon between bites. "I'm really glad I joined up when I did. You see, I plan to go to college—I graduated from high school last June—and now I'll have my Army service out of the way. Also, I can go to summer school next summer."

Ben Villmer, who is 17, and lives at 3892A Humphrey, also graduated from high school last summer. "I found out about this thing through a friend of mine in the reserve unit," he explained, "and I'm convinced now you can't beat it, as far as being in the Army is concerned, that is. I mean, if you've got to do it, this is the way to do it. I plan to go to St. Louis University, and now I'll have my active service out of the way."

Thomas N. Williams, 18 years old, also heard about it from a friend in a reserve unit.

"It's really interesting," he said, "learning about weapons and all. And the confidence course, too, that's a course that gives you confidence in yourself. It did me a lot of good. And we're learning about bombs, and how to shoot a rifle. . . ."

"How did you shoot today?" one of the boys asked him. Williams grinned. "No comment," he said. "But I like everything about it, including the food. Man, when it comes to the food, this is living."

"I've gained 10 pounds in three weeks," said Harvey Pilsing, another St. Louis boy.

"I've gained 11 pounds," said Villmer as he stuffed his mouth with cake.

Regular hours and plenty of sleep have something to do with it, too, the boys conceded. Being asleep at 10 o'clock was, they admitted, something of a novelty to them. What time had they been going to bed at home? "Well, let's see," one of them said, "the last TV show goes off about 12:30 — one o'clock. . . ."

IT is not expected, of course, that the six months of training will make combat-ready soldiers out of the youngsters. But with their once-a-week drill, and two weeks each summer at camp, says Col. McCrimmon, they can be whipped into combat shape in a comparatively short time if they are needed.

To date enlistment under the act has been slow, Col. McCrimmon concedes, with only some 3000 youngsters over the country having signed up, of which only 1700 are in actual training, the remainder having been given deferment until they get out of high school.

"But when word gets around, and school lets out next spring," says Col. McCrimmon, "it will be a different story. All the youngsters have to do is hear about the advantages of the program, and how it's being handled, they'll go for it. They get $50 a month pay while they're here, and then they get a day's pay each week for going to drill, which will help keep them in pocket money while they're going to college. You can't beat it."

The question naturally arises as to what would happen to a volunteer reservist if, after finishing his six months, he didn't report regularly to his reserve unit. He would find himself right back in the Army, Col. McCrimmon said. He'd be called up and sent back to camp for active duty 45 days each year.

Over Brown Fields In Search of Quail

By Leonard Hall

MOST seasons of the year offer something of interest for those who love the outdoors, so that we are fortunately not faced with the choice of a "favorite" sport. Yet if such a selection were forced upon me, I think I'd have to list two which are equal in their attraction and unequaled by any others. One of these is fly fishing for smallmouth bass—and especially wading the smaller streams which traverse the Ozark hills, although I've certainly enjoyed a thousand float trips. And the other is pursuing the bobwhite quail across the brown fields of November and December behind a wide-coursing bird dog. The duck marsh at dawn has its thrill with the whisper of wings overhead—and so does the big timber during deer season. But here in our Missouri Ozarks, I'd say that fly fishing and bird shooting reign supreme.

The ability of fast-flying little bobwhite to live in close contact with man and his dwelling places, to breed and raise its young year after year in the same cover and despite the general deterioration of its range, to survive the pressure of countless gunners through countless autumns—these things never cease to be a matter of wonder to me. But even more amazing is the ability of this "King of American Game Birds" to respond with a goodly upsurge in numbers whenever we take steps to improve the conditions under which it lives. And this is a very fortunate thing, for man's intensive use of the land has an ever-growing tendency to increase the pressure and there are many fronts on which bobwhite fights a gallant but losing battle. The steady encroachment of suburbia on rural areas, the growing human population, land taken from cultivation for towns and highways, clean farming with its drainage and brush-clearing and skinned-out fence rows; all these are the enemies of the bobwhite.

The average sportsman has his contact with the birds during the short weeks from early November when the season opens, until the last day of the year when it closes or until bad weather ends his days afield. During this time, if he is observant, he becomes quite familiar with the species. He learns a good deal about its habits at this time of year; how it roosts well out in the open, gradually feeds toward cover in the morning, takes a mid-day nap in some secluded thicket, and in the afternoon moves out again toward the roosting ground, feeding along the way. He also probably agrees that quail more and more range close to cover and fly farther on the rise; these being natural adaptations which help in the struggle for survival.

● THE THING we're likely to forget, when our contact with bobwhite comes mainly during the hunting season, is that the really important time in the life cycle of the quail is the period from the last day of the year when shooting ends, until the day in November the following year when it begins again. This is the period which determines how many birds we'll find in our quail hunting territory on opening day each year. First of all, the birds which have survived the hunting season must now survive the severest weather of winter which normally comes in January and February. This is the time when food supplies run low and when cover is beaten to the ground by rain and snow; it is the time when predators such as fox and Cooper's hawk probably take their heaviest toll.

The months of spring offer perhaps the fewest problems for bobwhite, provided enough pairs have survived to occupy the cover and use the available nesting sites. Now food is plentiful on most farm lands and growing vegetation of many kinds affords good cover. Whether this will still be the case at the height of the nesting season in June when the mowing machines come into the hay fields is a question. And as summer wears on, pastures and meadows are likely to be grazed by hungry cattle, so that growing broods of birds are forced to move. On many farms, autumn arrives to find little of either food or cover left to support what may have been a good hatch of quail. And under these conditions, predation is heavy and surviving birds move in search of better territory.

● HERE IN OUR PART OF MISSOURI, the quail population had been hard hit by the long years of drouth and we were afraid several seasons would be necessary for them to stage a real comeback. A practical cessation of hunting last year in this area, a comparatively mild winter and an ideal hatching season this year, however, have all combined to help the bobwhites. And the result is that our quail population is back again almost to normal, with good coveys being found in most of their familiar haunts of past seasons.

Our own shooting this year is not of the best, although we can't blame bobwhite for that. There hasn't been time, unfortunately, to make much of a business of hunting and our few expeditions have been limited to a couple of hours in morning or afternoon. Old Mike, though he still cavorts at the sight of a gun, has slowed down to a trot and is stiff for a day after he has been out. His nose, moreover, is beginning to fail him although he occasionally nails his bird and makes a stand with all the grace and confidence of past years. Young Tiger, on the other hand, is all fire and dash. He ranges out and covers ground like a veteran and finds the coveys. But he won't always hold them if old Mike comes lumbering up and he still hasn't developed the caution or certainty to handle his singles, especially in the woods. And this is where we invariably hunt singles. Add to this the fact that the old man is no longer fast enough to score well on birds that flush wild and far out and it isn't hard to see why Ginnie is enjoying fewer breakfasts of quail on toast than usual.

Somehow, none of this seems to interfere much with the pleasure of being afield; and as I follow the dogs and now and then make a lucky shot, I'm busy planning new bits of cover and feed patches for future generations of bobwhites at Possum Trot.

Takes Headaches Out of Weddings

St. Louis Woman Has Made a Business of Handling Details for Mother of the Bride

By Clarissa Start

WHEN Frances Orrick was married to Ralph Campbell, "everything went wrong." It was raining and one of the aunts of the bride was of the opinion that the nuptials should be called off until more propitious climatic conditions. As the bride left her uncle's home, the big white colonial house at Clay and Adams streets in Kirkwood (now the Methodist Wesley House), to go to the church, everything was in total darkness. No one had anticipated the extra load on the electric current.

"The flower girl was so fascinated by me that she walked down the aisle backward," Mrs. Campbell recalls, "and now that I look back on it, I'm sure that everyone sat on the wrong side of the church. Also it was in the days of those up-and-down hemline chiffon dresses and we weren't a very pretty sight."

All in all, it did nothing to indicate that Mrs. Campbell would some day make a career of engineering weddings. However, weddings and debuts and the countless headaches involved in both now are Mrs. Campbell's business. She tries to keep the mishaps to a minimum, is always sure the electricity is equipped to handle the extra load, that the flower girls are well instructed, and the guests seated properly. Nevertheless, things keep happening, things you'd never expect.

"Each time you think you'll guard against it," she says, "but each time it's something entirely different, something you'd never think would happen."

Who would expect, for instance, that a bride would pack all her girdles away and discover after the luggage had been taken away that she had none left to wear, necessitating an after-hours break-in of a ready-to-wear shop (with the shop's permission, of course).

Who would guess that they would lose the sword to cut the cake at a military wedding? Fortunately on this occasion, Mrs. Campbell was able to crawl into a closet on her hands and knees and unearth another sword.

The dress which doesn't arrive or turns out to be the wrong one is a regular nightmare of the professional wedding supervisor. On one occasion one of Mrs. Campbell's brides lifted the veil out of the box and gasped, "But it's not mine." Sure enough, it wasn't. There was a hurry-up call to the store, much confusion and finally the bride happily decided she liked the other girl's veil better than hers and wore it.

As she stood at the altar, a breathless messenger girl showed up from the store. Mrs. Campbell snarled slightly and told her to go away.

But the problem still wasn't solved. A short time later the store telephoned her at the wedding reception which was held in Alton, Ill. Could she bring back the veil as the other girl was being married at 9:30 the next morning and would have to have it.

"At 2:30 the next morning I rolled up in front of the Congress Hotel to deliver the veil to the next bride," Mrs. Campbell sighs.

ANOTHER bride had to be sewed into her dress when the zipper went off the track and simply would not go back on. This would have been all right except that they were dressing in the church. It was a strange church to Mrs. Campbell, she couldn't seem to find where the sewing society met, and she didn't have a needle. (She always has a needle now.) The wedding was held up until a needle was located, the bride tried hard not to cry, and all the others tried hard to be very very funny.

Mrs. Campbell feels the mother of the bride or debutante is wise to delegate these last-minute worries and crises to an outsider.

"After all, at a wedding or a debut you are in the receiving line an hour or two hours. You don't know what's going on in the kitchen—if the oven's exploded in the caterer's face or one of the maids is getting sick or one of the waiters is getting drunk. No one knows and you can't let the people out front know. Something happens at every party; that's the value of having someone like me to take the brunt. If it's a beautiful party, the hostess takes the bows. If everything goes wrong, where's Mrs. Campbell?"

Mrs. Campbell got into this business quite by chance. A graduate of Mary Institute and Washington University, she worked as a commercial artist before her marriage to insurance man Ralph Campbell. When their daughter, Peggy, was small, she was asked to help give parties for the Service Bureau. With the war, the party department folded up. After the war, some of her friends began asking her to help with weddings and debuts and she started out on her own.

She operates from her apartment, 5539 Waterman avenue, from which she also runs the Contemporary Club, a dinner-lecture series club which meets a half dozen times a year.

"Everyone thinks it's a glamorous exciting business," she says, "but like any business, it's hard work."

The biggest headache of handling a debut is the dating system peculiar to St. Louis. Girls are assigned to certain escorts and the girl doesn't know who her date is until he calls her. Sometimes as Mrs. Campbell is leaving for a party, she gets a frantic call from a girl whose escort hasn't called and she must rustle one up at the last minute.

Not enough men, too many men (so they tend to congregate) and crashers are other debut problems.

Weddings on the other hand present deeper emotional scenes.

"NO matter how calm everyone is there comes a moment when the father of the bride thinks, 'Who is this upstart?'" says Mrs. Campbell. "And when the mother thinks, 'Oh my baby, my baby,' and the daughter thinks, 'Why, this man is a stranger.' Most brides are temperamental. They always have a crying fit either early or late. I remember one wedding couple. They'd been sweethearts all through school, never looked at anyone else.

"Two days before the wedding, the bride began crying and couldn't stop. Her mother was so disgusted; she said, 'If I were the man I wouldn't have her.' But eventually all went well.

"Even my own daughter (Peggy Campbell, now Mrs. Sam C. Minnis, mother of two daughters) was temperamental and at one point said, 'Why can't we get someone in here who knows something about running a wedding?'"

Mrs. Campbell can recall only one really unhappy bride, one so disinterested in her wedding she wouldn't even open the gifts. The marriage later turned out to be highly successful. Arranging gifts is only one of the detail jobs she must handle, in an operation which involves helping send out invitations, arrange for detectives, parking, photographers, etc.

"Some brides will say, 'No one can open my presents but me. I don't want anyone else to touch them,'" she says. "Toward the end when she comes home from parties and the boxes are stacked high in the hall, she's happy to have anyone else open them."

MRS. CAMPBELL confesses she has a pretty jaundiced eye toward presents.

"Sometimes I feel as if I worked at Jaccard's or Lammert's," she says. "I'm so glad when a girl has lots of out-of-town friends so I can see new gifts."

Sometimes she writes thank-you notes. She doesn't strictly approve of this but feels if it's a case of a gift not being acknowledged, it's better to have someone write the notes. Her hardest chore was writing to 20 people, all of whom had contributed to the same gift, and making the 20 notes sound different since the people lived in the same small town and might compare them.

After the wedding, she sometimes has the task of exchanging gifts. Wedding presents run to duplicates and the duplication seems without rhyme or reason. One bride got nothing but clocks. Another received eight turkey dressing spoons, another five pairs of game scissors.

Children present their own special hazards in wedding parties. Little girls usually take the whole thing very seriously and do well, but Mrs. Campbell still groans as she recalls a 22-month-old boy ring bearer who had everyone on edge until the wedding was over and he was happily getting grass-stained at the reception.

Does she ever cry at weddings? Well not exactly. After she's sent the last trembling bridesmaid down with the admonition, "Hold the bouquet tight against your tummy," given the bride's train a final flourish, and hissed, "Smile," she closes the door and goes into action.

She races upstairs to pack the clothes the girls wore to the church, loads up the cars, lines them up in order at the curb, and gets ready to start everyone for the reception on time.

The result is she hardly ever gets to see the wedding at all.

Marriage

Annoying Habits of Husbands

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

FEWER marriages are wrecked on the shoals of some big offense than in the treacherous rapids of a myriad of little annoyances. Dozens of trivial irritations repeated day after day chip away at the contentment of a marriage. Sometimes it's words, said or unsaid, sometimes it's actions.

Mrs. M. does not encounter any great calamaties or tragedies in her daily life, she reports, "but I know a great many other women wish, as I do, that they could get rid of just a few of the very small annoyances. Can't you suggest some of these to husands, Dr. Popenoe? One of mine is my husband's habit of sitting down to dinner, which I have taken much thought and pains to prepare, and remarking, 'Oh—fillet of sole—I had that for lunch today!' Even if he did, he needn't say so."

Agreed, Mrs. M. Let's take note of a few other things that husbands could easily avoid doing "for the good of the order."

He shouldn't kiss his wife without taking off his hat.

He shouldn't speak in uncomplimentary terms of her hat. (The result might merely be that he'd have to pay for a new one.)

HE SHOULDN'T speak of the beauty of any other woman.

He shouldn't insist on staying at a party when he sees that his wife is uncomfortable or bored.

He shouldn't fail in public (even if he sometimes does so at home) to help her on with her coat, stand behind her chair until she is seated, open the door for her, and in other ways let other women see how much he appreciates her.

He shouldn't reminisce to her about any girls at all.

He shouldn't compare her unfavorably with any other woman in any respect.

He shouldn't contradict or correct her in public—unless absolutely necessary.

He shouldn't speak slightingly of any of her relatives. (Let her do that.)

THERE'S no end to this list, Mrs. M.—but I've made a start for you, at any rate.

Answers to Questions.

Q. I wish there were some way to keep teenagers from telephoning our youngsters at meal time.

A. Family council can easily act on this. Children will tell their friends not to phone between 5 and 7. If phone rings, person who answers it takes the number and says, "He'll call you back in an hour."

Q. My wife is beginning to use tantrums as a means of getting her own way, such as buying a new dress.

A. Don't give in. Work out a budget and let this govern your purchases—although you could occasionally make her a gift if she does something particularly nice.

Q. IS consent of both natural parents required before a child can be adopted?

A. Yes, in most states, provided both parents can be reached, and with various exceptions in the case of illegitimacy; but consult a lawyer in your own community, since laws differ.

Q. How many sterile marriages are there in the United States?

A. More than 3,000,000 in which husband and wife earnestly desire to become parents but can't.

Q. If a wife inherits money from her parents, should the husband claim that it is equally his?

A. He has neither a legal nor a moral right to it, in any ordinary case.

Q. What per cent of take-home pay should be used for rent?

A. On an ordinary salary, certainly not more than 25 or 30 per cent.

Q. YOU CALL ON US WOMEN to be efficient housekeepers—isn't it possible for a wife to spend too much of her time on that job?

A. Certainly—but the ones who do so are mostly the inefficient, not the efficient wives.

Q. Who starts the most quarrels in marriage—husband or wife?

A. Now you really are putting me on the spot. I'b be inclined to answer that wives start most of the quarrels, by nagging to which the husband responds more violently than his wife anticipates. What's your opinion?

Movie Newcomers—Jack Lemmon

He Is One of Hollywood's Bright New Comedians

By Edward A. Harris

(SIXTH OF A SERIES)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 3.

WHEN Jack Lemmon was twelve years old he saw a movie called "Moonlight Sonata," in which Paderewski played the Beethoven classic of the same name.

"That changed my whole life," Lemmon says now. "From that moment on I was a lost soul. The melody haunted me day and night and there was nothing I wanted to do but play the piano."

Earlier he had been compelled by his parents to take piano lessons, but hated the routine so much that his parents gave up. But Paderewski fired Jack's imagination. He saw the film a dozen times, and then, still wary of teachers, vowed he would teach himself to be a concert pianist.

This was mildly distracting to Jack's parents, John and Mildred Lemmon, because they had rather hoped he'd become an actor. The tradition was in the family. Jack's great-uncle, Jimmy O'Toole, was once widely-known for his portrayals in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Jack's father was also in the theater, specializing in minstrel shows. They were tradition-loving Bostonians, but had an enlightened attitude toward their son's independence of action.

At Phillips Andover Academy, Jack spent as many as eight hours a day teaching himself to play by ear. His grades went to pot and he was threatened with expulsion, but he became a whiz at the ivory board—but not of concert caliber. He managed to graduate, went on to Harvard. There he finally went in for acting, and became president of the Hasty Pudding Club, the theater group.

In New York after graduation, futilely searching for an acting part on stage or radio, his love of the piano kept him in hamburgers. For some time he pounded the piano in New York bistros and clubs. He avoided the classics except when alone, because he realized with some chagrin that he could not do them justice. And it was this realization—that his distaste for piano teachers had ruined his chance to be a concert player—that turned his energies wholeheartedly toward acting.

Perhaps "wholeheartedly" is not the word. Today, one of Hollywood's bright new comedians and a rather sudden box-office hit, Lemmon still has a big place in his heart for piano-playing and its cousin, song-writing. Between scenes of a picture over at the Columbia Studios lot he invariably goes to a miniature piano in one corner of the set, where he plays his classics softly and dreamily or tinkles the keyboard with lively popular tunes.

For years he's been the world's most determined but unsuccessful song writer. "Getting started as an actor is tough," he says with a sigh, "but getting publishers to listen to songs by an unknown song writer is tougher."

He and the veteran tough-guy actor James Cagney are close pals, and frequently they're on Cagney's yacht plying the waters between the coast and Catalina Island. Occasionally they try fishing, but most of the time, Jack confessed, they're working like mad on songs—none of which sell.

CAGNEY taught Lemmon to play the ukelele, and that takes the place of the piano on Cagney's boat. The boat trips are great, Jack said, except for one thing—Cagney gets seasick.

Right now Jack is too busy making a musical version of "It Happened One Night" to loaf on any boats. He soared to junior stardom in his very first film, "It Should Happen to You," with Judy Holliday, scored another hit in "Phffft," again with Judy Holliday (and Kim Novak), and then in quick succession made "Three for the Show," "Mister Roberts" and "My Sister Eileen."

He's learned to sing and dance in movies, and this fulfills an old yearning, although he says he's not too good at it. "I really like to sing," he explains. "It's a useful part of acting, too—and of course I'm always interested in the songs. Every chance I get I still write songs like crazy."

So far, acting with sophisticated light humor that has pleased movie fans and critics. Jack has rung the bell in all of his pictures. "I'm still waiting for that clinker, that awful dud that must come to all actors once in awhile," he said. He shuddered so exaggeratedly that the waitress near us, in a restaurant across from the studio, almost dropped a tray.

Actually, he confessed a moment later, he isn't going to be too crushed if a dud does come along. No one, he pointed out, can keep lucky all the time. "All I want is to be as good as I possibly can," he remarked, "and then I won't worry, even if a picture flops. I'd like to be known among my co-workers as a good actor, rather than a star. You can hit the top as a star but still fail to rate in the profession. I don't want that to happen to me."

There's little chance it will. Jack's film success is no accident. In addition to his university dramatic experience, which he thinks was invaluable, he performed in 500 soap operas on radio and television before heading for Hollywood. It was while playing in a Tolstoy production at the Ethnological Playhouse in New York that Jack met Cynthia Stone. They starred together in three television plays.

"It was love right away," Jack recalled, "but we didn't get married for two years. 'Every once in a while I'd say to her, 'This isn't right, seeing you every evening—let's break it up for awhile'—and then I'd beat it back to her doorstep at dawn the next morning."

They have a son, Christopher, nearly two. Jack was so fidgety when his wife was expectant that he had a fit any time anyone used the only telephone on the set. A director then installed a special telephone marked in big letters: "For Expectant Fathers Only."

After his marriage Jack found time in between television plays to take part in summer stock at Marblehead, Mass., and to barnstorm through New England. He also played night clubs and vaudeville dates. Finally he was signed to make his Broadway stage debut in a revival of the comedy, "Room Service." A talent scout from Columbia spotted him and arranged for a film test. The result was a Hollywood contract.

"The money wasn't the real lure," Jack said. "It was the chance to have a real home for the first time."

MONEY, IN FACT, has never been one of Jack's prime goals in life, although he doesn't deny that it's starting to come his way in large lumps.

"What's money?" he laughed. "I don't want money. I only want a few yachts and a big new greenhouse and a few thousand ranches with cattle and things like that."

One of Jack's hobbies is growing prize roses. "But I've been so busy the past year that I haven't tended my rose garden for months," he said. "Before that, my roses were the envy of all my Brentwood neighbors. Now they sneer at me. The guy next door, who never could match my roses, is now sending my wife roses from his garden. It's the ultimate shame."

But Jack isn't entirely frustrated by his Moonlight Sonatas and roses. At 30, he's come a long way. Blue eyed, with curly black hair, he has tremendous nervous energy, bubbles with new ideas and chatter. He likes Hollywood and the people he works with, and he has a happy home life. With his quick enthusiasms and friendliness he's well liked on the set, which can be a real asset in any actor's professional life.

"The Hollywood I know, I love," he said. "My wife and I found a wonderful thing out here, as compared to New York. In the East you have to rush around from one cocktail party to another and never really get a chance to sit down and talk to anyone. Here you really get to know people, because the distances are so great that when you're asked over, it's for dinner and the entire evening. You can really visit. It's a lot more rewarding."

He and his wife, for the most part, avoid the movie premieres and gala Hollywood night life. A great many of their friends are not in show business at all—a distinct departure from the rigid practice of most top movie performers who adhere to the narrow circle of the movie colony.

Adding to the Lemmons' pleasure in a quiet home life is the fact that Jack's parents now reside here. Jack, incidentally, refused to change the family name for film purposes, even though he feared fans might say "Columbia sure has a lemon in Lemmon." From his father, Jack feels he learned some fundamental things about acting. He made his acting debut with his dad at the age of five. This was in a melodrama called "Thar's Gold in Them Thar Hills." Jack ran on stage and shouted: "The flood's coming! The dam's bust!"

But Jack hopes that his career ends more happily than his father's. "He was a good minstrel man," he said, "but one night he returned from the theater with his head bandaged and told my mother he was through with the stage. He said he didn't think audiences liked him. I guess that was one of the understatements of all time.

"It seems that somebody in the audience had thrown a bottle at Dad, hitting him on the forehead. That ended his career then and there.

"I think what worried him so much was the fact the bottle hit him. If it had missed, he probably would have gone on, for in those days audiences often threw things. But this one hit, and Dad couldn't get over the shock. He still has a big scar on his forehead. He thinks I'm lucky being in motion pictures—because I can't get hurt by audiences."

Contagious Cold

By Christopher Billopp

A CONTAGIOUS cold is one contracted by a person who refuses to be downed by it. The victim should be in bed but stubbornly insists on being up and about.

If there are business engagements, the victim will keep them. If there are social engagements, the victim will decline to pass them by.

With great fortitude he will go about sneezing, coughing, sniffling and nose-blowing. In between paroxysms he will deliver long dissertations on how very badly he feels.

Such fortitude is, of course, greatly to be admired. The victim will expect compliments and words of sympathy. He will feel it no more than his due to be treated as a hero.

IN THE MATTER of heroism there is something to be said for those who, through no choice of their own, are brought into close contact with the person suffering from the contagious cold.

They cannot keep at a distance. They must remain within range of the sneezing, coughing and sniffling. They cannot well demand that windows be thrown open to let in clean and uncontaminated air.

Very likely they lack the courage and the fortitude of the victim of the contagious cold. Possibly they are especially susceptible to such colds. No doubt when they catch them they have to flee to their beds and stay flat on their backs.

THESE THOUGHTS will run through their minds as they sit exposed to the contagious cold. But what can they do but join in exclamations of praise over the victim's courage and words of sympathy over the victim's suffering.

Thus they must politely behave when, if they had their way, they would call attention to the monstrous indifference of the victim to the well being of others and declare: "See here, if you don't leave, I will."

Preaching to TV Audience

It's a Lot Different From Facing Congregation in Church, Minister on Sunday Morning Protestant Hour Discovers — His Blend of Intensity and Informality Wins Many Listeners

By John Keasler

THE REV. DR. W. SHERMAN SKINNER WENT TO SCHOOL AT COLGATE AND PRINCETON . . . WOULDN'T LOOK OUT OF PLACE IN A PANELED MADISON AVENUE OFFICE.

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

AS VIEWERS SEE DR. SKINNER ON SUNDAY MORNINGS OVER KSD-TV.

THE REV. DR. W. (for WILLIAM) SHERMAN SKINNER felt a little strange preaching at a camera when he first started doing it a few weeks ago. He was used to preaching to a large congregation, a whole bunch of real live folks he could actually see.

And here he found himself delivering sermons to the expressionless, beady eye of a TV camera, which stared back blankly. On the one hand, he sometimes felt there was nobody out there at all—on the other hand, his logic told him there were an awful lot of people watching and listening.

"Obviously I had to strike a middle ground and stick to it," said this minister, grinning. The course he chose was outstandingly successful, as a multitude of Sunday morning television viewers in the St. Louis area will testify.

The sermons delivered by Dr. Skinner — delivered with a blend of easy informality and gripping intensity—are attracting hordes of listeners, including a great many of that regrettable tribe who ordinarily go to church and hear sermons only on alternate Easters.

The minister, a relative newcomer to St. Louis, and an even newer newcomer to the business end of television, took over the Protestant Hour (9 to 9:30 a.m. each Sunday on KSD-TV) the first Sunday in November; already his following is immense, and growing rapidly.

Despite his very little experience with television, he gets across a lot better than a great many pros. So we had a talk with him and asked how he did it.

Dr. Skinner rubbed his chin and smiled the little half smile he smiles all the time, on and off the air, and explained. He said he talked to people one at a time.

"I try to forget there are thousands and thousands of viewers out there—I hope there are thousands, anyhow—and I talk to one person," he said. "He, or she, is there in a living room; maybe with the family, maybe drinking a cup of coffee. He has his own problems. My message is for that one, individual person."

This works out fine. Dr. Skinner has the knack. Just about any listener, somewhere in his sermon, feels that sure enough—this preacher is talking directly to him. Maybe it's because people's problems aren't very dissimilar, when you get right down to it.

DR. SKINNER came to St. Louis last May as pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, 4501 Westminster place, after the former pastor, the Rev. Dr. James W. Clarke, departed to fill a post at Princeton Theological Seminary. Dr. Clarke had become a veritable institution here—both as pastor and as preacher in the Protestant Hour, which is presented under the auspices of the Metropolitan Church Federation.

The Pulpit Committee of the church had searched far and wide—nationwide, in fact—for a minister to fill the shoes of their beloved Dr. Clarke. And everybody concerned congratulated the committee on its choice of Dr. Skinner.

What is the background of this minister so many St. Louisans — non-churchgoers included—are seeing and hearing these Sundays?

Well, he's a native New Yorker, from Gouverneur, which one may find by traveling about 100 miles north from Syracuse and keeping a wary eye on the road map.

He is the son of a minister, decided to be a minister himself when he was about 15 years old and kept that ambition as a teen-ager—felt it weaken and almost fade as a lad at college.

"The ambition came back, however, came back stronger than ever," said Dr. Skinner. "Among the things which sustained me was a bothersome fact—I couldn't think of anybody in the world who has a better life than a preacher."

We asked him why he thought preachers had the best life. He said because they had the best chance to serve their fellow man.

Dr. Skinner not only was the son of a minister, his sister is married to a minister and one brother is a minister, all involved being Presbyterians. His other brother is a public relations man and writer, and we attempted to comfort Dr. Skinner with the thought that many families have a black sheep and he laughed.

"Once I decided to be a writer myself," he said. In point of fact, he is a writer; there aren't a great many literary types around who could construct an interesting, gripping sermon week after week.

As far as that goes, Dr. Skinner, sans clerical garb and wearing civies, wouldn't look a bit out of place in a paneled Madison avenue office. He's a good dresser, latest styles, modified Ivy League; briefcase and narrow lapels.

His manner off the air is practically the same as on the air—he is a man completely without stuffiness, quiet spoken, friendly and he has a keen sense of humor.

His sermons have an effective simplicity; he sets out to make a point and makes it, and neither talking down to his audience nor smothering it with oratorical bombast.

Some recent sermons, for instance, have dealt with things like Keeping a Hold on Yourself, and Emergency Faith. This latter pointed out that faith was something people should have all the time, not something to switch on when the roof falls in on you.

"When I first started on the Protestant Hour I wondered if maybe I should stand up in a pulpit to talk," he said. "I decided against that, almost immediately. When you're talking with somebody in their living room on a Sunday morning, you would hardly shout at him from a pulpit."

So, he sits at a desk; relaxed, informal, a guest in the living room, a guest with something to say.

DR. SKINNER, 49 years old, went to school at Colgate and Princeton, then after graduation went to Princeton Theological Seminary.

He studied there for three years, took a year's graduate study — finished in 1931 and then went to Europe (Universities of Berlin and Marburg) on a fellowship for New Testament study.

His first pastorate was at Bethlehem, Pa., and he was there nearly four years. He was then called to a pastorate in East Liberty, Pa., where he stayed 10 years, then took a pastorate at Pittsburgh, where he remained eight years until last May, when he came to the church here.

He and his wife, Frances, a soprano soloist Dr. Skinner met while she was singing in a choir, live at 7201 Creveling drive, University City.

One son, William, 23, is now studying at Princeton Theological Seminary; another son, Sherman, 20, is studying Army life as a soldier at Fort Leonard Wood, and Sarah Townsend Skinner, age 5, is studying Mother Goose.

Dr. and Mrs. Skinner sometime read aloud to each other for relaxation. One of their favorite types of aloud-reading matter is who-dun-its, or, as we grammarians say, whom-did-its.

HE is an omnivorous reader, but for real relaxation he likes mountain climbing.

"No, better not say mountain climbing," he said. "People will think of me scaling Alps and such things—my kind of mountain climbing is just wandering around the hills."

The "hills" are the Adirondacks, where the Skinners have a summer place.

He enjoys roaming the hills, chopping wood, canoeing. He's not much of a fisherman, having a verbal contract with the fish to the extent that if they leave him alone he will leave them alone.

"I've got a one-room shack out in the woods, away from the main house," he said. "I lock myself in there, away from everybody, and then I can really get my work done."

Sometimes he puts 20 or more hours of work into preparation of a single sermon—this helps to account for the lack of hesitancy in his Sunday morning talks; the subject has been thought out to the last degree; to the point where notes aren't even much needed.

The Protestant Hour is a "simulcast," meaning it goes out over both radio and television simultaneously. Dr. Skinner approached the television medium with some slight trepidation, with the natural worry that he might freeze up or, equally bad, simply not go over.

These worries proved groundless—he made the change from live congregation to beady-eyed camera without a single visible clash of gears, and the informal approach has carried him through with colors flying.

Laughing, he said he still occasionally was struck by the eerie feeling that nobody was listening to him—but plenty of people are listening to him. Comment about his program is growing weekly. (After Dr. Clarke left, other ministers helped out on a temporary basis and kept the Protestant Hour on the air until Dr. Clarke's successor was found.)

"PREACHING on television is an entirely different thing from preaching at a church," he explained. "In church, the congregation has come to listen to you, come with that purpose in mind. In television, you are, in effect, going into the listener's home —and you must act accordingly; interest him and perhaps tell him something of value."

We know a writer, a prolific manufacturer of fiction, who some years ago could hardly sell anything he wrote. Then he made up a reader, thought him out in the most minute detail; what his job was, how he looked, everything, down to the color of his hair. (Bald.) Then, instead of writing to a vast foggy world of editors and readers, this writer wrote directly to this composite reader, whose name was Arthur. He wrote the kind of story this particular individual might like to read while relaxing after a hard day on the job.

This writer started selling his stories, and still is. As we get it, Dr. Skinner's approach is like that, although he has something considerably more important to sell. The reason a viewer feels this preacher is interested in him, as an individual, is because the preacher is interested.

Dr. Skinner's underlying theme, in all his varied sermons, is that an individual shouldn't try to depend entirely on himself, shouldn't have the misguided pride to think his own powers can carry him through.

"The going always gets very rocky that way," Dr. Skinner said. "A man's best resource is realization there is a greater power. That's what I'm saying."

He is gratified that the medium of television and radio gives him a chance to say it to a far greater audience than would be possible any other way.

"I'm talking to the individual," he said, and smiled. "I may never meet him in church —but I'm talking to him."

Visiting Scene of Battle

By Stan Delaplane

LONDON.

IN my salad days, a good deal of education was sawed off on me. And among other items I recall King Harold and the Duke of Normandy making a big fuss hereabouts in Southern England in 1066.

So the other day I got in the little right-hand drive Austin and drove down the left side of the road to Hastings. To see whatever happened to Harold.

It was a gray cold morning in Sussex and I took the little narrow back roads where the hedgerows rise on either side and the rolling hills were brown with frost-killed bracken.

It was damp and overcast. Blue smoke rose from the chimney pots above the brick farmhouses. The big farm horses stood snorting steam under the bare trees. Once in a while overhead you could hear the whistle of a jet barreling through the cloud.

In October of 1066, King Harold marched down this way. He did not march back, having been stuck with a sharp arrow. The Normans then took over.

On the signposts, a good many arrows pointed to "Battle." This sounded so likely I drove over. Sure enough, this was where the whole rumble took place. Not at Hastings at all.

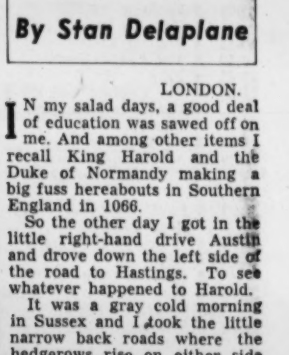
THERE ARE about three blocks of main street. Of "green grocers" and "chemists" and "tobacconists" in Battle. And I dropped into a sagging tea room where the beam ceilings almost brushed your head and a fine cheerful little fire was burning on the hearth.

The waitress said yuss indeed, sir, this was where King Harold got the arrow. Up on the rise where the great Abbey towers like a fortress.

"They 'ad a 'orrible fight," she said, "and they do say it was a gory sight. Did you read about the lady lost on the Common, sir?"

I did read about the lady. She had been staying at a hotel in Tunbridge Wells. She had not come home to dinner and now the police were out poking through the fern-like brown bracken.



"She's a goner," said the waitress gloomily. "'oo knows what 'orrible fate 'as 'appened to 'er. Walking about lonely like in the near dark."

"Do they know who shot the arrow into Harold?"

"Likely it was murder," said the waitress, "and they'll be hacking about in the bracken and come upon the poor corpse."

It was obvious she was only interested in current history.

After I got warmed up, I walked up by the Abbey which has fallen into some disrepair. The Abbey was built by William the Conqueror to mark the victory.

The buildings and estate were sold after the Reformation and the last Abbot put a curse on the new owners. So many future owners died by fire and water (the condition of the curse) that in quite recent times the place was exorcised by the Dean of Battle.

BATTLE ABBEY in the unruined part is now a school for girls.

There was a gatekeeper in a great coat and muffler with a red nose peeping out. And I asked him whatever happened to Harold.

"Now, sir, they're all asking that. The folk who come to see Battle Abbey. Struck in the eye, 'e was. Struck by a Norman arrow. And where 'e fell the monks built the great altar. 'ave they found the woman lost on the Common at Tunbridge Wells?

I said when I left, the police were still combing the bracken.

"Murder if you ask me," he said. "Ah, there's murderers about would look you in the eye, innocent as a lamb. And in the evening be out with their murdering ways."

"Did they ever find out who shot Harold?"

"It would be a Norman bowman. But which one I'd not know that. It was all undisciplined troops, do you see. When the Norman troops broke, some of 'arold's men pursued them, sir. Likely for the loot. And the others stood about congratulating themselves while the Normans turned and murdered them as pursued. We'd never 'ave stood for such things when I was in the Guards."

When I left he called after me that likely they'd never find the woman on the Common. "Some of them murderers cut them in bits like a chicken," he said cheerfully.

The Girl of the Color Spectaculars

British Comedienne Jeannie Carson 'Discovered' by Liebman

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.

JEANNIE CARSON, petite flaming-haired British comedienne, has had spectacular success in a succession of "spectaculars."

She was introduced to the American television audience last fall by Max Liebman in his NBC-TV color spectacular, "Best Foot Forward." Critics were almost unanimous in hailing her as a "television discovery." One called her "a new star destined to streak across the TV heavens" and another described her as a "real charmer, a lady to be seen, not defined." TV columnist Jack O'Brian added to the kudos by saying she was "the most endearing light comedy leading lady to hit the public's fancy since Mary Martin."

With such an acceptance, Liebman starred her in another spectacular, "Spotlight," last fall. Then Miss Carson returned to England to fill commitments, but was back for Liebman's "Heidi" two months ago. For her fourth American TV appearance, she is co-starred with Maurice Chevalier in another color production to be seen on KSD-TV from 6:30 to 8 this evening.

JEANNIE CARSON was born in Pudsey, Yorkshire, England, to theatrical parents, with whom she toured as a child. Her debut was made at the age of 4 months when her father carried her onstage during one of his comedy performances. There was never a doubt in the diminutive redhead's mind that she too would enter the theater, and she impatiently marked time until she was 14, at which time she could obtain working papers. By the time she was 12, however, England was in the throes of World War II and her impatience at school knew no bounds.

JEANNIE CARSON . . . CALLED "MOST ENDEARING SINCE MARY MARTIN"

"I thought it was so silly waiting for my fourteenth birthday," she tells in her clipped British accent, "so I said to myself 'Let's get cracking!' I answered an advertisement in the paper for a 'nanny' and the pay was so low the woman had few answers to her ad. I thought I would merely have to see the children to school and watch over them upon their return until bedtime. After I accepted the job I was told that I was to scrub the floor, cook the meals and do all the dishes. I tried, but after two days, I had to quit in utter exhaustion."

Her next venture, made imperative by her father's illness and the need for family income, was a job as a "washer-up" in a hotel in Brighton, Sussex, where the family had been evacuated. This meant that Jeannie washed cups and saucers, though she did not have to deal with pots and pans. She recalls: "The woman in charge of us was terribly mean, and one night she hit one of the girls. I was so furious that I called her an old bat. My reward for being so cheeky was a blow which sent me sliding all the way across the pantry. I decided to leave and sneaked out of the hotel. The blackout was on and I was terrified that I would be shot as a spy or something. But I made it home, thank heaven, and that was the end of that job. Fortunately, I was nearly 14 and the time was close at hand when I could begin my real life's work.

When the long-awaited birthday arrived, Jeannie joined E.N.S.A. (the British version of U.S.O.) and toured the British Isles singing and dancing as a member of a troupe. She made her London debut in 1947, when she played in Noel Coward's "Ace of Clubs" at the Cambridge Theater. Her first starring role at the London Casino was in "Latin Quarter," from which she moved to even larger parts in the pantomime "Aladdin."

IN September of 1952, Jeannie opened in the musical comedy "Love From Judy" which enjoyed a two-and-a-half year run both in London and in Scotland. It was during this show that she was seen by Liebman who signed her to come to the United States to appear in his NBC-TV color Spectaculars in the fall of 1954. The morning following her debut in Liebman's "Best Foot Forward," critics in all parts of the United States had praise for "wee, bonnie Jeannie." Her subsequent appearance in "Spotlight" brought equally enthusiastic comments.

Returning to Great Britain to complete the road tour of "Love From Judy" and a motion picture, Jeannie was besieged with offers to return to the United States. Of these, she chose to re-sign with Liebman and NBC for more Spectaculars, the first one of which was "Heidi," two months ago, and now the Chevalier show.

As Crosby Sees It

Playwrights' Shows Consistently Good

By John Crosby

"PLAYWRIGHTS 56" is one of the more ambitious new drama programs of the year and one worthy of your attention. It's produced by Fred Coe, the battle-scarred veteran of many dramatic series, every other week (KSD-TV 8:30 p.m. Tuesdays) and he has been aiming high. He doesn't always hit it but the score so far has been very satisfactory.

I've seen quite a few of the productions, and all of them have been interesting. One was a play called "Daisy, Daisy" by Sumner Locke Elliott, directed by Arthur Penn, one of the best men around, and starring Tom Ewell in the sort of role he's begun to specialize in.

His character in this play is rather aptly summed up by his mother-in-law as "a middle-aged Peter Pan who has been grounded." In short, he's a novelist whose first novel has been greeted with great success but whose second, a five-pound, five-year job on the Civil War, is met only with rejection slips. Enraged by the success of some 19-year-old girl's novel, he sits down—as a joke—dashes off a novel that begins "My name is Daisy Smith. I'm in love," and continues pretty much in that vein for 150 pages and is a runaway best seller.

THIS SORT OF THING provides a field day for an actor like Ewell. Ewell at a bus stop watching the first two girls to queue up with copies of his book, then his look of exasperation when the third shows up with "Marjorie Morningstar." Ewell at a cocktail party fabricating anecdotes about his nonexistent Daisy Smith to the increasing annoyance of his wife (Jane Wyatt). Ewell painfully reading off a teleprompter on one of those TV interviews with a chatty dame (Eloise McElhone) who is determined not to let him open his mouth.

In the end Daisy Smith turns out to be not non-existent at all, to be a living girl in his past, now safely married with seven children. It was good contemporary pungent comedy with a strong central idea and some pretty fair satire on the book world. My only objection was that, while amusing, it wasn't funny in the sense that a George Kaufman would have made it.

That's my objection to a lot of TV comedy. Everything is there but the high polish, the final explosive phrase that sets you howling rather than just smiling, the perfectly timed and executed scene.

STILL, EVEN AFTER these carping complaints, "Daisy, Daisy" is upper class fare. Ewell and Jane Wyatt make an excellent comedy team.

Another of the "Playwrights 56" productions of more than ordinary interest was "The Battler" based on a story by Ernest Hemingway. This one started out like a house afire. A young man, running away from home, is robbed in a spirit of beaming good nature by a truck driver and later, also in a spirit of good clean fun, tossed off a moving train by a sadistic brakeman—both superbly written scenes and superb Hemingway.

Later the lad encounters a punchdrunk ex-fighter who is tenderly nursed and cared for by a giant Negro. This, too, was splendid tough vivid writing. It was only later when a series of flashbacks got us imbedded in the story of how the fighter got that way that the play seemed to go off the rails. Still, it was a mighty interesting hour.

In fact, I've yet to see anything on "Playwrights 56" that wasn't.

THANKS TO KSD-TV for "The Story of India," a deep, revealing look at a country trying out its democratic wings. What a pity Chester Bowles did not stay on. Now that the St. Louis County Bond Issue Election is history, I want to thank KSD and KSD-TV for the tremendous assistance given us. I doubt if any radio or television station in the United States has fought as hard and consistently for improvements in the community which it serves. The entire metropolitan area is the better because of your interest and activity in civic affairs. EDWIN M. CLARK.

Music And Music Makers

Sibelius at 90

By Thomas B. Sherman

JAN SIBELIUS will be 90 years old next Thursday, an event that will be celebrated by many orchestras throughout the world, if not by Sibelius himself. The Finnish composer will undoubtedly spend the day as usual—reading, writing a little music perhaps, greeting a few visitors and smoking Havana cigars. Such has been his routine for many years and it seems unlikely that he will depart from it. His home at Jarvenpaa, about 60 miles north of Helsinki, is a virtual hermitage even though a number of wandering musicians and musical writers—usually armed with cameras—have managed to gain admission to his presence from time to time.

Most of them, no doubt, have asked him about his Eighth Symphony. It is generally believed that both an eighth and a ninth symphony have been completed but the composer has never indicated whether he intends to publish them. His reticence in the matter may indicate that he does not consider them worth inclusion in the general body of his published works. But unless he destroys them or orders them destroyed after his death it is probable that they will be heard sooner or later.

CONCEIVABLY a new Sibelius symphony might mark a radical change in vocabulary and syntax if not in viewpoint. The Seventh Symphony was completed in 1924 and in the 31 years that have intervened he has published nothing, and the degree of his creative activity can only be guessed. If any considerable part of his time was occupied in composition, one may infer—among other possibilities—that he was engaged in experimentation. Then again he may have run into psychological difficulties. In any case, the delay and the speculations about it, will insure a close scrutiny of these works when they are finally published.

Meanwhile an evaluation of his work based on what is already known leads one to the conclusion that only a small part of it will continue to hold a place in the concert repertory played throughout the Western world. In the Scandinavian countries, to be sure, much of what is generally disregarded may still be treasured as the works of Elgar are treasured in England.

OF THE RESIDUE that seems likely to endure, the Fourth Symphony is the one that appeals most strongly to musicians and to such members of the general public as have come to know it well. This is not to prophesy that it will ever be a popular work. Its austerity and its density of meaning will always prevent it from having an easy success. But the "Goldberg Variations" are not popular either. Yet they survive because performing musicians of each succeeding generation are inevitably moved by the enduring values communicated by their tremendous variety, prodigality of invention and strong formulation. The Fourth Symphony, I believe, will have the same powers of self-renewal for musicians who examine it.

Sibelius has never been regarded as a modern composer. Yet the Fourth Symphony, at the time it was composed in 1911, was certainly a daring and original work in both the starkness of its emotional content and in many of its outward characteristics, such as a free, calculated use of dissonance and long stretches of atonal writing.

ITS STRENGTH, however, then as now lies in the essence of its thought. Language and thought, of course, are interacting, but the latter is the primary force.

A good way to test the evocative power of the Fourth Symphony is to go back to it after several years of absence. Many listeners are not permitted the experience of hearing this work even at widely dispersed intervals, for it is rarely played. Fortunately, several excellent recordings are now available of performances conducted by Rodzinsky, Karajan, Ormandy and one or two others. Owners of these can discover for themselves whether its values diminish or expand with repeated hearings.

My own experiences suggest that each movement seems more cohesive, more logically joined together and at the same time more suggestive. I also became less aware of its stern exterior and more engaged with its inner spirit. What seemed to be an ice-bound, uninhabited landscape at the world's beginning was no less so even after many hearings, but after a while the presence of the human observer and the emotions stirred in him by this cosmic vision came into being and seized the imagination.

Martha Deatherage

Martha Deatherage, soprano, will give a recital at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Wednesday Club Auditorium, Taylor and Westminster avenues, under the auspices of the Artist Presentation Society. She is soloist at St. John's Methodist Church and instructor in voice at Monticello College in Alton.

FREDRIC MARCH SHIELDS HIS CHILDREN (MARY MURPHY, RICHARD EYER) FROM A MENACING ESCAPED CONVICT (HUMPHREY BOGART) WHO HAS INVADED HIS HOME. IT IS IN "THE DESPERATE HOURS," DIRECTOR WILLIAM WYLER'S SUSPENSE THRILLER FROM THE NOVEL BY JOSEPH HAYES, WHICH IS SLATED NEXT AT THE ST. LOUIS.

ROBERT MITCHUM, AS A WESTERN LAW-ENFORCER, AND JAN STERLING, AS HIS EMBITTERED WIFE, IN "MAN WITH THE GUN." (HE'S AWAY FROM HOME TOO MUCH ON SHOOTING TRIPS.) IT IS SCHEDULED NEXT AT LOEW'S STATE.

Pianist Serkin to Play Beethoven's 5th Concerto

RUDOLF SERKIN, noted pianist, will be soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at concerts at 2 p.m. Friday and 8:40 p.m. Saturday in Kiel Auditorium Opera House. Vladimir Golschmann will conduct.

Serkin and the orchestra will play Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto. The orchestra will play Sibelius's Symphony No. 2 in D Major and "The Swan of Tuonela" in honor of Sibelius's ninetieth birthday, which the great Finnish composer will celebrate next Thursday, and Schumann's Overture to "Manfred."

The soloist has lived in the United States since 1939, three years after he made his American debut with the NBC Symphony. He was born in Czechoslovakia of Russian parents. He made his debut with the Vienna Symphony Orchestra at the age of 12.

Beethoven's Fifth or "Emperor" Concerto was composed in 1809 and first performed in Leipzig the following year with Friedrich Schneider as soloist. Sibelius composed his second symphony, one of his most popular works, in 1902. It is a tonal picture based on the struggle of the Finns to free themselves. "The Swan of Tuonela" tells of the adventures of the legendary hero, Lemminkainen.

A pre-symphony lecture will be given in the Opera House at 1:15 p.m. Friday by Edward Murphy, first horn player.

'Lady's Not for Burning' At St. Louis University

Christopher Fry's poetic comedy, "The Lady's Not For Burning," will be presented by the St. Louis University Theater, 3642 Lindell boulevard, at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday and next Sunday.

Patricia Bradley will play Jennet Jourdemayne, the girl about to be burned as a witch, and George Gitto will be Thomas Mendip, the soldier so bored with life he tries to get himself hanged. Alan B. Hanson of the faculty is directing.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

LUCY GALLANT—Slick, plush picturization of the rise of an independent girl to the ownership of a great fashion store in a Texas oil boom town. Lightweight as to drama, but a natural as a "women's picture." With Jane Wyman as the couturiere and Charlton Heston as the rancher who carries a torch for her a dozen years. ST. LOUIS.

COUNT THREE AND PRAY—Mildly humorous and saltily flavored account of the tribulations of a Civil War veteran who has reformed his roistering ways and sets out to be a preacher in a small Southern town. Van Heflin gives an excellent account of himself, though the piece has more action than ideas. FOX.

THE TENDER TRAP—Bright CinemaScope production of the stage comedy about a Manhattan bachelor swamped by beautiful girls. Good for a lot of laughs. With Frank Sinatra, Debbie Reynolds, David Wayne, Celeste Holm. LOEW'S STATE.

THE AFRICAN LION—Another superb Walt Disney "true life adventure," this time of the savage animal life of the Central African plateau. It took 30 months of patience and daring by Alfred and Elma Milotte, camera team, to get its fascinating sequences. ORPHEUM.

THE TALES OF HOFFMANN—Return of the brilliantly beautiful and bizarre 1951 British production of the Offenbach opera. With Robert Rounseville, Moira Shearer. SHADY OAK.

FRISKY—This Italian sequel to the comedy, "Bread, Love and Dreams," with the same cast, headed by Gina Lollobrigida and Vittorio De Sica, has the same charm and humorous warmth, but is too much like its predecessor. RICHMOND.

DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE—Return of the hilarious English comedy about a medical school. With Dirk Bogarde, Kenneth More. Also Alec Guinness's recent TO PARIS WITH LOVE, which is not up to his comedy standards. PAGEANT.

CINERAMA HOLIDAY—Tourist's view of Paris, Switzerland and American points in the sensational depth process. AMBASSADOR.

Play About Drug Addict a Fitful, Flaring Shocker

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.

IT isn't often that you see a play fighting to find its own shape on the stage. Normally, by the time an author has been introduced to the assortment of producers, directors and players who want to help him organize his work, and by the time he has been through the out-of-town ordeal of pointing up and paring down what he has written, the piece he brings to Broadway is—whatever its merits—trim, tidy, and tight as a drum. The drum may, on some occasions, give off a faintly hollow boom, but it's usually been treated to a slick paint-job.

Not so with "A Hatful of Rain," the turbulent and exciting new melodrama at the Lyceum. Michael V. Gazzo is a fledgling playwright, and it's possible that he has been exposed to all the pressure toward neatness, direct statement, and precise styling that hound every practicing dramatist. The fitful and flaring shocker he has brought to town doesn't show it, though. It is exactly as loose and cluttered and edgy as the tenement setting Mordecai Gorelik has thrown together behind it: a rangy nightmare of shabby doorways, shivering fire-escapes, and unmade studio couches.

As Mr. Gazzo scratches out his harrowing study in dope addiction, you are apt to get the feeling that the actors themselves are putting the fiery pieces together, still engaged in the process of picking up great chunks of red-hot improvisation and savagely battering them into the form of a play.

And, by some miracle or other, the battle is won before your eyes. Out of a series of erratically - joined scenes in which an ex-G.I. achingly avoids his wife, takes a beating from a dope-ring, begs his brother for money, fences with his thick-headed father, goes onto the streets with a gun, and at last shatters the domestic air with a sickening confession, a clear, stinging, and extremely moving image emerges. It is an image of confusion and awkwardness and shame: but every twisted grimace that is drawn out of the people who share Johnny Pope's life becomes intensely real and intensely touching.

MUCH OF THE CREDIT for the evening's vividness must go to the players director Frank Corsaro has assembled. The author may not have made it altogether explicit whether Johnny Pope's surrender to morphine—and to the gangland rat-race that goes with it—is due to the pain Johnny still suffers from a heroic wartime experience or to some character weakness in Johnny himself. Ben Gazzara brushes the uncertainty aside by hurling us into the present, by confronting us with a fact. As he squints at his badgering father through puffy eyes, brokenly tries to explain to his wife that he has not lost his love for her, and fumbles helplessly with the silverware as he does the dinner dishes, an unspoken urgency claims our attention and even our respect.

Shelley Winters is the next thing to a revelation in the role of Johnny's wife. Miss Winters has given some good performances, and some sloppy ones, on the screen. Here she is all plain, straightforward, heart-breaking integrity. Moving about a lower East Side apartment—sleepy-eyed, bedraggled, but "apologizing for nothing"—she blurts out tart and commonsense little comments on the rattled life around her, treats a forbidden love affair with a shaky honor, and rises trembling to this family final crisis with a stunning dignity.

Art and Artists

Thomas Hess and the New Critics

By Howard Derrickson

THOMAS B. HESS, executive editor of Art News, contributes to the magazine's new Christmas Annual a major article that provides insight into attitudes underlying the controversial New York School's latest paintings.

His "U.S. Painting: Some Recent Directions" brings up to date the work he has been doing in the last few years to interpret what he regards as "a vital, if still generally misunderstood, part of American culture."

In 85 pictures and 27 pages, he introduces the reader to 21 young artists and their works. "I feel convinced," he declares, "that among them are artists who will be accepted as internationally important and will rival any productions of this century."

Oddly, just who they are does not seem important to Hess, since an addendum lists 28 more who "might have been substituted." The basic thesis is continuing vitality of the New York School, sometimes called the American Action Painters, whose work Hess has extolled in books, articles and asides in reviews of others' pictures, as in his November Art News discussion of the new Carnegie International.

To relatively unpracticed Midwestern eyes, this newest work from New York, reproduced in black-and-white and four color plates, does not seem significantly different from that of the same school's older members. What does seem significant — saddening, too — are defeatist, uncommunicative attitudes which, Hess makes plain, have influenced production of these canvases.

HERE FAIRNESS dictates a report that Hess's own emphasis, like that of the New Critics whose principles are implicit in his thinking, is on the nature of the work itself, not on tangential biographical fact or observation. Stress on paintings is given by generous reproduction and apt captions describing their evolution and effects.

For the artist's sake, not the viewer's, these paintings are lavish in use of pigment. Whereas artists of the past have agonized over their work or treated it stolidly as a task to finish, Hess's 21 youngsters feel distinct joy in the act of painting. Their report is confirmed by their muscular brushstrokes. "It's the only thing I like to do," one said.

This mood may account for some out-size canvases, with eight feet a not unusual dimension. Such scale "increases intimacy between painter and work," Hess says. "Little thought is given, as there was by older painters, to intimacy between picture and spectator. . . .

"THE FACT the finished painting is difficult to sell has little bearing when it is understood in advance that very little will be sold anyhow. . . . References are understood by friends. In such an intimate atmosphere it is rude to appear explicit. . . . Today almost all painters are content to communicate with their own small but expanding universe."

Hess is careful to ascertain his youngsters' preferences among artists of the past, but he first finds flaws in Andre Malraux's "Voices of Silence" concept of a dialogue of art echoing down the centuries.

Hess finds it worthwhile, too, to bring sociological and historical data to bear on his problem, though he prefaces his discussion with amusing jibes at the sociologist's "horizontal" slant on art and at the conventional art historian's view, "distorted by hindsight."

Common plight of today's obscure poets and painters, plus the fact poets have their interpreters among the New Critics on campuses, brings Hess to lament: "There has been no 'New Criticism' of art in university circles to make painters feel at home there."

HESS'S IMMERSION in the New York art world enables him to convey movingly the attitudes of its inhabitants, but here his sympathy leads to an overstatement of their grievance.

If "New Criticism" is not exactly the term for appreciations of the work of Fred Becker and Paul Burlin that have appeared in Perspective, published at Washington University, it does seem to apply to Allen Weller's extended essays in catalogues of the University of Illinois Contemporary Painting and Sculpture Annuals.

Making a valid point of the New Criticism, Weller suggests in the 1955 book, for instance, that artists of other cultures "may provide avenues of approach to their work about which they themselves are ignorant."

Explicitly he adds: "There is an extraordinary richness about the true work of art which allows it to exist quite independently of an understanding which may or may not be sociologically or historically correct."

Like many a fine artist, Hess may be unaware of antecedents and relatives of his own art. This in no way invalidates his writing, which blends methods of social historian, New Critic and biographer in such a way as to make maximum contribution in an important and difficult field largely avoided by other professionals.

Keenan Wynn Role

HOLLYWOOD — Keenan Wynn will be seen in the part of a gunslinger who becomes a preacher in Kent Productions' "Johnny Concho!" Others in the cast are Frank Sinatra, William Conrad and Gloria Vanderbilt.

Love Is Where You Find It

Lisa Quickly Discovers Her Stepmother Doesn't Want Her Around

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER 14

ANY illusions Lisa might have cherished about a welcome from her stepmother died during the first five minutes. Diane did not want her there and she made no effort to conceal it.

Not one word of greeting came from the older woman. When Lisa obeyed the royal command to dress before washing the breakfast dishes, the story book princess who had turned into a witch sank into a chair by the telephone and made an appointment at the local beauty shop.

Lisa did not hear the conversation but when she came downstairs in a smart cotton dress Diane said, "Just as I thought, the gossip has started. It will be all over town by noon."

The dishwater was cold so Lisa had to start all over again, and this time she rinsed them under the faucet before putting them into the pan.

Diane watched to see how much soap was used, and Lisa feeling as if she were walking on eggs, asked, "What gossip?"

"About you, of course. Naturally they're going to wonder why you should come to visit your father at a time like this after not seeing him for nine years. Bessie May, who owns the beauty shop, asked me if it was true that we didn't know a thing about it until you wired you were on your way."

LISA DID NOT HEAR THE CONVERSATION, BUT WHEN SHE CAME DOWNSTAIRS DIANE SAID, "JUST AS I THOUGHT, THE GOSSIP HAS STARTED."

Lisa reached for one of the clean, striped linen towels. "I realize now it was frightfully inconsiderate of me but I don't see how it concerns anyone but the three of us."

"Everything that happens in this town concerns everybody else. There's no such thing as a secret. Some old biddy will ferret it out. Nothing is said to the person concerned, of course, but it spreads like wildfire to everyone else. I used to think it was because I am an outsider but I discovered it happens to all of them, even the inner circle—the 400 of Walnut City. How I hate this dump!"

If what Diane said was true, Lisa didn't think she was going to like it either. She remembered that her father had said almost the same thing the night before. Even though he belonged, his second wife had never been accepted.

"I'm surprised you've put up with it as long as you have," the girl said sympathetically.

"I kept thinking they'd change after they knew me. I learned to keep house their way. I entertained every one I was indebted to . . . They invited me to college affairs and to the big parties where husbands were included but was I asked to join the Music club? Or the Book club? Or to play contract in a foursome? Oh, no, after all these years I'm still an outsider."

Lisa wrung out the dish cloth and hung it over a faucet. "They'll probably treat me the same way. But I'm going to be too busy to care."

"Doing what?"

"Anything I can before the baby comes. After that I hope daddy can make a place for me on the paper."

"Paper," Diane repeated scornfully. "I was impressed, too, hearing your father talk about owning a newspaper, but wait until you see that weekly rag. And the filthy place they print it."

"I have seen it—copies of the Banner, I mean. It isn't like a daily, of course. The technique is entirely different. But so far as the dirt is concerned, I never heard of a newspaper office that didn't look that way."

Turning from the sink she faced her stepmother so that for the first time they took a good look at each other. Lisa saw a tall blonde with chalk white skin and pale blue eyes. No wonder Diane called them ice blue. Everything about her was cold. Also fantastically clean like her house.

STEPHEN had said the baby was due in a couple of months, but Diane carried the extra weight well and everything about her was immaculate. Yet, in spite of this, Lisa was repelled. She wished she had not stated her intentions so clearly.

Due to her own desire to cooperate they might live together peaceably for awhile, but never would they have anything in common. Except, Lisa reminded herself, Stephen.

Leading the way into the living room, which was so orderly it seemed no one lived there, Diane said, "That' darling dress you're wear Is that from your mother's ...op?"

Lisa nodded.

"I'd like to have one just like it," Diane said eagerly. "I'm so sick of these old wrap around things I'm wearing. Of course, it will be winter by the time my figure is back to normal, but I can always wear a cotton like that around the house. Could you order one in my size?"

Lisa said she could, wondering how her mother would feel about it, but unable to recall that Marna had ever expressed an opinion about the remarriage of Lisa's father. Whatever else her mother might be she wasn't petty, Lisa decided. And for the first time since her flight she felt homesick. . . .

That afternoon, while Diane was taking her nap, Lisa wrote to Marna, explaining that she had left without warning in order to avoid an argument about Pierre, who no longer mattered to her, adding "P.S. If you still want to marry him it will be all right with me."

Cornmeal Ham Turnovers

Ingredients: One-half cup enriched cornmeal, one cup sifted flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter cup shortening, two-thirds cup milk, Ham Filling.

Method: Sift together the cornmeal, flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening thoroughly. Add milk all at once, stirring only until dry ingredients are dampened. (Add a little more milk if necessary to make a soft dough). Turn out on lightly floured board or pastry cloth; knead gently several times. Roll out one-quarter inch thick; cut 10 four-inch circles. Put one to two tablespoons ham filling on half of each circle. Fold other half of dough over filling and press edges together. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet in very hot (450 degrees) oven 12 to 15 minutes or until browned.

Ham Filling: Mix together well one cup diced cooked ham, two tablespoons chili sauce, two tablespoons mayonnaise, one teaspoon prepared mustard, one-half teaspoon horseradish, one-quarter teaspoon salt.

Spanish Sauce

Ingredients: One-fourth cup butter or margarine, one large onion (cut in thin strips), two ribs celery (cut in thin crescents), two tablespoons diced green pepper, one can (10½ ounces) condensed tomato soup (undiluted), three-fourths cup (about drained cooked or canned green peas, one-fourth to one-half teaspoon sugar.

Husband Discouraged

Married 18 Years, Wife 'Letting Down'

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

MY wife and I have been married 18 years. When we married, she was neat and attractive and always well groomed. But in the past few years she has seemed to let herself go. She doesn't want to go to a beauty parlor and her clothes are never as neat as they used to be. I wouldn't hurt her feelings for anything, Martha, but sometimes I almost feel ashamed of her appearance. Isn't there something I can do about it?
HUSBAND.

Maybe you've talked a little too much about cutting down on expenses and she feels that this is one sacrifice she can make for the sake of the family budget. Or maybe she has been working so hard that she just doesn't have the energy to keep up her appearance. Why not tell her you want to buy her a new dress or suit or a new permanent for Christmas, and draw her into a conversation about what styles look best on her and what colors you particularly like to see her wear? Maybe you can see your way clear to hiring a cleaning woman once a week so your wife won't feel she has to spend all her time as a household drudge. Invite her down to meet you for lunch at one of the good restaurants occasionally, or suggest that you get dressed up and go out for dinner. If she thinks you care about how she looks and she can win a sincere compliment from you occasionally, she'll start paying more attention to her appearance.

Dear Martha:

● MY SISTER AND I have a real problem that we don't know how to solve. We live together and next door to us is a widow who has no one to talk with all day so when we come home from work every day she is right there to visit. We are usually so tired at the end of the day that we don't feel like having guests but we can't get rid of her without being rude. Too, whenever we have a party in the evening, she will invariably call or come over, pretending she didn't know we had guests, and if we ask her in she always accepts. We feel very sorry for her as she has no other friends, but she is becoming a nuisance. Can you suggest anything we can do? MARIAN.

I think you'll just have to tell her that you have company and you can't talk with her on the telephone, or, if she comes to the door, speak to her but don't invite her in. After all, your friends don't know her and her presence could make an awkward situation. And when she arrives at your door in the afternoon, you can talk with her a few moments, then tell her you're sorry but you'll have to excuse yourself as you have some work that must be done before evening.

Dear Martha:

● MY HUSBAND AND I moved here a few years ago and have a pretty home which we enjoy very much. We have just learned that his sister and brother-in-law are moving to St. Louis so my husband wants to let them live with us until they find a place of their own. If it were just a matter of a week or two I wouldn't mind, but this happened once before in our former home town and they stayed at our house three months before they finally found an apartment. The sister is downright lazy and won't help me at all. Her husband is nice enough but I don't particularly like him and it certainly is no fun for me to have to cook meals for them all the time and go to all the trouble that extra people in the house cause. We argued about it and I told my husband I would write you.

There are too many "ifs" involved to give a hard and fast answer, but I can certainly see your side of it as well as your husband's. If this couple hadn't taken advantage of your hospitality the last time, and if you felt sure they would use your home only as a brief stopping place until they could find a house—and would pull their share of the load while they were there—I would say to welcome them in by all means. But I shouldn't think your husband would want you to be put to a lot of extra work on their account. If he wants them there, maybe he can suggest to his sister that she help you all she can. He also should have it understood that even though he is inviting them to stay there temporarily, he wants them to find their own place as soon as possible. But remember: if he doesn't issue the invitation in the first place, he won't have to try to figure out a way to get them out if they do become a nuisance. It might be a good idea to let them shift for themselves once.

Dear Martha:

● MAYBE THIS sounds like a silly problem but it is nevertheless a problem to me. A friend wrote me from another city that a friend of hers was moving here and she had suggested that she get in touch with me. Naturally, when she telephoned a few days after she arrived I invited her to have lunch with me downtown and we liked each other pretty well although we had nothing whatsoever in common. She seems like a nice person and I'm sure she is all right or this mutual friend would never have put us in touch with one another. But she complains all the time. She doesn't like this city. She is always comparing it to her former home. She doesn't like her apartment and she thinks the manager of the building is too strict. I want to be nice to her because of the other friend but I get a little weary of hearing all her gripes. Have you any suggestions? BORED.

Griping is a pernicious habit that all of us fall into unless we're constantly on guard. Sometimes you can kid a chronic complainer out of it, sometimes you have to make him ashamed of himself. Sometimes, just ignoring it and changing the conversation helps. If none of these remedies works, you may just have to tell her—when you know her a little better—that you think your town is a pretty nice place, the majority of its people are all right, and if she doesn't like her apartment or the manager she ought to move.

Dear Martha:

● I HAVE BEEN LIVING with my brother and his family for the past few months. My parents live in another town, and they have never met the boy I am going with. They are coming to visit us soon. When they come, I will have to introduce my boy friend to them. I would like to know who is to be introduced first, my parents or my boy friend. CONFUSED.

This need not be a stilted, formal introduction. You can merely say, "John, I want you to know my parents. Mother and Dad, this is John Smith."

Sparkle and Glitter to Holiday Party Fashions

Iridescent Paillettes, Multicolored Sequins and Simulated Jewels Are Used on Glistening Fabrics

ELLEN KAYE CREATED AN OPULENT DRESS OF BROCADE FOR YOUNG SOPHISTICATES. PANEL PLEATS ANIMATE THE PRprincess SILHOUETTE. COLORS INCLUDE CHAMPAGNE, PINK AND AQUA.

A GLEAMING FABRIC, JERSEY LAME, KNIT WITH A THREAD OF GOLD LUREX, CONTRIBUTES THE GLITTER TO A SIMPLE SHEATH SILHOUETTE. THE BATEAU NECKLINE DIPS TO A WIDE V AT THE BACK.

DESIGNED BY SYLVAN RICH, THIS GLITTERING PARTY DRESS FEATURES EMBROIDERY OF PALE PINK PAILLETTES ON PALE PINK NET RUCHING. THE BODICE IS COMPLETELY EMBROIDERED.

A PALE TONED PRINTED SILK SURAH IS USED BY HERBERT SONDHEIM FOR A HOLIDAY AND WINTER RESORT DRESS. THE DRESS IS EMBROIDERED WITH IRIDESCENT PAILLETTES.

IVORY METALLIC BROCADE SHAPED WITH NON-CRUSHABLE PELLON HAS PLEATS AT EITHER SIDE OF THE FRONT PANEL OF THE BELL-SHAPED SKIRT OF A HOLIDAY DRESS BY SONDRA SAGE.

By Sylvia Stiles

CHRISTMAS decorations and Christmas packages will need an extra bit of glitter to compete with the dazzling effect of holiday party fashions.

Not satisfied to use the most ornate and glistening fabrics obtainable, the designers have collected iridescent paillettes, multicolored sequins and simulated jewels to lavish on the season's holiday collections.

There's a young emphasis to the most impressive frocks on display in the stores because Christmas parties are designed primarily for the "young in heart." Even though the style may be one for mother or even grandmother to wear, it has a youthful accent in its widened hemline, its devotion to gay color, and its preference for the princess mode. When it comes to junior fashions, created primarily for the school and college crowd, the designers have had a whirl with bouffant petticoats, yards and yards of net, flower-imprinted brocades, and an abundance of the Christmas glitter.

So important has the holiday fashion season become during recent years, that all of the principal apparel markets of America present a group of "little season" modes. Sometimes the designers combine the showing with their resort collections because the dress-up themes for the Christmas period have the look of the New Year and point the way to coming trends equally as much as the cruise and resort clothes do. An occasional printed silk, subtle and delicately traced with pretty beads or embroidery, illustrates the overlapping of these seasons. Chiffon and the rough finished shantung weaves are others that go prettily to holiday parties and then are packed with sports clothes for a winter sojourn in warmer climate.

Typical of the young party dresses that are moderately priced and will serve for many needs after the holidays have ended are many with St. Louis-made labels. Ellen Kaye, for example, features brocades extensively and gives a new slant to the princess idea with deep pleats at the lowered waistline. The popular champagne shade is attractive in this material as are the pastel blues and pinks. Minx Modes has introduced a holiday collection available now in the retail stores and stressing versions of the unbelted silhouette with moulded, long-torso bodice and wide hemline. Ribbed fabrics in the off-white tones and pastels are significant. Christmas red and holiday green are liked, too, by the designers of junior dresses in the St. Louis and other markets.

In New York, the Suzy Perette young collection includes some of the new, flowered silks. One dress with a strapless bodice that has a lowered waistline is of flowered satin brocade, the design of cabbage roses presenting a vivid contrast to the white background. Another strapless dress in the short formal group is of holiday green pure silk slubbed taffeta. It has a boned bodice topped by decorative folds of the fabric tying with flat bows at the back. Mr. Mort's holiday collection includes a ballet basque dress of lace over sateen. The color alliance is cocoa brown over cream. Another dress of white jacquard brocade is trimmed with brilliants and braid, and has a low cut bodice with tiny shoulder straps.

Pink peau de faille that glistens as the wearer walks is used for a dress that has a circular skirt shaped with Pellon. Of interest is the long torso bodice that has a scalloped hipline. Deep pink velvet ribbon is crossed in a laced effect across the back, and tied with a bow and streamer ends. A very handsome dress that illustrates the use of shiny fabrics enhanced with embroidery and beads is made of spun Orlon acrylic fabric and silk. Chinese yellow in shade, this new fabric is decorated with oriental embroidery forming panels in the skirt and an elaborate border design. Bodice also is embroidered to accentuate a slim, unbelted waistline.

For those who like to have one slim dress in the wardrobe, interest continues to be centered on the fabrics with gold threads and on brocades. One cocktail hour sheath with the Empire midriff is of black and gold lame of silk and Lurex, the non-tarnishing metallic yarn. Another is of a brocade outlined with gold threads. This, too, has the Empire silhouette. While the front of the skirt looks slim there is slight flaring at the back. Another dress with back fullness is made of black silk satin. A bow is set low at the hipline accentuating flying panels that provide the fullness. Bodice has rhinestone pearl embroidery forming a band at the top and over the shoulders.

Skirt-and-blouse enthusiasts will find numerous ways to create their own glitter costumes with the bodices and skirts on display. Felt and Paisley circles are enhanced with sequins and gilt braid for the Christmas dazzle that is in vogue. Skirts of quilted white cotton are stitched with gilt thread and dotted with rhinestones. Gold lame and the gold-accented border prints of the sari type are attractive and new. Simple, untrimmed bodices usually are allied with decorated skirts.

Shirley Booth Shines in an Inept Comedy

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.

ALL those people who swore they'd go to see Shirley Booth read the telephone book now have their opportunity at the Broadhurst, where she opened in "Desk Set" recently.

There she is, as sunny and as expert and as endearing as ever. And there on the stage is the telephone book. It has, I guess, been dramatized—or at least carefully copied down—by William Marchant. Mr. Marchant has a genuine feeling for the commonplace. He seems to have hung around Manhattan office buildings and listened to idle conversations carried on by otherwise preoccupied stenographers. And he has offered this to Miss Booth and a dozen or so competent cohorts as a substitute for dialogue.

Miss Booth is, of course, a black magician with a line, and there are times when you sit up in your seat, wonder if you have heard aright and jot down the last fleeting remark as a sample of sudden wit. Once you have jotted it down, though, the ugly truth becomes plain. Miss Booth has only said "What do you say we give the company a bit of our time?" and because she has taken a little breath before she said it, because she has flicked those eyebrows knowingly on the next-to-last word, and because she is—after all—Shirley Booth, the house has exploded with laughter.

Most of the gayety as gets stirred up at the Broadhurst comes from this sort of supernatural parlay.

Of course, she doesn't stop there. Whenever she is given a halfway decent bit of business to get her very professional claws into, she makes a tidy, cheerful and very rewarding little production out of it. Though the script doesn't offer her a single honest ounce of straight emotion, she is still prepared to let her voice crack, her smile waver and her eyes fill with vagrant alarm. She can, in short, do everything except turn "The Desk Set" into a play.

TO BE ABSOLUTELY FAIR to Mr. Marchant, it must be said that—just in time for the last 10 minutes—he does come up with one agreeable idea. His story, if such it can be called, has to do with a handful of research girls who work in the library of a large television network. In the first act they are afraid of losing their jobs because an efficiency expert is thinking of installing an electronic brain in the department. In the second act, they continue to be afraid of losing their jobs, though no one has really done anything about it except throw a Christmas party so that we can be suitably regaled with a drunk scene. (Miss Booth again; do you doubt that she does it well?)

In the third act the machine arrives, a glowering monster composed of several thousand light bulbs and a few handy switches. The image itself is funny and the star makes it funnier just by looking at it. More than that, the machine has a capacity for making certain interesting mistakes, and the languid evening finally arrives at some kind of satirical point, which the author promptly scuttles.

Lloyd Nolan Cast

HOLLYWOOD—Lloyd Nolan has been signed, by Warner Bros., to portray Clay Pike, a gun runner in "Santiago." Others in the cast are Alan Ladd and Rossana Podesta. Gordon Douglas will direct the film.

Baked Potato Puff

Ingredients: One-quarter cup butter, one-quarter cup sifted flour, one cup milk, one and a half cups hot riced potatoes (firmly packed), 1 and a half teaspoons salt, dash of pepper, two teaspoons grated onion, four eggs (separated).

Method: Melt butter in heavy saucepan over low heat; stir in flour well. Add milk all at once. Cook and stir constantly over low heat until thickened. Remove from heat. Beat in mashed potatoes, salt, pepper and onion. Beat egg yolks well; add a little of the hot mixture to the beaten yolks, stirring constantly as you do so. Add to remaining hot mixture, mix well. Beat egg whites stiff. Fold lightly into potato mixture. Turn into greased five-cup shallow casserole. Bake in pan of hot water in slow (325 degrees) oven about 50 minutes or until a knife inserted in center comes out clean. Makes six servings.

Gallery Notes

WERNER DREWES AND BILLY M. JACKSON, St. Louis artists and printmakers, will be represented by prints in "Graphic Outlook 1955," an exhibition opening Tuesday and continuing through the month at the City Art Museum. Drewes teaches at Washington University School of Fine Arts. Jackson, a graduate of the school here, teaches at University of Illinois. His print called "Street Spawn: Mexico" won a recent purchase prize at Texas Western College, El Paso.

Among 52 other American printmakers taking part in the Washington University display are Josef Albers, Minna Citron and Seong Moy. The show is being circulated among American museums by The Contemporaries, a New York gallery.

Entries in the 1955 Artists' Guild Print, Drawing and Craft Exhibition will be received tomorrow and Tuesday from 1 to 5 p.m. and Wednesday from 1 to 7 p.m. at the guild, 812 Union boulevard. Prizes will be awarded by an out-of-town jury. The show will open next Sunday with a reception from 3 to 5 p.m. and will close Dec. 22.

An exhibition of water colors by Edward J. Thias, Brentwood architect, will open today at Central Public Library art room and run through the month. He held a solo show in October 1954 at Givens Hall, Washington University, where he teaches intermediate and advanced design in the extension division, University College.

Bach, Berlioz Works In Christmas Concert

Three widely known soloists, will be featured in the Christmas concert and candlelight festival of the 150-voice Bach Society chorus and the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at 3 p.m. next Sunday in Kiel Auditorium Opera House.

They are Frances Bible, mezzo-soprano, with the New York City Center Opera since 1948, Leslie Chabay, Hungarian tenor formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Company, who is now artist-in-residence at Washington University, and Paul Ukena, bass, who sang with the Bach Society here in 1954, who has sung in ten NBC television operas and at the Berkshire Music Festival.

'Diary of Anne Frank' Radiant Play

By Walter F. Kerr

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.

WHEN "The Diary of Anne Frank" was first published it was widely admired and, I am given to understand, widely read. Yet I kept running into people who knew its contents "from the reviews," who professed sincere delight that so touching a document should have been salvaged from the horrors of Belsen, and who had, somehow or other, just missed picking up the book at the lending library.

Now that Kermit Bloomgarden's miraculously warm production of the Frances Goodrich-Albert Hackett play based on the diary has opened at the Cort, this vaguely suspended enthusiasm is easy enough to understand. "The Diary of Anne Frank" is the sort of material that conjures up a prior image. Everyone is in favor of a sensitive evocation of what Jewish families went through under Hitler—we all deserve to be reminded—and everyone is sure he knows what that evocation will be like. It will be grim, hopeless, heart-breaking: a record of extraordinary nobility in the face of persecution, and a searing experience to sit through. One imagines a dark play peopled by the wistful shadows of the condemned.

"The Diary of Anne Frank" is a radiant play shot through with the exuberant humor, the confident virility, and even the day-to-day cantankerousness of people who are going to live forever.

There isn't a consciously noble gesture in it. Joseph Schildkraut, as Anne's father and the man responsible for the safety of the eight souls hiding out in an Amsterdam garret, may find it necessary to lay down stern regulations about the use of water and the sharing of food. It may be his electrifying command that shocks the household into a paralyzed hush whenever the sound of danger sifts up from below.

BUT NEITHER THE AUTHORS nor Mr. Schildkraut have seen this man as excessively heroic. He is a reasonably good business man thrown into a situation that needs to be managed intelligently; he is a devoted and generous family man who is much too practical to waste time and emotional energy choking up over the pathos of his lot; he is at his most characteristic when he is making a quick, sensible peace between a jumpy couple who cannot help picking on one another or when he is philosophically admitting to his eager younger daughter that she has now caught up with him in algebra. Self-pity gets no foothold in this tense, miniature world.

Nor have the Hacketts pretended for a moment that eight refugees could share a room for nearly two years and remain pitiable plaster saints.

And it lifts into happiness, too. Soaring through the center of the play with the careless gayety of a bird that simply cannot be caged is Anne Frank herself, a figure of blithe, bumptious, breathless abandon in the hands of a young Susan Strasberg. Not a trace of sentimentality weakens the portrait.

IN THE EARLIER SCENES, when Anne is 14, Miss Strasberg bashes at her roommates with the bold, impudent, headstrong and coltlike confidence of a spirit that is going to conquer the world. The conquest is going to come through mockery—Miss Strasberg is enchanting beyond belief as she solemnly struts round the room after a pompous and fuming neighbor — and through sheer animal energy. As the actress trips up the boy she "wishes were a girl," turns up in a pair of oversize trousers for a sassy impersonation, or pounds her hands against her forehead in adolescent outrage, she is any child testing the universe to see how much it will give. Anne is not going to her death; she is going to leave a dent on life, and let death take what's left.

In the second half of the play, Miss Strasberg carefully carves out the graceful, sober, quietly determined lines of this girl's too early maturity. She puts up her hair—to go calling on the boy who lives just across the room—with an abstracted wisdom. When she has received her first kiss, she moves gently but knowingly through the crowded upstairs room sharing her simple happiness with everyone in it.

When she leaves the play—the Gestapo is waiting below—she smiles at her family, and you believe that she can smile. The time they had together was a nice one.

The play that Garson Kanin has so lovingly staged at the Cort is more than a nice one. It is also something more than an "impressive" one. It leaves a shimmering image behind it because, in a way, it gives no thought at all to tomorrow, cares not a whit for the obvious tears to be wrung from the plight of its characters. It only wants to tell you what Anne's todays were like—and, as it happened, they were wonderful.

Texture Contrast

Add a little finely diced celery to those canned salmon croquettes for good flavor and texture contrast.

Special Clam Chowder

Ingredients: One can (15 ounces) condensed clam chowder (New England Style), one can (7 ounces) minced sea clams, one cup heavy cream, one-half cup milk, one tablespoon minced fresh dill or chives.

Method: A few hours before serving put undiluted clam chowder, clams (including liquid in can), cream and milk in a container or saucepan; cover tighly and refrigerate. At serving time, heat thoroughly but do not boil; stir several times. Sprinkle bowls of soup with minced fresh dill or chives; if these are not available use a little dried crushed dillweed or minced green onion tops. Makes four servings.

Refurbishing Old Toys for Youngsters

By Dorothy Brainerd

THE toy departments are, of course, a veritable fairyland in the eyes of children at this time of year, and lucky is the parent who can go in and buy lavishly for his youngsters.

Unfortunately, for many this is not possible. So get into the true Christmas spirit now by looking around your home for toys or small items of furniture, such as toy chests, which might be refurbished and made good-as-new. Many of them may be given a new lease on life and passed along to bring joy to a younger cousin, a neighbor's toddler, or some less fortunate child.

Sometimes minor repairs are necessary. Surfaces to be painted must, of course, be clean and free from roughness and rust; sanding will remove corrosion and rough spots and will kill a too-high gloss. Then it is just a matter of dipping a paint brush in the proper paint.

IT IS IMPORTANT to use the proper paint, so here is the advice of the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association on this matter.

For toys and children's furniture, it is advisable to use a lead-free, interior gloss enamel. Where bare metal calls for a primer, avoid using red lead. Use iron oxide or the zinc-dust type.

Because young children who are teething are likely to chew on anything they can get into their mouths, be sure to use a type of coating for toys and furniture that is non-injurious. Nearly all coatings intended for indoor use are harmless, even if swallowed in small quantities. So are the coatings applied by manufacturers to children's toys and furniture.

However, this does not hold true of exterior coatings which are made to withstand weather. Out-of-door paints usually have ingredients that are definitely not made to be eaten; for this reason, it is of the utmost importance to avoid using exterior coatings near teething children.

And here is another tip: Remember that youngsters love gay colors, so let yourself go with stencils and decalcomanias, if you don't trust your own artistic ability.

Also, slightly older children like things of "their very own," so personalize toy chests and cabinets with the child's name. Use chalk to make guide lines to help in placing the letters; it can be erased with a dry chamois skin if you don't achieve perfection the first time. When it is to your liking, paint over the chalk, using artist's colors mixed with white enamel.

WRITES MRS. L. S. of Fenton, Mo.: "I have a pressure cooker that must either be set in a pan of water or have running water over the lid to reduce the pressure. Can you tell me how to remove the watermarks caused by this? I've tried soap-filled steel wool pads, but they didn't help. Also, how do you clean the inside of aluminum cooking pans?"

To remove the water spots from the outside of your pressure cooker, or any polished aluminum pan, use a good quality silver polish or glass wax. This usually will remove the spots which are mineral deposits from hard water without marring the polished finish of the utensil. Steel wool or abrasive kitchen cleaners will remove the spots, but they also will scratch the surface of the pan.

To remove discoloration from the inside of aluminum pans, clean with a cream of tartar solution. Boil a solution consisting of two tablespoons of cream of tartar to a quart of water from five to 10 minutes in the discolored pan.

This will remove the harmless mineral deposits; then in order to restore the original beauty, give a light scouring with a soap-filled steel wool pad. Some manufacturers do recommend steel wool for the inside of aluminum pans, but not for the outside.

MRS. A. got into trouble by doing a good deed, so we are happy to come to her rescue.

"I have a nice set of luggage which I loaned to a friend who was going to make a trip," she writes.

"It is dark blue trimmed in ivory. In putting it into the trunk of the automobile some grease got onto the ivory trim. I have tried soap but the stain is still there. I believe it is plastic leather; the trim is of a rubber-like material."

I discussed your problem with the man in charge of the repair department for one of our largest luggage shops, Mrs. A.

He tells me that a very mild (please re-read those last two words) kitchen cleanser usually will remove such grease stains. If this fails, he suggested that you try carbon tetrachloride.

POOR HANDWRITING COSTLY TO BUSINESS

Phone Company, Insurance Firms, Bankers Cite Losses.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP)—In this typewriter age few know, or care, about Platt R. Spencer any more.

Yet only a little over a year ago a band of pilgrims reverently made its way to Geneva, O., and the tomb on which is written in neat script, "P. R. Spencer."

At a time when many a person can't make out his own handwriting after it cools, this trip to the cemetery may have been symbolic.

For Spencer, dead these 90 years, once influenced the writing habits of this nation. "He wrote a fine Spencerian hand," an author would say, confident that any reader would realize from this one sentence that his hero was dependable, dignified and, probably, successful.

Those remaining disciples, members of the International Association of Master Penmen and teachers of handwriting, had gone to the place where Spencer first taught his famous system and later was buried.

Is fine writing, like Spencer, to die and be almost forgotten?

Let's look at a few examples:

The Illinois Bell Telephone Co. last $50,000 a year because its operators wrote so poorly no one could figure out who should be charged with the calls. It began a program other businesses are copying: it hired an instructor to teach its employes how to write.

Insurance executives complain they can't read policy forms turned in by their salesmen. Forty-seven per cent say wretched writing loses them money.

Physicians are notorious writers, and the magazine Medical Economics shows one tragic result. A Missouri medical man wrote a prescription calling for 10 grams of a certain drug. To the druggist it looked like 10 grains. The story in a capsule: Stricken patient . . . big lawsuit . . . testimony . . . jurors peer at prescription . . . verdict for the plaintiff . . . doctor pays off.

A Dallas bank official says illegible handwriting, by customers and by clerk, costs his firm $5000 a year.

No one can say for sure how much United States business losses each year due to shoddy handwriting, but one guess puts it as high as $70,000,000 a year.

A group of fountain pen manufacturers, apparently afraid their product might become a museum piece, last year set up the non-profit Handwriting Foundation. It since has attracted many outside the pen industry who feel that handwriting needs every boost it can get.

Battleship Arizona Is Monument To 1102 Men Entombed Inside It

Flag Is Raised Daily Above Vessel Lying Where It Went Down in Pearl Harbor.

By WILLIAM J. WAUGH

PEARL HARBOR, Dec. 3 (AP)—The U.S.S. Arizona and all but 289 of its crew of 1500 died 14 years ago next week.

Many will be reminded of it; many more will have forgotten. —BUT the Navy pays tribute every day of the year to the officers and men entombed in the once mighty warship.

To Navy men, it is still a commissioned ship of the fleet. Its crew is aboard, sailors explain—1102 of them, from an admiral to apprentice seamen.

Each morning and each night two sailors make a special trip to the Arizona, whose main deck is now eight feet below the surface. At 8 o'clock, just as the sun starts moving into the sky, they raise the American flag sharply to the top of a pole erected on a platform built on a small part of the Arizona's superstructure rising above the water. The flag is not put at half mast because the Arizona still is regarded as a commissioned ship.

Each afternoon, the sailors return and lower the flag.

Started by Adm. Radford.

The ceremony was started in 1950 by Adm. Arthur W. Radford, now chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, after Congress failed to pass a bill recommending that the Arizona be designated a national monument.

Radford ordered a plaque to be placed on the part of the Arizona still above water and said:

"From now on the U.S.S. Arizona will again fly our country's flag just as proudly as she did on the morning of Dec. 7, 1941."

It was 7:40 a.m. when the first Japanese fighters and dive bombers roared over peaceful Pearl Harbor. In minutes it was a raging inferno. The Arizona died quickly. An enemy bomb wooshed down its stack and exploded in the engine room. Boilers and oil tanks and the forward magazine blew up in one immense blast. Searing flames enveloped the battleship inside and out.

In eight minutes, it settled on the bottom, torn in half.

Utah Alongside Island.

The Arizona lies on one side of Ford Island. On the other side is the Utah, onetime battleship which was serving as a target ship when it was hit 14 years ago and rolled over, entombing 58 men.

The bottom of the Utah still just above the surface of the harbor and, though there is no landing at the ship, Adm. Radford had a plaque placed aboard it too.

In the first days after the start of the Pacific war almost every American had seen pictures of the Arizona burning furiously, its tripod masts jutting up through smoke and flame.

It's a different sight today.

Only a part of its superstructure is visible. The mount for its No. 3 main battery turret and a few mushroom shaped ventilators crack the surface of the water.

Each year thousands of Americans visit Pearl Harbor to see the Navy's shrine. Often the visitor is a relative of one of the men who died there 14 years ago.

On the Arizona plaque are these words by Adm. Radford:

"I am sure the Arizona's crew will know and appreciate what we are doing. May God make His face shine upon them and grant them peace."

British Also Need Engineers.

LONDON, Dec. 3 (AP)—British schools are turning out only 75 per cent as many scientists and engineers as the nation needs. The Advisory Council on Scientific Policy declared declared the situation will get worse as fields such as electronics and nuclear energy are exploited.

Mexicans Qualify as Experts On Practice of Eating Flowers

Blossoms Originally Used for Medicinal Purposes — Rose Petals Eaten by Some as Pie Filling.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 3 (UP) — A bouquet of flowers may touch the heart in some countries, but in Mexico it probably will end up in the stomach.

Back in the days of rain gods and pyramids, Mexican Indians decided blossoms not only were tasty but would cure practically everything.

It was the dawn of an era of brewing that has made the patent medicine experts look like amateurs.

When the Mexicans get tired of wearing the big red blossoms of the Jamaica tree or seeing it in a vase, they wash it off, drop it in boiling water and cook until the water is bright red. Then they add sugar, ice and a sprig of mint. It's a tasty drink that is believed to be tops for curing kidney or liver ailments or reducing fever.

And don't throw away the squash blossoms. In the old days these flowers were eaten in special ceremonies to the rain god. But if you are not in need of rain, they can be used as a filler for a pot pie.

Wash the squash flowers in salt water, dry and mince with garlic and onions, then fry to a golden brown. Fill your pie crust with this mixture and sprinkle some red chili powder on top, then bake. You might have to call in the fire department, if the chili is too hot.

Any acacia flowers growing in your back yard? Clean them, dip in egg batter and fry in deep fat. Place in plate and sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon. This, said the ancient Aztecs, also will cure melancholia.

Take the tuna bud which grows on cactus. It will purify your blood, the Aztecs say. You can peel, salt and eat it without cooking.

If that doesn't sound appetizing, slice a few leaves off the cactus (prickly pear if you live in the Southwest), clean, cut in strips and boil in salt water for about 10 minutes. Then mix with chopped onions and tomatoes, fry in olive oil and you have yourself a dish.

Some in Mexico use rose petals for pie filling. Boil in small amount of water with sugar and a spoon of lemon juice until the mixture is thick. Fill your pie and bake it.

Child Coddling Likely to Produce Physical Washouts, Doctor Says

Austrian Asserts European Youngsters Are 5 Times as Muscular as American —Calls TV 'Brain Sterilizer.'

BURLINGTON, Vt., Dec. 3 (UP)—A heart specialist says that the nation's children are in danger of being "coddled and pampered into a generation of physical washouts."

Dr. Wilhelm Raab said exhaustive tests have shown that European children are about five times as muscular as American youngsters despite a much lower standard of living.

The Vienna-born doctor, presently working at the University of Vermont's division of experimental medicine, said parents don't encourage enough activity.

"They drive their children back and forth to school. Labor-saving devices are putting an end to the household chores children used to do."

Dr. Raab is also brooding about the effects of comic books and television. He said that youngsters' imaginations are being blunted by repeated doses of "moronic programs."

"We already have a non-literary culture in this country," he said, "but television promises to become the universal brain sterilizer."

He said that despite a few high-grade programs, television always would be devoid of the mental stimulation gained by attentive reading.

Dr. Raab is pessimistic over chances of diverting what he terms the present trend toward physical and mental decay." He blames it all on the average American's love of gadgets.

"All you need is something with a button or a knob and the public will rush to buy it. Now scientists are predicting that new electronic devices will do away with physical activity entirely."

Too much idleness, he said, threatens mental health as well as physical. He explained that exercise promotes the activity of the vagus nerve, providing a sound, efficient metabolism. Inactivity stimulates the sympathetic nerves, increasing mental tension.

"Today's gadget worshipper is a nervous, harried man," he said. "He would collapse if he tried to perform only a fraction of the physical feats that a trained athlete can tackle.

"Our civilization is over-ripe. We've forgotten that it's the fittest who survive, not the fattest."

BELLEVILLE HOSPITAL GROUNDBREAKING TODAY

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the proposed 154-bed Belleville Memorial Hospital will be at 1:30 p.m. today on a tract owned by the South Illinois Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

Contracts for construction of the $1,944,262 hospital were let last week and work will begin tomorrow. It is scheduled to be completed early in 1958.

The hospital site is a 10-acre area on the west side of Belleville and is part of the Evangelical and Reformed Church Center. Only a small residence for housing foreign missionaries now stands there.

GHOST VOTE TABULATED IN FRESHMAN CLASS BALLOT

BALTIMORE, Dec. 3 (AP)—Editors of The News-Letter, Johns Hopkins University student weekly, got their point across.

They contended freshmen didn't know enough about the candidates to elect a class president only five weeks after entering the university. Then they backed up their argument by adding Bob Clarke to the list of candidates.

Bob Clarke, who exists only in the imagination of the editors, drew 8 per cent of the vote.

GOLDEN GATE SPAN TO BE EXCEEDED, DESIGNER SAYS

FENNVILLE, Mich., Dec. 3 (UP)—Clifford E. Paine, who designed the Golden Gate Bridge, predicts bridges with longer center spans than the famed San Francisco span will be built some day.

"Development of highways must keep pace with the increasing needs of automotive transportation," Paine said. "This will justify construction of bridges at many water barriers where in the past bridges were not feasible for economic reasons.

"Some of these crossings will require long-span bridges. These will be toll bridges. A few will be built where physical conditions require extremely long spans.

"At present, the longest span in existence is that of the Golden Gate Bridge which has a central span of 4200 feet," Paine said. "Longer spans can be built and undoubtedly will be."

Paine recently moved his engineering offices from San Francisco and Chicago to his native Fennville.

CHRISTMAS POSTER DISPLAY OPENS NEXT WEDNESDAY

The Twenty-seventh annual exhibition of Christmas posters, sponsored by the St. Louis Christmas Carols Association, will go on display next Wednesday in the main hall of the Central Public Library, 1301 Olive street, and remain throughout the month.

More than 700 posters, designed and created by children in public, parochial and private schools in this area, were selected from more than 2000 entries for the display.

Presentation of awards for the prize-winning posters will be in the main hall next Saturday at 2 p.m. The Harris Teachers College Choir will provide music for a concert. In addition, the Harris Madrigal Singers will offer a selection of English, French and Welsh carols.

Versatile Preacher.

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP)—The Rev. Earl William Howard, a student at the Baptist seminary here, decided he didn't have time to study, attend classes, preach and do justice to his full-time job. So he turned in his badge as a member of the police force.

REDS TAKE OVER P.-T.A. ELECTIONS IN EAST REICH

New Voting System Created to Assure 'Progressive Parents' Are Selected.

By DAVID M. NICHOL
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

BONN, Dec. 3—The parent-teacher associations of the Soviet zone of Germany are the newest targets for the Communist party organizers.

Their members no longer will be chosen by "pseudo-democratic" elections among the parents, but under regulations that will guarantee that "the influence of the working class will be increased."

Details of the new "election system" have not been made public, but they are included in a directive handed down by the Soviet zone's ministry of education.

Some 75,000 members of local "parents' councils," one member for each school class, shortly will be selected under these new regulations, writes Fritz Lange, minister of education in the Soviet zone government.

Cheering Section.

Not content merely with rigging these elections to assure that "progressive parents" are chosen, the regulations provide additionally for a sort of cheering section that will be five times as numerous as the "councils," and need not be elected at all.

The regulations provide that each elected council member will name three to five others "from the circle of progressive parents" who will have no vote in council affairs but will be expected to give its activities their special attention.

In each case "progressive parents" mean those who are members of the Soviet zone Communist party or in active sympathy with its program.

The "parents' councils" will not function in the future as representatives of the local people but rather, says Lange, as watchdogs of the central government to see that teachers and school administrators abide by the party's educational aims.

These aims, Lange writes bluntly, are "the education of the rising generation to be new Socialist citizens." For "Socialist," you should read "convinced supporters of the Communist line."

Councils Expanded.

The councils have been limited in the past to 19 members for any single school. In the future there may be as many as 40 or more, Lange says. There will be one for each home class room, plus one factory representative, the school secretary of the Communist youth group, one teacher from the Communist teachers' union, and one member from the Communist-controlled "German Women's Association."

Lange agrees that parents have some "rights" in connection with the education of their children, but he says these "rights" have "often been misused by reactionary and non-progressive elements."

Among the "rights" which parents do not have in the Soviet zone, he says, are the "rights":

1. To send their children to private schools.

2. To insist on religious teachings in publicly-maintained school buildings.

Religious teaching in publicly-supported schools continues to be a major issue not only in the Soviet zone but also in Western Germany.

MOSCOW NIGHT CLUB DROPS CZARIST NAME, STOPS ADS

MOSCOW, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Kremlin's experiment in reviving the name and fame of Czarist Russia's most lavish night spot has come to an abrupt end.

The "New Yar" night club-restaurant on Leningrad highway, so christened only a few months ago in honor of the Old Yar restaurant of pre-revolutionary Russia, has resumed the name of "Sovietskaya." All advertising for the establishment has been dropped.

Throngs packed the place after it was labeled the New Yar. But now only a handful, mostly from western embassies, is attracted by the idea of a floor show even of smalltown standards. The idea has apparently spread that it was smarter not to take part in this isolated example of what used to be called Western decadence.

'CHUTE PACKERS JUMP TO TEST THEIR OWN WARES

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky., Dec. 3 (AP)—Once a month 16 men here bet their lives on their jobs.

They board troop carrier planes at this Army post, are flown to an altitude of 1000 feet, then jump.

The parachutes used are drawn at random from those repaired and repacked by these same 16 "trouble-chuters."

It's the most thorough way of insuring that the soldiers have checked each parachute from static line to deployment bag. It also enables the G.I.'s to retain their jump status in the airborne branch, for which they are paid extra.

Eleven of the men already are members of the Century Club, having made 100 or more jumps.

Sgt. Thomas W. Holder of Sanford, N. C., is the veteran of the outfit with 240 jumps. The youngster is Sgt. Charles Watts with 103.

Watts, of Hazard, Ky., is the youngest man ever to go through Army jump school at Fort Benning, Ga. He enlisted at the age of 14 and made six jumps before his age—or lack of it—caught up with him. After aging another year, he went into the Marines and served 18 months. Watts came back into the Army in 1948 at 18.

WRECK LAID TO IMPROPER HANDLING OF TRAIN ORDER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (UP).—The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday blamed "improper handling of an order" for the fatal head-on collision of a Southern Railway passenger train and freight near Hazelhurt, Ga., Oct. 8.

Five trainmen were killed and 26 persons injured in the wreck.

The ICC said the conductor of the passenger train should have received an order to run late. It said he did not receive this instruction because of a misunderstanding between train dispatchers and the operator on duty at Helena, Ga. The ICC did not pin the fault on any one employe. The accident occurred near a curve where forward visibility is limited.

FARM PARLEY HAS NO ANSWER TO KEY QUESTION

State Agriculture Officials Ask When Bottom Will Be Reached in Farm Income.

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP) —More than 100 state farm officials came here this week to attend an Agriculture Department conference on the economic outlook for the nation's agriculture.

Most of them had one question in mind: When can farmers expect the bottom to be reached in the four-year decline in farm prices and incomes?

Before stating what they found out, it should be explained that these officials were largely economists and educators connected with the state agricultural extension services. These services are agriculture's main educational arm.

Information Service.

Working directly with farmers through county agricultural and home economics agents, it is the job of these services to inform and advise farmers and their wives of latest developments in agricultural research, farm management, market prospects for their products, and other economic developments affecting producers.

The extension services are not directly concerned in making or formulating government policies affecting agriculture.

With this explanation, it can be seen why these officials wanted an answer to the farm income question. That's a question worried farmers are putting to the county agricultural agents.

The extension officials returned to their respective states yesterday and today without an answer.

About the most the Agriculture Department could offer them was a hope expressed by Dr. Frederick V. Waugh, director of the department's economics division, that when the state extension officials come back for a similar conference a year from now "we can say that the bottom has been reached."

No Forecasts Made.

Neither Waugh or any other department expert would make a forecast beyond saying that 1956 would be another year like 1955—marked by further declines in farm prices and incomes with little compensating reduction in farmers' production costs.

The state men did go home with the feeling, however, that there was little in current factors affecting agriculture likely to bring about an improvement. In other words, they foresaw no increases in demands for farm products that would bring about price and income improvements.

Likewise, they foresaw no changes in supplies that would be likely to reverse the long decline in prices.

These officials gathered that any improvement in agriculture —barring international complications or a drouth of national scope—would have to come through political action rather than from economic developments.

Department officials pointed out that it was possible that Congress would modify farm-aid programs. There were discussions about the possible use of government subsidies of one form or another to bolster farm returns.

Insistent Question.

The extension workers had another question which had been put to them by many of their farmers. It was this: How is it possible for the economy of the nation as a whole to climb to new heights when one important segment—agriculture—is on an economic downspin?

Farmers long have had the idea that a depressed agriculture would bring on depression to business and industry. They have seen the one followed by the other in the past.

The department economists said business and industry have not suffered yet because farmers have been spending at high rates despite the reduction in their incomes. As a result, city workers have been kept busy making goods and supplying services to farmers at a high level.

The difference between farm income and the higher farm spending has come largely through borrowings. In other words, farmers have kept up their buying by going into debt or, in some cases, dipping into savings.

There is a limit, the department officials said, on the length of time farmers can go into debt. Once this limit is reached, business and industry will feel the effects, they said, in the form of a decline in farm buying. Then industrial layoffs could be expected and a downturn in the general economy.

One extension worker pressed the conference for an estimate on how long the economy could go along its present way without stumbling on a farm-made recession.

While reluctant to make an estimate, Waugh said certainly five or more years of low farm prices could be expected to bring trouble.

Impression of Optimism.

Yet, the extension workers got the impression that there is much optimism among the department's ranking economists for agriculture's future.

Figures showing declines in farm incomes and increases in farm debts do not indicate by any means, said Waugh, that the average farmer is approaching bankruptcy.

Despite the recent trends in debt, the farm financial situation was pictured as "very good" compared with the prewar situation.

The economists told the conference that the well being of farmers is not measured entirely by income or by debt. They said there are at least two other factors which show a more optimistic picture.

Cited was the fact that farm land values have been rising and that surveys show a continuous improvement in the farm living standard.

The conference tossed cold water on the contention of some farm leaders that agriculture must get at least one-seventh of the national income if the nation is to continue prosperous. Agriculture now is getting one-twentieth of the full income. There have been times in the recent past when it got upwards of one-fifth.

Waugh said that almost everyone agrees that farm incomes are now too low.

"But this does not mean," he added, "that farmers need, or are likely to get, one-seventh or even one-twelfth of the national income in future years. With continued declines in the proportion of persons in agriculture, and continued growth in the manufacturing and service industries, it is only natural that the proportion of income going to farmers should decline.

"Probably in the future, net realized farm income will average less than one-twelfth of national income," he said.

It is quite likely that many farm-state lawmakers will take exception to this figure when they start discussion of new farm programs in the coming session of Congress.

PANAMA CANAL CHIEF SILENT ON FREE CRUISES

Gen. Seybold Won't Furnish Data on Junkets of Congressmen, Wives.

By EDWIN A. LAHEY

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1955.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—Brig. Gen. John S. Seybold, Governor of the Panama Canal Zone, has become silent about his contribution to the pleasure and comfort of free-loading members of Congress and their wives.

Gen. Seybold, in his official capacity, is the most fabulous of all the hosts who entertain Congressmen and their wives at the expense of the taxpayers.

The Panama Line, which is under Seybold's direction, offers 15-day Caribbean cruises from New York every Thursday.

Congressmen get this trip free if they present a letter from their committee chairman requesting such transportation. They may take their wives along for the nominal sum of $110 for the round trip.

This free-loading traffic reaches its peak in November and December, when Congressmen feel their strongest urge to inspect the defenses of the Canal Zone.

But the Government officials who operate the Panama line luxury ships are sitting tight on the names of members of Congress enjoying the free hospitality.

A formal request for this information was sent to Gen. Seybold in Balboa Heights, Canal Zone, after the operating head of the Panama Line in New York, Robert Halsey, said that he would not reveal the names of his free-loading passengers unless directed to do so by his boss, Seybold.

An Administrative assistant to Seybold, F. G. Dunsmoor, replied as follows:

"We weel that it is inappropriate for us to furnish information of this nature when it pertains to another government agency or to Congress.

"It is not our policy, therefore, to furnish such information and it is suggested that further inquiries you may have in this respect should be addressed to the appropriate committees of Congress."

There is no question but that this free-loading traffic is heavy, but the facts will not be revealed until some improbable time in the future, when junketing Congressmen themselves bare all.

Since coming to the United States in 1935, he has served as science editor of several newspapers, research engineer for the Washington Institute of Technology and consultant to the Office of Technical Services of the Commerce Department.

LIGHTER OXYGEN UNIT DEVELOPED

Inventor Spurred by Seeing Relative Die Before Equipment Arrived.

MILFORD, Conn., Dec. 3 (AP)—Two years ago, at a social event, Jack Bray saw a relative collapse and die while waiting for an ambulance crew to arrive with a heavy oxygen unit.

Later, the 52-year-old Bray learned from a doctor that had a lighter portable oxygen unit been handy, it might have saved the relative's life.

"I decided right then and there to do something about it," says Bray.

Working with an engineer, Bray has produced a portable unit which he says provides up to one hour of exygen at seven liters a minute. The unit includes a variable flow regulator, two lightweight cylinders and two disposable masks. With a leatherette case the complete unit weighs only 17 pounds.

It apparently has caught on among doctors, hospitals, police, fire and industrial welfare departments and for emergency use in homes, on ships, trains and buses, according to Bray, who has opened a small factory here to make it commercially.

Since going into production two years ago, Bray's biggest satisfaction has come, he says, from what people have told him about the "new lease on life" they have experienced as a result of the new oxygen unit.

Mrs. Phyliss Copertino, day head nurse at Bassick Mfg. Co., Bridgeport, says she has had two occasions to use a Bray unit since the company acquired one two month ago. Two employes suffered heart attacks. Each time, she says, there was a possibility that the attack might have been fatal if the unit had not been available.

Frank McDonnell, president of a surgical supply firm in New Haven says the unit is an especially popular item among doctors in small towns which have no hospitals, because having one on hand "often means the difference between life and death."

Bray says he can produce 10,000 units a year without expanding. He is now producing at a rate of 1500 a year, but production has been going up steadily since he switched from a one-cylinder to a two-cylinder unit nine months ago.

Will Bradley — Bud Freeman — Bobby Byrne — PeeWee Erwin — Peanuts Hucko — Eddie Safranski — Ray Stewart — Trigger Alpert — Lou Stein, plus others. Never before so many jazz stars and so much authentic jazz music in one album. Here is the almost primitive two-beat kind of jazz with its raw, rhythmic impact; its exuberant quality, its wild, jumping up-tempoed sounds. Here, too, is the more somber, moodful, bluesy jazz . . . all played by the musicians we believe to be the greatest . . . trombonists, trumpeters, clarinetist, guitarist, bass player, saxist and drummer plus stars of many other instruments. These records are a jazz CLASSIC. Nothing else like it. Complete on 3 78 or 45 rpm records or one 12" Long Playing record.

HOW TO PREVENT CHILDREN FROM BEING 'CAR SICK'

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (UP)—Eighty per cent of all children get "car sick" when riding in automobiles, but most of the upsets could be prevented by following a few simple rules, a motoring expert advises.

Car sickness has many causes, but the most important one is up and down motion, said Claudia Addison, director of women's activities for a motor car company. Fortunately, she said, resistance to this affliction improves with age and victims gradually become "immune" to it.

Here are a few measures Miss Addison recommends:

1. Eat lightly before setting out on a trip and take only small snacks during the day. It is better to nibble small amounts of food frequently than to eat three heavy meals.

2. Use one of the many drugs on the market that prevent motion sickness.

3. Keep car windows open so fresh air can circulate freely.

4. Have the car checked carefully before leaving home to make sure no offensive oil or gas fumes are seeping inside.

5. Drive smoothly. Sudden stops and starts can upset passengers susceptible to car sickness.

6. Avoid prolonged reading or writing while a car is in motion.

7. Stop for rest periods every two hours so driver and passengers can get out and stretch.

CHURCH SERVICES THURSDAY NIGHT FORECAST BY 1970

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 3 (UP)—A Pittsburgh minister feels that church-going on Sundays may be outmoded in another 15 years or so, and that services probably will be held on Thursday evenings instead.

The Rev. Irving R. Murray, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, said the change will be brought about by the growth of automation and a resulting increase in the leisure time of the average American.

"By 1970, probably every family will have its own plane," the Rev. Mr. Murray said. Churches fighting the old worn-out battle for the Sabbath 'blue laws' will find themselves increasingly empty.

"Sunday mornings, the members of a church congregation will be flying back from Paris or Hawaii," he said. "It will do not good to try to oppose the inevitable."

The Rev. Mr. Murray said it was "arrogant of the churches to assume they have the right to impose the village, agricultural Sabbath of ancient times on modern, urban, industrial peoples.

"The church of tomorrow will very possibly put its maximum emphasis on a Thursday evening service," he said.

Low Overtime.

WATERTOWN, Conn. (UP)—Police were granted the overtime rate of $2 an hour when it was called to the attention of the board of police commissioners that they had been getting $1.50, or 27 cents less than the regular hourly rate.

Y.M.C.A. TO OFFER COURSES IN ART ENAMELING, RUSSIAN

Special courses in art enameling and Russian will be added to the informal educational program of Downtown Y.M.C.A., 1528 Locust street, during the winter term, it was announced yesterday. Both will be taught by Mrs. Alexandra Korsakoff Galston, art instructor at Maryville College.

The 10-week art enameling course will begin Jan. 11 from 2 to 4 p.m., and the class in Russian will start Jan. 10 at 8:10 p.m. Mrs. Galston, who was born in the Crimea and reared in Peiping, China, came to St. Louis in 1928.

Many of her works have been exhibited in museums throughout the nation. Her most recent local exhibition was held last March at the Monday Club in Webster Groves.

Indian Raid.

SAPULPA, Okla. (AP)—Sheriff's officers are searching for an avid western movie or TV fan. An investigation into a building fire disclosed someone had shot a flaming arrow into the door to set the blaze.

COINS ANALYZED BY CHEMIST TO DETERMINE AGE

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 3 (UP) — Through chemical analysis, Dr. Earle R. Caley of Ohio State University is able to tell if coins and other ancient brass objects are the real thing.

By studying coins of known date, the professor has learned that the oldest Roman coins struck from the alloy contained the least copper and the most zinc. In the 250 years during which the Romans used brass, there was a steady increase in the amount of copper and a corresponding decrease in the amount of zinc in the coins.

He pointed out that by determining the zinc content of a coin it was possible to establish roughly the earliest date at which a brass coin could have been made.

"The earliest known Roman brass coins were issued under Julius Caesar about 45 B.C., but the abundant issue of such coins did not begin until about 23 B.C. under Augustus," he said.

"Vast numbers of these coins were issued under various emperors between this date and 200 A.D., the approximate time of the end of the ancient coinage of this alloy."

Sad Sherlock.

LONDON (INS)—It was a sad day for the Baker Street Irregulars. Sherlock Holmes (of Rochester, Kent) was fined $2.80 for parking his car in a restricted London street.

STOLEN HORSES' ANTICS FRUSTRATE 2 COWBOY FANS

TAMPA Fla., Dec. 3 (AP)—Two cowboy fans rustled some mounts and headed west but they had horse trouble and had made only a few miles when the police posse caught them on the outskirts of town.

The pair stole two horses from a ranch, one a lively black mare and the other a steady old sorrel. The mare bucked off the young wranglers so persistently that when the police caught them they both were riding the sorrel and using the black as a pack horse.

In their two packs were eight sticks of dynamite with fuse attachments, 125 rounds of pistol and rifle ammunition, one rusty rifle and two hunting knives.

The boys, 14 and 15, were turned over to juvenile authorities.

Battle Report.

MUSKEGON, Mich (UP)—An excited woman called police to report she overheard a "bloody battle" in progress when she picked up her telephone. Police traced the open line to the home of Charles Fricke and found the telephone receiver in the Fricke home had been knocked off the hook and was lying near a television set. The "battle" was merely part of the TV program, police said.

SCIENTISTS FIND GLACIER STILL HOLDING ITS OWN

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 3 (AP)—The effects of the great glacial ages were reviewed when scientists reported finding a glacier still advancing or at least holding its own, unlike most of the world's great ice masses.

The Ohio State University team said solid ice on the glacier moved about half an inch per day at the surface. The team reported after an expedition which studied part of the great Icelandic ice cap. A final report is due later.

Dr. Richard P. Goldthwait, O.S.U. geologist who led the team, said advance of the ice edge is the result of increased snowfall due to warmer weather which results from encroachment of the sea in nearby areas.

The group camped about 40 miles north of the Thule Air Force Base in northwest Greenland, about 1000 miles from the North Pole. The study was part of a program sponsored by the snow, ice and permafrost division of the United States Army Engineers.

Another "Meanest."

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UP)—A new candidate for the meanest man in the world was nominated by Mrs. Louisa Hill, 77-year-old-age pensioner, who told police someone broke into her shed and stole her entire winter coal supply.

HARRIED INDONESIA DOCTORS REFUSE TO MAKE CALLS

JAKARTA, Dec. 3 (AP)—Indonesia's overworked doctors are refusing to make calls at private homes, and the provisional parliament's health committee wants the government to punish them.

There are only 1500 physicians in all the 3000 islands of this republic with a population of 82,000,000. Doctors' offices are hopelessly jammed from dawn until midnight.

Physicians say they couldn't get out to a home needing medical assistance if they wanted to. So those who are ill must be transported to the crowded offices and wait for hours before they can be examined and get treatment. Scores of doctors even refuse to answer urgent telephone calls.

Indonesians complain that often persons die who could have been saved.

Dr. Hadji Ali Akbar, chairman of Parliament's health committee, told reporters Indonesia must do something to speed up the graduation of young doctors from medical schools and universities.

Housing Problem.

CHICAGO (AP)—The housing shortage on the campus of the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana is so acute that 460 girl students were denied admission this fall. Dean Fred H. Turner told the Board of Trustees that no male students were turned away for lack of housing but some 1500 are living in basements and attics.

LIGHT LATHE DEVELOPED

CINCINNATI, Dec. 3 (AP)—A lathe so light and safe a child can operate it has been developed here. It weighs 16 pounds, is 27 inches long, nine inches high, seven inches wide, and has a 1-35 horsepower electric motor which is incased inside the lathe.

It does not have gears or belts and can be stopped with the fingers without injury, according to the manufacturer. Yet it is said to possess sufficient "turning torque" to perform a good power job of cutting wood, plastics and aluminum.

Wooden Sidewalks to Go.

MUSKEGON, Mich. (UP)—Muskegon's last remaining wooden sidewalks, relics of the days when this was the world's lumbering capital, will be replaced soon with cement walks. Old records show that in 1907, a "depression" year here, police had quite a time keeping residents of one neighborhood from breaking up the sidewalks for firewood.

THAT PILOT FROM ARKANSAS

by SEN. LYNDON B. JOHNSON
Senate Majority Leader

FRIENDLY OPPONENTS, General Eisenhower and Senator Johnson sat side by side in 1951 at Senate subcommittee hearing on plea to draft 18-year-olds.

THE AUTHOR: As Senate Majority Leader, Lyndon Johnson of Texas leads the opposition to President Eisenhower's party in the Upper House. Like Ike, he recently was stricken with a heart attack and is now recovering. Here, remembering his wartime days that won him a Silver Star for gallantry in action, he writes a message once more linking him — in an important and timely way — with the President.

It was in the air over New Guinea that I learned one of the most important lessons of my life.

The time was early in World War II. General MacArthur had just escaped from the Philippines and America's military forces had not as yet amassed their full strength. As a Lieutenant Commander in the Navy, I had been sent to the Southwest Pacific on a reporting mission for the late President Roosevelt.

Early one morning, we took off in patrol bombers for what was to be a routine flight.

The first warning of trouble came over the intercom when the tail gunner yelled, "Bandits, four o'clock high!" I was so green I didn't know what he was talking about, but there was no mistaking the sleek Japanese fighters that came diving out of the sun.

A number of thoughts flashed through my mind. I developed a fervent desire to be back in California where I had spent some months on shore duty, or in the Central Hill Country of Texas. If I ever got back alive, I was going to head straight for home and spend the rest of my life on the banks of the Pedernales, riding nothing faster than a rocking chair.

I also discovered that the most important person in the world was the redheaded farm boy from Arkansas who was piloting our plane. I prayed to the Almighty for strength in his arms, keenness in his eyes, speed in his reflexes and wisdom in his judgment. For our safety depended on him.

I didn't want to hear anything bad about that pilot. I didn't want to start any arguments. I didn't want anybody to knock him on the head with a monkey-wrench and try to take over the controls. If he had any bad habits, I didn't want to know about them. I didn't care about his religion, his family relationships, his business connections, his views on baseball or boxing or anything leading to hard words.

He was the only man in the world who could bring that plane and that crew safely back to earth and I loved him like my own brother. I'm certain every man in the plane felt exactly the same way.

I have never forgotten that pilot or that engagement. Both taught me many lessons — lessons about myself and about other people; lessons of humility and lessons of prayer. But the most important lesson was that a hot fight is no time to be finding excuses for picking up a blackjack and whacking the pilot over the head.

It Applies to Politics Too

That point seems very obvious several thousand feet in the air. But it is a point that sometimes gets lost (and for a while was lost to many people almost completely) during these postwar years.

In the field of foreign policy, it is not at all far-fetched to compare the President of the United States to that redheaded pilot. The President — and only the President — has the responsibility and the authority to steer the nation through the troubled air of international relations. He has been given a specific function by our Constitution and no other officer of our Government can take over that function. Once the American people have made their choice, the pilot cannot be replaced for four years.

I may differ with the President, as I frequently do. But the differences will always be expressed respectfully and in an effort to help — because where the security of our country is involved, it is as important to Democrats as it is to Republicans that the pilot be in full control.

In the field of combat, that pilot bore the sole — and heavy — responsibility for the lives of every man in that plane. In the field of foreign relations, the President bears the sole — and heavy — responsibility for carrying out the policy of the United States. Our safety depends on him.

He can turn to his advisers for counsel. He can turn to the Senate for what the Constitution terms "advice and counsel." But when the chips are down, he must make the decisions that mean life or death for ourselves and for our children.

Ultimately, of course, he must account to the people for those decisions. Ultimately, he and his party must submit the record to the people. The democratic process does not call for blindly following the leader.

But whenever I hear of any project for knocking any President over the head — regardless of his political affiliations — while he is trying to conduct the foreign policy of the United States, my mind flashes back at once to that day over New Guinea.

It was a lesson that I will never forget: you don't slug the pilot. You just pray he flies right. ■

Papa is a party pooper

Do your birthday mailing—your daughter's, anyway—early

by DICK EMMONS

Frankly, I think the fact that anybody showed up at our daughter's seventh birthday party stands as a burning testimonial to the United States Post Office.

We had let her personally address the envelopes bearing the invitations and, while we think she prints rather well, she also prints rather large. Most of her guests' names ran obliquely across the envelope and down the right side. In the case of a young man named Theodore Schermerhorn, the last name also ran across the bottom and started back up the left, threatening the T in his first name.

Beaming, I read over the addressed envelopes when Ann had finished and been put to bed. With one or two exceptions, it seemed to me a fine bit of work for a 7-year-old. I took one of the exceptions into the living room and confronted my wife.

"Do we know any Penl Ljidsterkg?" I asked.

"Did he send us a bill?"

"No, no," I explained. "He or she — or it — is one of the guests Ann is inviting to her birthday party."

"That must be Paul Leidson," she said. "Ann sometimes gets a few letters mixed up."

"How about a Cunbcmbj Raeoustv?" I inquired, showing her the second exception.

"There you have me," Helen admitted. "What's the address?"

"Pinehurst Avenue. I printed the addresses myself to give the postal boys a fighting chance."

"I don't know who she knows over on Pinehurst, but mail it anyway. It'll be fun to see who turns up."

"I hope it isn't Cunbcmbj Raeoustv," I muttered.

Well, I put stamps on the envelopes and stuck them in my coat pocket for prompt mailing. Helen found them there on the eve of Ann's birthday when she was going through the pockets to get the garment ready for the cleaners. The letters, made in a soft pencil, had blurred and run together for protection.

"Nice work," my wife observed. "It looks like we'll wind up with eight gallons of pistachio ice cream and no guests!"

"I like pistachio ice cream — " I began defiantly, but something in her glance stopped me. "All right, I'll mail the invitations right now. It's not too late. They'll get there in the morning."

The first three mailboxes I found had no pickup scheduled until the next morning. The timetable on the fourth was so weak from the weather I couldn't read it. By that time I was a desperate, haggard man.

I called home from a drugstore telephone. "Certain — ah — complications have set in, dear — "

She grasped my meaning instantly. "Take the letters downtown to the main Post Office," she said crisply. "There's a night slot provided for just that purpose. And try to get home before dawn."

Reassurance, Sort Of

I tried. Rather to my own surprise, I succeeded. And the next day, as the hour of the party drew near, I gave Helen the benefit of the wisdom I had acquired thereby.

"Don't worry," I told her. "The U.S. postal system is the world's best. If dark of night couldn't stay me, you can be sure that neither sleet nor rain can stay these couriers in the swift completion of their appointed rounds . . . Are you listening, dear?"

"There's nothing in there about forgetful fathers," my wife sighed, one eye on the clock and the other on Ann, who was poised happily like a dog at point waiting for the presents to come through the front door.

Poor Ann, I thought suddenly. Doomed to disappointment by her own Dad . . .

Exactly one hour before the party's scheduled start the first little guests arrived — and three minutes later the last one did. I never guessed anyone could be so happy to see 14 terrors in assorted sizes funnel through the front door and start laying waste to the furniture. Even if one of the terrors was Cunbcmbj Raeoustv. ■

TRYING TO READ, model Russell Lee looks casual as Saturday crowds press against glass walls of her New York store-window apartment. Store kept a 24-hour guard outside it.

IN SHOWER, Russell giggles over brief moment of privacy. Bathroom, specially installed inside store, was only part of apartment that couldn't be seen by crowds on busy 14th Street.

Two weeks in a STORE WINDOW

NEW YORK.

For two weeks recently, Russell Elizabeth Lee, the blonde reading, showering and eating on these pages, lived right in the public eye — in a store window on a busy Manhattan corner. The gimmick: to ballyhoo a new department store, which furnished everything from clothes to coffee for Miss Lee and the "apartment." The stunt attracted so much attention that police told her to screen off her bed, fearing late celebrators might get ideas. Unmarried and 26, Miss Lee called life in a goldfish bowl "a lot of fun," entertained dates, chatted with watchers via intercom and with friends by phone. After a radio hookup gave out her phone number, however, the phone was jammed with incoming calls; she got 75 an hour, enough date offers to last a girl a lifetime. ■

SOME PEER, SOME PASS model's store-window "cage." Apartment attracted attention at all hours. Spotlights were kept burning all night.

ENTERTAINING, Russell sits down to dinner with her date. She did no cooking, ate meals sent in by the store, gained only two pounds in two weeks.

A LUTHERAN BOY TAKES HIS VOWS

Here is how a representative Protestant lad reaches one of the major milestones in religious life—the inspiring experience of Confirmation

by KARL KOHRS
PHOTOS BY CARROLL SEGHERS II

Climax in Lutheran Confirmation ceremony comes when

ONE OF THE MOST significant steps any child can take in religious life is becoming a full-fledged member of a congregation. For children of all faiths it is a spiritual milestone. What does it mean to them? How do they prepare for it? What are the religious traditions involved? These and other questions will be taken up in a new series of three PARADE picture-story documentaries, the first of which appears today.

CORAL GABLES, FLA.

Clad in a white Confirmation robe, 13-year-old Terrence Thompson, Jr., knelt at the altar of St. James Church here. He felt the hand of Pastor C. G. Wolf placed lightly upon his head, then heard the pastor intone the 10th verse of the second chapter of Ephesians: For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them.

These are words Terry will long remember, because they were chosen from the Bible especially for him by Pastor Wolf as words he can live by. For each of the other eight boys and girls in the Confirmation class that day, Pastor Wolf also had a special verse.

Terry Thompson, an American boy of Scandinavian descent, lives in Miami with his father, mother and sister Diane, who is a year younger than Terry. Mr. Thompson is an accountant who came to Florida for his health. Terry goes to Ponce de Leon Junior High School in Coral Gables, and his Confirmation class was made up mostly of school friends, including his closest chum, Larry Riggenbach.

An Experience Millions Share

In the rite of Confirmation, Terry, Larry and the others took part in an experience that is shared at one time or another by more than 90 million members of Christian congregations in the United States. The ceremony and meaning inherent in this experience are basically the same in all churches; for those who participate, it marks a "coming of age" when they are admitted fully into the spiritual and temporal life of the church.

Although there is no hard-and-fast rule about the matter, Confirmation as such is traditionally practiced by those churches having infant baptism. At that rite, the child is admitted to church membership. At Confirmation, the child, having reached Terry's age or thereabouts, confirms the vows made for him by parents and sponsors at his baptism. He then is admitted to Communion, which symbolizes the highest spiritual privilege the church can offer its full-fledged members.

In actual ceremony, there are as many variations as there are churches. For the 32 million-plus Catholics in the U.S., of course, the rite is almost exactly the same. But for nearly 58 million Protestants, "coming of age" takes different forms. Thus, while Terry Thompson's Confirmation cannot be called typical, his experience is generally representative of the Protestant faith.

Some Protestant churches which practice infant baptism have similar "coming of age" rites, although they do not customarily use the term Confirmation. In the Presbyterian Church, for example, a child of "Confirmation age" may enter into the full Communion of the church by appearing before an examining group called the Session, composed of church elders and the pastor. If they decide the child's religious training has prepared him for this step, he is admitted to the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, then ordinarily makes a public profession of his faith in the presence of the congregation.

In Congregational Christian Churches, infant baptism is considered an act of consecration. While the churches do not practice a formal "Confirmation," the child is received into church membership on the same basis as in other Christian bodies. In his early teens, the child receives instruction from his minister in a pastor's class. At the conclusion of this class, he is accepted into church membership if he so desires.

Of the leading Protestant churches, the Baptist ceremonies of admission differ most widely from the others. Baptists, believing baptism should come only after an individual makes his own decision, do not practice infant baptism and have no ceremony comparable to Confirmation. Baptism comes after the individual's public profession of faith and he may then join the church.

At Protestant Confirmations, either the pastor or the bishop presides, according to traditional practice. Adults as well as children may be confirmed after a period of instruction and study. In general outline, Confirmation practices of the Lutheran, Methodist and Episcopal churches are most nearly alike among the various Protestant sects.

Two Years of Instruction

To prepare himself for Lutheran Confirmation, Terry Thompson had two years of religious instruction in one-hour-a-week classes held by Pastor Wolf. This instruction centered around what is called the Small Catechism, drawn up by Martin Luther, out of whose teachings the Lutheran Church took form some 400 years ago. In it, Luther condensed the principal teachings of the Bible into a series of questions and answers, presented under five headings: the Ten Commandments, the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Sacrament of Holy Baptism and the Sacrament of Communion.

The Confirmation course also included a brief study of the Bible in its relation to secular literature, some church history and an explanation of the humanitarian work of the church and the duties of members.

As Confirmation day approached, Terry and the others in his class shared a feeling of rising excitement and anticipation. First there was the final examination before the Church Council. It proved easier than Terry had hoped, because the confirmands were asked only one or two key questions.

Pastor Wolf had explained to him that the stern old Lutherans of earlier days had required children to memorize the entire Catechism. On examination, they were brought up before the congregation and were required to answer questions fired at them by the members. Although the ordeal of examination is much easier today, Pastor Wolf pointed out, the reasons for it are still the same: to impress upon the child the seriousness of Confirmation and to make parents realize the necessity of religious instruction.

On the Saturday preceding Confirmation Sunday came the "rehearsal," when Pastor Wolf and the confirmands went through the entire ceremony.

The solemn ceremony over, Confirmation Day becomes an occasion for rejoicing

Seated in church on the following day when the service began, Terry felt he had come well prepared for this crucial moment in his life. As a boy who is serious about his religion, he had mingled feelings of happiness and awe. He looked around. St. James Church — the oldest Lutheran church in Coral Gables — was crowded. In a pew behind him sat his family, all in their Sunday best.

Even though Terry had rehearsed the ceremony, it took on a new meaning as he finally stood at the altar. First came the Examination: Dost thou renounce the Devil and all his works? Then came the Profession — the Apostle's Creed, which Terry had memorized as part of his instruction. And finally there was the Imposition of Hands, when Pastor Wolf made the climactic gesture of the rite.

And so Terry, like millions of Lutherans before him, was ushered into the fellowship of his church. As a full-fledged member, he now takes part in its adult life — he can attend its annual meetings, contribute to its support and have prior claim to his pastor's services when he is in need of them. When he reaches the legal age of 21 he can vote on church issues.

Confirmation, in short, is like high-school Commencement: a beginning. The instruction Terry received in his pre-Confirmation classes is continued in such organizations as the Luther League and the Walther League. In fact, Terry is now a member of the Luther League of St. James Church and editor of the League's bulletin. He likes church work and occasionally — despite his youth — thinks about entering the ministry.

For Terry, the memory of his Confirmation Day still carries a glow. After the service, the release from tension put everyone in a festive mood. Confirmands and parishioners flocked into the church garden. There cameras clicked and congratulations were extended. Terry squirmed with embarrassment as mother, grandmother, sister and other feminine well-wishers kissed him. Dad and grandfather shook his hand, man-to-man fashion.

At home, Terry and his family wound up the day in traditional celebration.

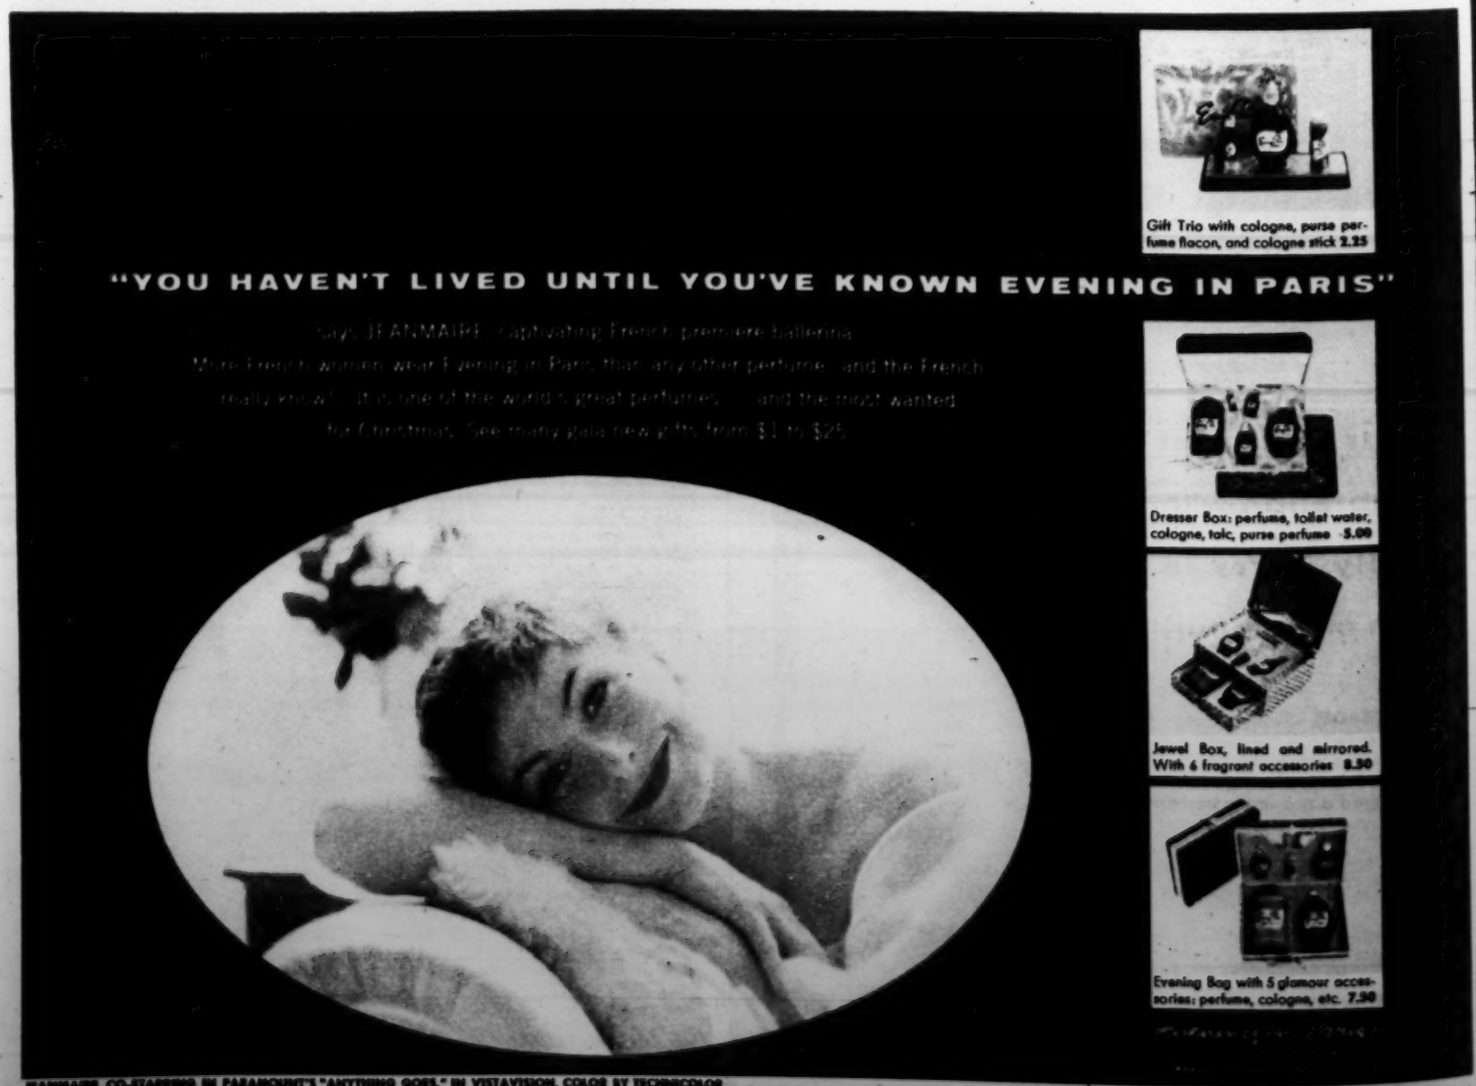
MEN! FOR 1956 IT'S THE GLOBAL LOOK

FROM TAHITI comes the "pareu," a wrap-around tunic in gay prints for men (and women) covering matching swim suits.

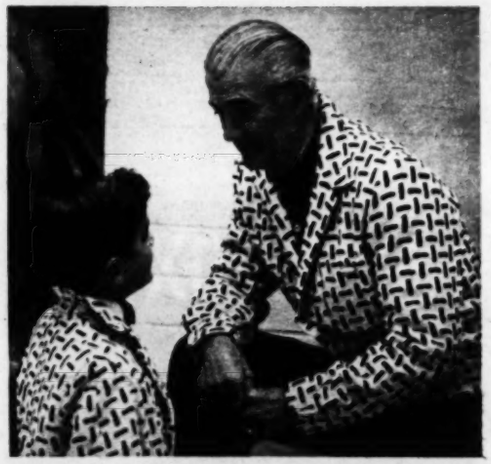
MONTE CARLO: Light-colored jacket made of rayon and silk has two inside pockets, none outside. Trousers are made of silk.

CHINA: A gay, oriental print is the feature of this coolie shirt. Open, stand-up collar is designed for maximum comfort.

NEW LEISURE CLOTHES HAVE INTERNATIONAL FLAVOR



MEXICO: Bold stripes mark south-of-the-border version of a Japanese "judo jacket," worn with shorts, straw hat.



AFRICA: Short-waisted coats, hand-loomed of cotton in a French African tribal pattern, are appropriate for either father or son. The outfit is rounded out by contrasting rayon-silk trousers.

PALM SPRINGS, CALIF.

Forget about flannels, tweeds and stiff collars for a moment, men. Look to broader horizons. Soon you will be offered the cool, colorful, comfortable resort and sports clothes pictured on these pages.

Recently previewed here by the Men's Apparel Guild, these designs-from-all-over are supposed to take the "sartorial gloom" out of the average American male's wardrobe. To that end, 71 clothing manufacturers in the Guild have gone native and drawn on designs from Mexico, the Orient, the Mediterranean, the Pacific, even Africa.

"The old Ivy League look, featuring charcoal grays, is on the way out," says a Guild spokesman. "Coming are lighter colors, fabrics, mixtures of synthetic silks and cottons. We've borrowed the best and most comfortable styles from every nation and adapted them for the American market."

The rest, gentlemen, is up to you. ■

BERMUDA: Knee-length shorts can be worn by all members of the family. The matching shirts with "crazy stripes" have broad, contrasting solid-color panels. Note the attractive, "easy-open" collars.

HOW SAFE IS YOUR MAILBOX?

It appeals to thieves, forgers, con-men — but Uncle Sam knows how to fight them

THIEF IN ACTION: A railroad employe puts stolen parcel-post packages in his

by JACK ANDERSON and FRED BLUMENTHAL

PARADE WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENTS

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Into your mailbox go — if you are an average citizen — 305 pieces of mail a year. They may include bank statements (giving your balance and samples of your signature), monthly bills (disclosing where charge accounts are held), occasional parcels (containing valuable merchandise), Government checks, tax refunds and dividend payments (which can be forged and cashed).

In short, your mailbox is a jackpot for the forgers, pilferers and sneak thieves who make a profession of looting mail. It also is a target for the fleece artists who devise more subtle schemes to separate you from your money.

Yet, as an American, you naturally expect your mail to arrive safe and unopened. This feeling can be credited to the nation's oldest Federal policing agency, the Post Office Inspection Service.

Its history dates back to the Revolution, when Tory mail carriers were caught rifling the mail for information helpful to the British. Today, 1,000 postal inspectors uphold the tradition that the mail must go through. They investigated 600,000 missing-mail complaints last year. Ninety per cent turned out to be misplaced mail; 6,000 cases ended in arrests.

Forgers Like Paychecks

Forgers, in particular, like to make a living out of others' mailboxes. Some are organized like the Chicago gang which systematically ransacked mailboxes for paychecks on the 1st and 15th of each month. But the postal inspectors covered the same routes even more systematically. Five gang members now get their mail at Federal prisons.

Other forgers prefer to lone-wolf it, like the individualist who picked four Government checks out of a Greenwood, Miss., mailbox. The owner wasn't disturbed about the delay in getting his checks until one day a letter arrived. In scrawled handwriting on Treasury Department stationery, it said:

"Dear Sir: We are holding up your checks on the count of your others being stolening. Look for them on the 10th of March all four of them. Don't write us, please. Yours truly, Glen — Manager."

Somehow this didn't read like an official letter. The suspicious addressee lodged a complaint, and postal inspectors went into action. They discovered another letter in the same crude handwriting at the Treasury Department, purportedly sent by the man who was waiting for his checks. It read:

"Dear Sir: This is to let you know. Drop it about my checks. I just remember I got those. My aunt got those, she cash one for me. She told me but forget all about it. Yours truly, Malcomb Johnson."

The forger's stratagem backfired; his letters led postal police right to him.

The man most responsible for keeping your mailbox safe is Chief Inspector David H. Stephens, who could have been cast by Hollywood for his job. A handsome man with tinges of gray at the temples, he sucks a pipe and runs the Inspection Service with the air of a modern Sherlock Holmes.

"My goal," he says, "is to see that the mail moves quickly and safely. That includes all mail — from White House pouches to vacationers' postcards."

The Chief reports sternly that mailbox thefts are on the rise. He is particularly concerned about a new gimmick: "borrowing" bank statements from mailboxes. A professional forger, after studying your bank statement, can sign his way through your balance faster than an extravagant wife.

Of course, some mail is stolen before it ever reaches the mailboxes. Last year 435 postal workers were arrested for misrouting valuable mail into their own pockets. One tri-city ring, operating behind the mail cages in New York City, Pittsburgh and Chicago, could have stocked a pawn shop with postal plunder (example: 150 watches). Inspectors caught 19 employes with their hands in the U.S. mail.

Burglars, too, have been breaking into Post Offices lately. Their favorite loot: money-order blanks, which they usually fill out for the $100 maximum and cash on cross-country spending sprees. Most Post Office burglaries are the work of gangs. A five-man Illinois gang averaged one burglary a week until it was nabbed robbing its 41st Post Office.

By comparison, few crooks dare risk a direct mail holdup, because they face a mandatory 25-year sentence if caught. Only 36 mail holdups were attempted last year; most were small rural Post Offices in the rear of general stores. Though the take usually was small, the postal inspectors got right onto each case.

Romeo — for a While

The Inspection Service also will protect you from such mail-order mischief as threats, extortion, frauds — even matrimonial hoaxes.

The most novel matrimonial fraud was pulled by one Harry Cochrane, who romanced a middle-aged maiden out of $200,000 over a 13-year period. His big mistake was using the mails to cash in.

It all began when Elva Nutting, daughter of well-to-do farmers, fell rapturously in love with the much-younger Cochrane. He persuaded her to pretend they were newlyweds, so they could collect a cash wedding present from her parents. Three months later, the money used up, Harry left Elva — but not without the memory of his honeymoon with wealth.

To keep up the luxurious life, he systematically hornswoggled the Nuttings. First was a tragic, though imaginary, automobile accident. Touched, the lovesick Elva appealed to her parents, who for months forwarded "medical expenses" to the healthy young man. This was followed auto in Worcester, Mass. Photo was made by a postal agent in a handy baggage car.

by other heart-rending stories, each with the same moral: send money. Fifteen fictitious characters emerged and disappeared as the installments continued.

The final story had Harry inheriting a large estate from a wealthy woman. He generously willed his imaginary fortune to Elva. He then had himself die and assumed the role of a lawyer who, of course, needed money to settle the estate.

But the grief-stricken Nuttings feared Harry had been murdered and notified the police of their suspicions. The puzzled police, finding Harry very much alive, tipped off the postal authorities. Upshot: a five-year sentence for mail fraud.

The extortionists, who use the mails to blackmail, are even more vicious. Take the case of Doris Cohen, a striking brunette, whose father committed suicide. The tragedy was followed by a blackmail letter, demanding $15,000 as the price of silence about her father's alleged affairs. She was instructed to gift-wrap the money, bring it to Manhattan's famous St. Patrick's Cathedral, sit in the fifth from the last row and leave the package under the pew.

She came with the money — and a squad of postal inspectors, all dressed in their Sunday best. One inspector, in fact, sat directly beside the man who reached for the wrapped money. He turned out to be Joseph Peter Mininni of Brooklyn, whose act of innocence was so unconvincing that he finally gave up and pleaded guilty.

Other frauds that might darken your mailbox range from buried treasure and prize contests to chain-letter schemes and phony estates. Last year the American public lost many millions to such fakes.

A typical example was the charity scheme worked recently by enterprising East Coast operators. They set up offices in a big New York office building and began raising funds to aid victims of illness. In one year their company collected more than $100,000 and divided it roughly 5 per cent for the patients — and the rest for "overhead." They even were driving their enterprise "into the red" when postal inspectors put a halt to the whole sorry business.

The postal inspectors' heavy work-load (average: 100 cases per man) keeps Chief Stephens on the outlook for new men. He wants recruits between the ages of 25 and 38 who are above-average in physique and education. They also should have no easily identifiable physical characteristics.

If you think you qualify, apply to Chief Postal Inspector, Post Office Department, Washington 25, D. C. Then be prepared to serve one to four years in the regular postal service before you will be eligible to join the inspection division. Starting salary is $5,280 a year; gradual increases bring an inspector to $8,460. Further boosts, awarded to some men for efficient work, can lead to a top annual salary of $11,180.

But all postal inspectors have a bigger reward: the knowledge that through their efforts the American mailbox is becoming, more and more, a safe place for your private affairs. ■

CHIEF INSPECTOR David H. Stephens (above) offers four tips on protecting yourself against mailbox thieves:

1 Get yourself the least vulnerable mailbox possible.
2 Don't let your mail accumulate. Remove it quickly after the mailman passes by.
3 If you leave town for a few days, arrange with a neighbor to hold your mail. Or ask the Post Office to withhold deliveries.
4 If an expected check or bank statement fails to arrive on schedule, inquire from the source immediately. If the delayed mail went out on time, complain to the Post Office at once.

MONROVIA, CALIFORNIA

Helped by crutches, business consultant Ken Porter heads for his office.

He refuses to let his handicaps interfere with his work — or with anything else.

This Arizona vet had one choice; so

HE CHOSE TO STAND UP—FOR LIFE

by CHARLES NIEHUIS

PHOENIX, ARIZ.

In 1947, Ken Porter, a World War II tank commander whose wounds had developed into a painful, paralyzing disorder of the central nervous system, was given a thorny choice by doctors here: his stiffening left leg could be amputated, with questionable chances of recovery, or his sensory nerves could be snipped and his hips and legs fused together in rigid position. If the latter, Ken had another equally difficult dilemma to face. He could be fused in either a sitting or a standing position.

After long talks with his wife, Athlone, Ken made his choice: he would keep his leg, and he would stand up for the rest of his life. At the same time, he reached another decision. He would not be an invalid. He would make himself as independent as possible.

Before the war, Ken had had a variety of jobs. Immediately after the operation he tried a new one. He studied the tax laws thoroughly; then he set himself up as a tax consultant. His slogan capsulized his determination to stand on his own feet: "Tax help by a man who never sits down on the job." Later he moved on from the tax business to become a partner in an engraving firm and head of a firm of business consultants. While his body is paralyzed, his mind has raced energetically on.

Today, at 38, Ken has almost reached his goal of complete self-sufficiency, although one small wrinkle still baffles him: He cannot put on his socks without help. Thanks to some ingenious devices of his own making, he can handle his trousers, and a three-foot shoehorn helps with shoes. But he still is working on the sock problem.

"I can get them on my toes," he says, "but not over my heels. But I've just thought of another gadget — got the idea from seeing pictures of scientists handling uranium with long tongs. If I can work a pair of clips on the ends of coat hangers, maybe then I can get my socks on."

These days, Ken is a little too busy to use all his self-help gadgets. His wife and his sons, Kenne and Jon, help him to HELPFUL SON Kenne ties Dad's shoelaces before Porter leaves for work. He also wears shoes without laces, slips them on with a long shoehorn.

With plenty of reason to be bitter, Ken Porter always wears a smile dress. As first vice president of the Lions Club, an official of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and chairman of the board of his church, he must make every minute count. But on his frequent hunting and fishing trips, he still uses his stretched-out coat hangers to help with his clothes.

Despite his handicaps, Ken has never lost his love for sports. He has managed to bag a deer each of the last six hunting seasons, and one of his principal pleasures is training his hunting dogs.

He is such an unflagging optimist that he hardly seems handicapped at all. But Ken Porter has had plenty of reason to be discouraged. A gunnery sergeant in the South Pacific in the early days of the war, he was promoted to acting tank commander in the field. Shortly afterward, the tank suffered a direct hit and everyone else in the crew was killed. Blown out of the tank and hit in the stomach and back, Ken spent long months in field and service hospitals. Finally he was sent home to his native Kansas as a totally disabled veteran.

Next: a Car Accident

Pain from his wounds still plagued Ken, and he thought a change of climate might help. He moved to Phoenix. The day after his arrival, he was flattened by an auto. The injury hobbled him so badly that he wasn't able to work, and he and his wife and child (with another on the way) lived in a tiny crackerbox of a house almost without funds. A neighborhood grocer extended credit and even bought ice for their old-fashioned icebox. It was about this time that Ken learned he must choose a lifetime of sitting or standing.

Thanks to his own ingenuity, Ken now leads an almost normal life. Unable to drive a car after his operation, he bought a stand-up milk truck and rigged it with special steps with 2-inch risers so he could climb in and out. Later he designed a truck of his own with a hydraulic lift, brakes that need only 2-pound pressure and a back-rest. A California company would have charged $6,000 to produce it, but Ken's design so captivated their engineers that they donated the lift — and the union contributed a radio.

Having completed the truck, Ken turned his attention to a custom-built house. His design called for extra-wide stairs and hallways to accommodate his crutches, specially built bathroom fixtures and a network of cables and trapezes to help him swing himself out of bed in the morning. This Ken must do without help, because his wife weighs, as he puts it, only "a fat 96," while he weighs 170. He also has special collapsible tables, which he uses for meals and paper-work at home, and even carries to Lions Club to lean on while presiding.

Ken Porter may lean on tables, but he refuses to lean on people. His closely knit family is helpful with tasks that are a little beyond him, but otherwise he prefers to make his own way.

"I don't want people to feel sorry for me," he told PARADE fervently. "I get a lot out of life. There's very little that I miss. I like to go through life with a smile, and I think I have a lot to smile about." With a spirit like that, how could Ken Porter have made any choice but to stand on his own two feet, for the rest of his life? ■

HYDRAULIC LIFT hoists Porter out of specially built stand-up truck. While driving, he wears safety belt, uses back-rest.

CLOSE FAMILY includes wife Athlone, sons Kenne (l.) and Jon. Leaning on one crutch, Ken often plays baseball with his sons.

Reading in bed, Porter checks front door via intercom; this connects with whole house, saves unnecessary steps.

HAND-PAINTED ceramic tiles decorate this easy-to-build serving tray. Tiles are embedded in an adhesive, joints concealed with grout.

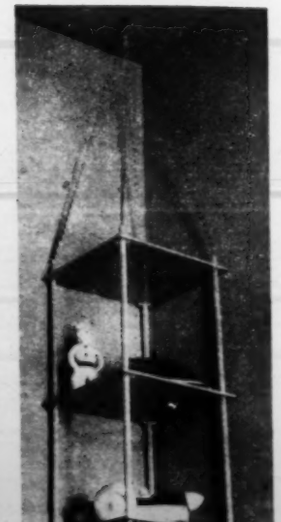
Projects from leftovers

These unique projects, made from leftover wall and floor tiles, are perfect for Christmas giving.

Serving tray (above): Cut handles from ¼" plywood. To hand-paint ceramic tiles, coat tiles with turpentine; draw designs on tissue paper; blacken back of paper with lead pencil; with black side on tiles, retrace as a guide. When painted, bake tiles in oven ½ hour at 350°. Wash with soap, coat with plastic spray.

Corner shelf (r.): Cement eight tiles together in pairs, drill 7/16" holes, drop 27" lengths of ½" dowelling down holes. Support shelves with 3/16" dowels inserted in holes drilled in larger dowels.

Dining tray: Cement tiles to 14"-x-18" plywood base with waterproof adhesive. Nail and glue edging strips to base. ■



CORNER SHELF hangs from brass chains attached to tops of dowels.

TRAYS are supported by potato-chip cans. (Bolt can tops to trays.)

TEEN-AGE TOPICS

Some of you are trying to place me in the position of parent by asking my permission to do things that your parents will not let you do. I can discuss your problems with you, but you will have to get the courage to discuss them with your parents.

Q. I am 14. Other girls in my crowd are allowed to have dates. My father says that I am much too young to think of boys. We decided to leave this up to you. — N.Y., Arlington, Mass.

A. Every normal girl thinks of boys. Make it clear to your father that you want him to make rules for you to follow, but that you would like to have the privileges your school friends enjoy. Try to see his point of view and perhaps he will begin by granting you a few afternoon dating privileges.

Q. I have trouble keeping a steady girl friend. I was going with one girl for a month when we broke up. Last night I met her at a party. I danced with her all night — but she would not let me take her home.—R.J., Newark, N.J.

A. I think that you are trying too hard to impress this girl. You should have shown some interest in other girls at the party.

I know that in some crowds steady dating is the accepted thing, but I don't approve of it. Take out numerous girls, and you will gain in social confidence.

Q. At what hour do you think girls in their late teens and early 20s should end a date? Should a girl in her late 20s go steady? — G.L., Norwood, W.Va.

A. It depends on the circumstances. If she is working, a girl in her late teens may well want to end a date by 10 o'clock on week nights, by 12 on week ends and later on special occasions.

Any time in the 20s is acceptable for steady dating.

Q. I am a 17-year-old boy and would like to break the habit of smoking. Also, my girl friend, 15, seems to have more fun with other boys than she does with me. Can you tell me what's wrong? — T.R., Stamps, Ark.

A. Psychiatrists say that excessive smoking is a sign of insecurity. Have a talk with your school counselor on what seems to be wrong with you — perhaps it is your grooming, your manners, things of which you may not be conscious yourself.

Cultivate your hobbies and outside interests and learn life's graceful talents. Then smoking will not seem so important to you and you will find that girls will be more interested in you.

Spiced Gift Fruits

Here are four ways to turn plain (jars of canned fruit) into fancy (Christmas presents). Secret: some easy kitchen magic Troubled over certain names on your Christmas gift list — the kind neighbor, the friend who "has everything"? A gift of food — especially food you have made — can be the answer. Here are four examples, each delicious and so easy. (Just open jars of fruit, add flavor accents, replace the caps.) "Dressed up" with holly, ribbon, tiny ornaments, they make festive gifts indeed.

CLARET PRUNES

- 1 jar (approx. 1 lb.) stewed prunes
- ⅔ cup claret wine
- ⅓ cup prune liquid
- ¼ cup brown sugar
- ¼ teaspoon powdered cinnamon
- ⅛ teaspoon powdered allspice
- 6 whole cloves

Remove lid from jar; set lid aside. Drain liquid from prunes; save liquid. Place wine, prune liquid, sugar and spices in a saucepan. Cook, stirring occasionally, until mixture comes to a boil. Reduce heat and cook gently for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and cool slightly before pouring over prunes. Recap jar tightly. Store in refrigerator until ready to use.

HOLIDAY APPLESAUCE

- 1 jar (approx. 1 lb.) applesauce
- Few drops green vegetable food coloring
- ½ teaspoon mint extract
- 6 maraschino cherries, chopped

Remove cap from jar. Add green coloring (enough to get color desired) and stir into applesauce. Add mint extract; stir in thoroughly. Add chopped cherries; stir through applesauce. Recap jar and store in refrigerator until ready to use.

PEAR CHUTNEY

- 1 small onion, chopped
- 1 medium apple, peeled and chopped
- 2 tablespoons crystallized ginger
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon mustard seeds
- ⅓ cup cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- ½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 3 whole cloves
- ¼ cup seedless raisins
- 1 jar (1 lb., 4 oz.) whole pears

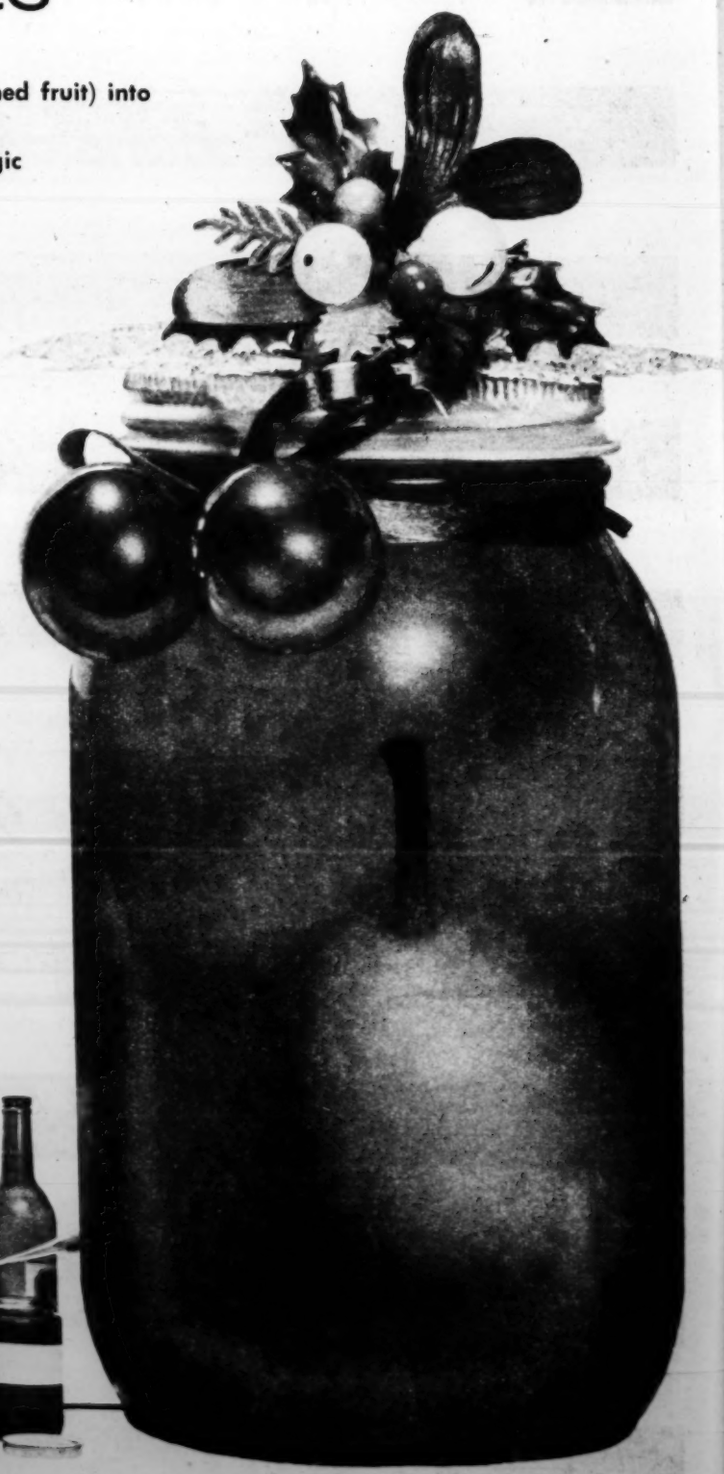
Peel onion; chop fine. Peel apple; chop. Cut ginger into small pieces. Mix together onions, apple, ginger, salt, mustard seeds, vinegar, lemon juice, sugar, cloves, raisins. Slowly bring mixture to a boil, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat; cook gently for 25 minutes or until mixture thickens. Meanwhile, remove cap from jar and drain liquid from pears. Core pears; cut into small pieces. Add pears to mixture; cook 5 minutes longer. Pack hot in original glass container. Recap tightly. Store in refrigerator.

GINGER PEARS

- 1 jar (1 lb., 4 oz.) pears
- ¾ cup white sugar
- ½ cup brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- ⅓ cup pear liquid
- 1 teaspoon powdered ginger
- 1 small lemon

Remove cap from jar; put cap aside. Drain liquid from pears; save liquid. Mix sugars, lemon juice, pear liquid and ginger in a saucepan. Cut lemon into thin slices; add. Cook, stirring constantly, until sugar is dissolved. Bring to a boil; boil gently 12 minutes. Remove lemon slices from sirup. Cool sirup slightly; pour over pears in jar. Recap tightly. Cool. Store in refrigerator until ready to use.

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN



KITCHEN HINT

A new opener for vapor-vacuum jars is inserted under the cap and turned like a key. The cap then pops off without damage. Incidentally, the jar's contents become perishable once the original seal is broken. Thereafter, they should be eaten within a reasonable time — not stored away.

ALL-AMERICA TEAM

These five cagers, 50 sports editors and writers predict, will be the nation's best this season

TOM HEINSOHN
HOLY CROSS

BILL RUSSELL
SAN FRANCISCO

parade 55-56 BASKETBALL FORECAST

These three stars will shine brightest during the 1955-'56 basketball season: Tom Heinsohn, Robin Freeman, Bill Russell.

These five teams will be the best in the nation: Iowa, Kentucky, San Francisco, Holy Cross and Illinois.

That's the expert opinion of the sports editors and writers on the 50 newspapers in the U.S. and Hawaii which now distribute PARADE. Polled as the season was getting underway, the experts scrambled out on a collective limb to pick an All-America and the best team in the nation.

Center for the "dream team" is Bill Russell, tricky 6'10" star of the San Francisco team that was rated the country's best last year. The forwards: Joe Holup, 6'6" high-scorer from George Washington, and 6'7" Tom Heinsohn (right) of Holy Cross. Guards: Rod Hundley, 6'4" scoring whiz from West Virginia, and Robin Freeman, Ohio State's 5'11" throwback to the days when basketball players could stop baskets as well as score them.

Holup and Hundley barely made the team, just beating out a flock of other stars: flashy Sihugo Green (Duquesne), Art Bunte (Utah), Carl "Sugar" Cain (Iowa), Julius McCoy (Michigan State), Jerry Mallett (Baylor), Jerry Bird (Kentucky), Wade Halbrook (Oregon State), Darrell Floyd (Furman).

Region by region, here's how the basketball picture looks to the experts:

East: Holy Cross, with Heinsohn at the controls, should plough through its regional foes — and possibly its full schedule — without a loss. Fordham is bristling with talented sophomores, who went undefeated as freshmen last year. Green will keep Duquesne's foes in a ferment, but the Dukes are not likely to retain their National Invitation championship. Other strong clubs: La Salle, Seton Hall, Connecticut, Boston University.

South: Adolph Rupp's "po' li'l boys" from Kentucky again should be the terror of their Southern neighbors and Yankee visitors alike. A veteran-studded Alabama team, however, might give the Wildcats a stiff fight for the Southeastern Conference crown. Other Southern strongboys are Maryland, George Washington, West Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina State, Richmond and Furman.

Midwest: The "I's" have it here: Iowa, Illinois, Indiana. Iowa has two sparkplugs in Cain and center Bill Logan. Illinois will look to George Bonsalle and Paul Judson. Indiana has a rich crop of sophomores. Others to watch: Dayton (with Bill Uhl at center), Bradley and Kansas.

Southwest: The big guns are Texas Tech, with Jim Reed and Carl Ince; Texas Western, led by Ned Moore; Hardin-Simmons, Rice and Southern Methodist.

Rocky Mountains: The top dog should be Utah, a strong candidate for a national championship. Brigham Young, Wyoming and Utah State all figure to be troublesome.

Far West: With Russell and K. C. Jones back, San Francisco is in a strong position to win the NCAA championship again. Other stickouts are UCLA, Southern California and Oregon State. ■

The experts tell how to make basketball better

"Shoot the referees."

That pointed suggestion from the Boston Post's Will Cloney sums up — in slightly exaggerated fashion — what most of the editors and writers replied when PARADE asked what could be done to make basketball more exciting.

"Cut out the incessant whistle blowing," wrote Henry J. McCormick of the Wisconsin State Journal. "There are too many personal fouls in the game today," echoed James C. Fraser of the Evansville Courier and Press. There'd be less fouls, most editors agreed, if the rules were more realistic on body contact, almost impossible to prevent in situations like the pick-off play (in which the offense tries to lure a defending player into running against another man). Another way to hush the whistle, suggested Jack Clarke of the Chicago Sun-Times and other writers, would be to relax the calling of unimportant back-court fouls. "Give the game back to the players," concluded J. D. Kailer of the Albuquerque Journal.

A familiar cry — "bring back the center jump" — was heard in the poll. Jumping for the ball after each basket would help the defense and slow down the game, said some of the editors. And, added Frank Woolever of the Syracuse Herald-American, "it would restore the value of the points scored."

Pro-basketball rules were prescribed for the college game by a few editors. In pro ball the offense must shoot within 24 seconds after receiving the ball, and the teams are allowed only six fouls each during a period.

There was some dissatisfaction with the present college foul rule — giving a man an extra shot if he misses the first one. "Go back to the old system — one shot and done," said Dave DeLong of the Allentown Call-Chronicle.

There were a number of individual suggestions. "Add a third official who would cover action under the basket during fast breaks," suggested Abe Chanin of the Tucson Star. "Elevate the basket to 12 feet (present height is 10)," wrote Ed Shugrue of the Bridgeport Post.

A stout minority of the editors, however, felt there was too much tinkering already with the rules. "Get the game standardized," said Craig Stolze of the Sioux Falls Argus-Leader. With all the rule changing recently, he declared, "the fans don't recognize it from December to December." Added Allen Upton of the Peoria Journal-Star: "I think I like basketball just as it is." ■

Why Catholics Believe As They Do

People on the outside often wonder why Catholics keep "running" to church.

And many of them erroneously conclude that this devotion is prompted by fear rather than faith, and by a sense of obligation rather than a spirit of piety and zeal.

"Catholics," they have heard it said, "go to church because they are obliged to do so. The priests keep telling them it is a sin if they don't... that they risk eternal damnation if they don't obey the Church. Catholicism is a religion of fear."

It may be possible to "fool all of the people some of the time." But is it not unbelievable that literally billions of people could have been deceived over a period of nearly 2,000 years? Could Catholicism have held the loyalty of eminent philosophers, scientists and other intellectuals down through the centuries if all it offered was a doctrine of fear and superstition?

No, your Catholic neighbor does not go to Mass and Confession and participate in other religious devotions merely because of an obligation imposed by the Church. It is, he believes, an obligation imposed upon him by God; and it isn't fear, but the desire to serve God that prompts his religious life.

Religion to a Catholic is not merely a worthy and virtuous activity. It is an absolute duty. It is, we believe, the means provided by God for the fulfillment of the God-given purpose of our lives. It is the channel through which we acknowledge our dependence upon God, and by means of which we give expression to our love, faith and gratitude.

Catholics believe further that we must honor God in the way revealed through his true Son, Jesus Christ, Who commanded that we "... hear the Church." We believe that Christ established the Catholic Church and that it bears all the distinguishing marks which Christ said His Church would bear. We accept the teachings of the Catholic Church, therefore, because we believe that it is Christ's Church. It isn't fear or superstition that impels us to do this, but clear historical fact and our own reason and intelligence.

If you would like to know all about the basic Catholic beliefs... and the solid reasons behind them ... write today for our free pamphlet. It will be sent in a plain wrapper and nobody will call on you. Nearly two million people have written in for pamphlets like this... and found enrichment for their spiritual lives. Write today for Pamphlet No. PR-10.

HOLLYWOOD'S NEW FACES

This fresh talent is the studios' hope to replace aging stars and beat rising costs

by LLOYD SHEARER PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

HOLLYWOOD.

One of the film industry's top problems always has been the development of new stars and personalities. For years the studios neglected the problem and made movies with old standbys: Clark Gable, Betty Grable, Rita Hayworth, Joan Crawford, Cary Grant. Result: They're caught in a squeeze.

Few newcomers can carry a big-budget picture — and most of today's VistaVision and Cinemascope pictures require heavy investment. But the established stars, who can attract the customers, are making tremendous profit-sharing demands. Some even have formed their own independent production companies.

Recently, three bright new stars — Suzan Ball, James Dean and Robert Francis — died within 30 days. All of which points up that the studios are suffering from an acute star shortage. According to producer-director Otto Preminger, there's only one solution: "New stars must be built in a hurry. They did it at Universal with Tony Curtis, Jeff Chandler and Rock Hudson. But at most places they did not." Now, with at least a dozen top personalities reaching retirement age, the studios must replace them or risk a box-office collapse by playing stars who have lost their sex appeal.

For several film companies, the answer has been to make stars of newcomers in their very first films. A case in point is Shirley MacLaine, the blue-eyed, red-haired Virginian who graces PARADE's cover. Shirley plays the lead in Alfred Hitchcock's recently released The Trouble with Harry.

Tomorrow's stars: imports

Shirley's is a Cinderella story. She was a specialty dancer and understudy to star Carol Haney in the Broadway hit musical, The Pajama Game, when, on the third night of the run, Carol fractured her ankle. Shirley was pressed into the lead. In the audience, fascinated, sat Paramount producer Hal Wallis. He went backstage and signed Shirley to a contract.

Like Shirley, Carol Ohmart, a 26-year-old redhead from Salt Lake City whose 36-25-35 proportions won her the Miss Utah title in 1946, was discovered while pinch-hitting for the lead — in the Broadway musical, Kismet. A Hollywood agent, Ned Marin, brought her to Paramount and producer-director Michael Curtiz selected her to star in her first picture, The Scarlet Hour.

"We hope to prove that she's a great dramatic actress in her first picture," says Don Hartman, Paramount production chief. "I think we've got a good chance with her and with Shirley MacLaine and a new tenor we've named Oreste. He stars in The Vagabond King and I've never heard a better voice."

Over at 20th Century-Fox there's been a female shortage since the de-

and home-grown Cinderellas

parture of Betty Grable, June Haver, Mitzi Gaynor, Gene Tierney and Marilyn Monroe. Now the publicity boys are going all out on Dana Wynter, Joan Collins and Shirley Jones. Which of these beauties will make the grade remains to be seen; at least the studio is willing to gamble.

Shirley Jones' career has been meteoric. In 1953 she went from Smithton, Pa. (pop. 800), to New York on a vacation and looked up agent Gus Schirmer on advice of her voice coach. Schirmer took her to sing for Rodgers and Hammerstein, who placed her in a couple of chorus roles, then picked her for Laurey in the film Oklahoma! And that led Darryl Zanuck to give her the lead in Carousel.

Sexy Joan, Lady Dana

Joan Collins and Dana Wynter are both Londoners. Joan had played in about 10 English pictures before Warner Brothers borrowed her for Land of the Pharaohs. Then Darryl Zanuck bought her contract and cast her in The Virgin Queen and The Girl in the Red Velvet Swing. Dana is termed "more the lady type." Daughter of a doctor, she studied medicine briefly, then decided on a stage career. She came to New York in 1953, and played a series of TV roles. After her work in The Body Snatchers, Fox signed her for The View from Pompey's Head.

MGM, drastically hit by the exodus of top names, is nurturing the talents of Roger Moore, an English actor who plays opposite Lana Turner in Diane; Liliane Montevecchi, a former member of the Ballet de Paris who has a dancing-comedy role in Meet Me in Las Vegas; Jeff Richards, after five years of bit roles a star in the adventure film, The Marauders, and Irene Papas, the first Greek actress signed to a long-term contract and starring opposite James Cagney in her first MGM picture, Tribute to a Bad Man.

At Warner Brothers, the build-up is tied in with TV. Jack Webb was introduced in a movie Dragnet. Liberace is starring in the recently released Sincerely Yours. Ed Sullivan is to appear in his Toast of the Town, and Eve Arden has finished Our Miss Brooks.

"When you offer a television star, at least you've got some degree of audience acceptance," one Warner executive says. "With a brand-new actor, all you've got is publicity and a prayer." Most of Hollywood these days is in a praying mood. ■

ORESTE (he dropped his last name, Kirkop), a Malta-born tenor, is 28 and Hollywood's hope to replace the fading Mario Lanza.

DANA WYNTER left London because "they won't give you a chance." Born Dagmar, she pronounces her new first name Dah-na.

ROGER MOORE, 27, first appeared in Interrupted Melody. London-born, son of a bobby, Roger attended Royal Academy Art School.

Pepsi-Cola refreshes without filling

HAPPIEST SEASON of the year! Season of friendly visits, of family reunions, of hearty hospitality.

And happier than ever this year for the modern hostess, because hospitality is no longer the burden it used to be.

It no longer means the old endless number of heavy, elaborate dishes, hard to prepare. Today's figure-conscious people prefer lighter, less filling food and drink.

Including Pepsi-Cola, now more popular than ever because, in keeping with modern taste, today's Pepsi is reduced in calories, never heavy, never too sweet.

Write down plenty of Pepsi, the modern, light refreshment, on this holiday's shopping list. It refreshes without filling.

Believe us—it isn't easy to impress a test driver!

So—we're tremendously proud to report that the '56 Pontiac has these thrill-wise experts cheering in a really big way.

What's set them buzzing is that all-new partnership, the great "General Motors First" combining:

Pontiac's new, big-bore, Strato-Streak V-8 with the terrific thrust of 227 blazing horsepower.

General Motors' new, fluid-flow Strato-Flight Hydra-Matic that gentles this mighty "go" to smoothness beyond belief.*

You don't need a test track to prove that here is the most wonderful lift of a lifetime for everyone in love with great performance.

Traffic will tell you. Here's "stop-and-go" response as fast as your thoughts. A hill will help. High or low, it's left behind without a sign of effort. And passing definitely pins it down. Gun it and instant, flashing power sweeps you smoothly by. No drag, no lag—just safe and certain "go"!

A few miles of this and you'll be ready to join the club. For this, you'll discover, is living as you have never lived on wheels before!

To be sure, there's plenty more to charm you. The safety of big new brakes. The security of a steady new ride and surefooted cornering. Smart new beauty and luxury.

But, above everything, it's that fabulous new "go" that gets you!

Come in and drive a Pontiac for a glorious double thrill. There'll be pride in your heart, a torrent at your toe-tip. What more could anyone want?

*An extra cost option.

The sulky has a spring seat. Braces for pedals, which turn rear wheels, extend down from shafts.

TOYS OF THE TIMES

They Reflect Youngsters' Easy Familiarity With Scientific Marvels

Tricycle wrecker has a hoist, its chain raised and lowered by a hand-operated crank on the boom. A red warning light on front fender gives note of traffic tie-up when wrecker is at work. Tires are heavy duty.

The tractor's crank case is inclosed, its imitation motor parts displayed. For warmer days, the operator is protected from the sun by a canopy.

Pilot is surrounded by struts of helicopter, which is guided by the rear wheel. Curved structural tubing gives craft a sleek outline.

By JOHN STIPE of the PICTURES Staff

WHEN HORSE-DRAWN WAGONS were familiar features of the town and countryside, their diminutive counterparts were hauled, pushed and coasted by small boys and girls everywhere. Today, most ridable toys illustrate the acceptance of scientific marvels as commonplace. Toys, in their various ways, are reflections of their times.

Recently, the President's Cabinet traveled by helicopter to a meeting. On the backyard level, youngsters can take flights of fancy in a three-wheeled helicopter with a non-cutting prop. For the very young sound barrier-breaker, a supersonic jet has built-in reflectors to simulate exhaust flames. The small-fry police officer can be mounted on a patrol cycle carrying the authority of simulated radar. The tricycle is rigged as a wrecker, can tow away illegal parkers or untangle accidents. Yet, for all the trend towards streamlining, tractors are among the best sellers of the you-ride-it toys, and the little red wagon is still going strong.

While the exteriors of the small models now on the market have flowing lines, outside exhaust headers, body finishes in brilliant hues, other features to catch a youngster's eye, few sales pitches can be made on improvement in stepped-up horsepower or in fuel saving. Power, in most of the toys built to ride in, is still geared to the pedal pumping capacity of the moppet in the driver's seat.

Motor bike has trainer wheels which can be removed after its operator has acquired balance. The toy has a windshield and spare tire. The racy exhaust pipe is painted on.

Speed-o-matic gear is a feature of yellow racer. Black headers of outside exhaust stand out against body paint. Wheels of the car are uncovered like those of grownups' racers.

Sleek jet plane has dart-shaped body styling. Jet tubes inclose the rear wheels. Lines of seat blend into tail of the craft.

PARK OF GIANT TREES

Missouri Area Has Five of Nation's Champion Hardwoods

SHELLBARK HICKORY

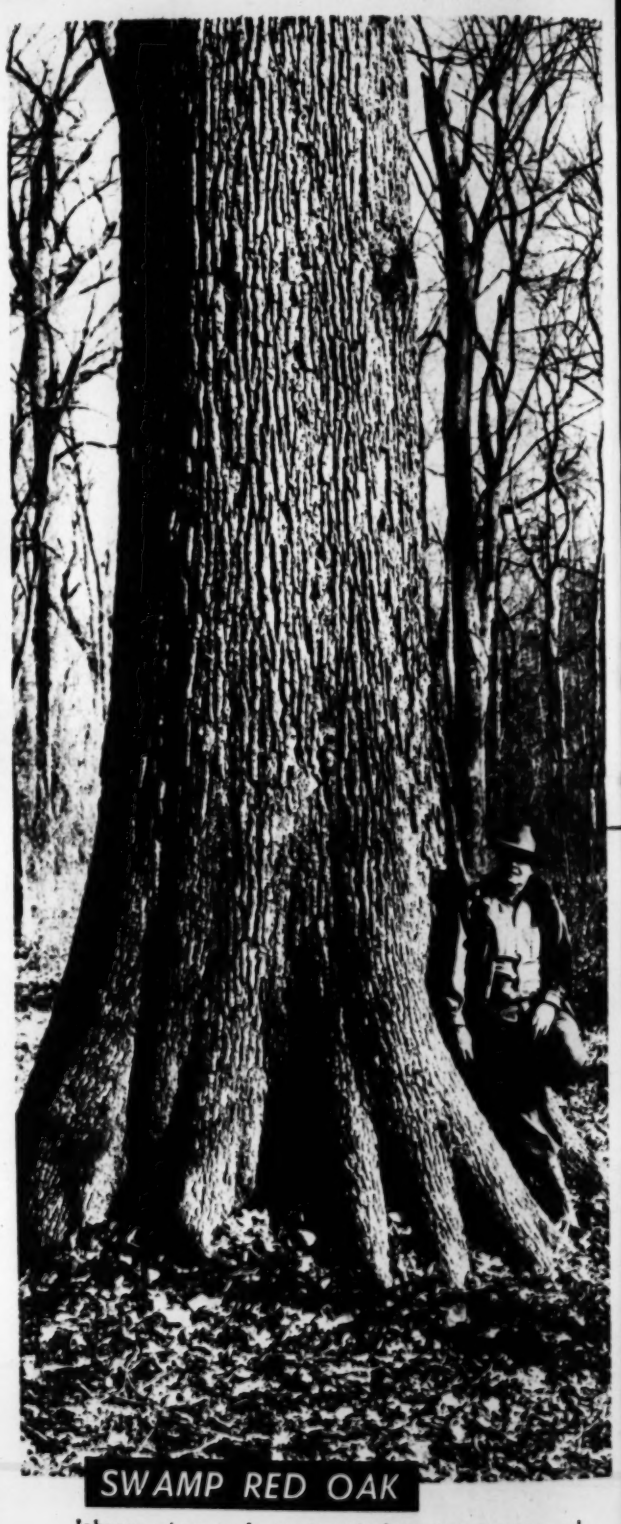
Man is dwarfed by towering trees in Missouri's Big Oak Tree State Park. Height of the forest giants is more apparent in winter when tops are not obscured by foliage of lower branches. In center is country's largest shellbark hickory (different from shagbark); its trunk is 13 feet in circumference. It is 128 feet tall, has 74-foot spread. A tree's bigness is determined by dimensions of height, spread of crown, circumference of stem or trunk at point four and one-half feet above ground.

AMERICAN ELM

Big American elm, 21 feet 5 inches in circumference, is examined by Park Superintendent Narvel (Bob) Johnson and his grandson. Creeper vine growing up the huge trunk is big as a young tree itself. Elm's hollow upper branches contain six raccoon dens.

BALD CYPRESS

Chest-high circumference of bald cypress is measured at 21 feet 9½ inches. Park area was once a swampland, which accounts for its many cypress trees.



SWAMP RED OAK

Johnson gives scale to size of champion swamp red oak, which stretches 104 feet in air, has circumference of 19 feet 5 inches. An important timber species, this type tree has been heavily harvested.

By ROBERT E. HANNON of the PICTURES Staff

MISSOURI RANKS HIGH among states with "championship" trees. On a list of the country's largest trees published by the American Forestry Association, Missouri is credited with having 16 champions. Five of them are located in one of the state's least visited parks—aptly named Big Oak Tree State Park in the bootheel of Southeast Missouri. The others are scattered throughout the state.

Missouri's champion of champions, the giant bur oak for which the park was named, was cut down a year ago after it had succumbed to the elements at the venerable age of 334 years. But a neighbor of the departed monarch, almost as large, has been nominated to succeed it as king of the country's bur oaks. Other national champions in the park are a swamp red oak, a mutabilis oak, a shellbark hickory and a possumhaw (holly).

Heart of Big Oak Park's 1007 acres is an 80-acre tract of virgin hardwood trees that stand as a reminder of the magnificent forests that once blanketed the bottomlands of the bootheel. Among the giants that tower skyward from the leaf-carpeted floor are 17 of different species that have trunks at least three feet in diameter. The park, 25 miles south of Charleston on Highway 118, was established in 1938 as the result of public clamor to save the mighty bur oak from threatened destruction by lumbermen.

HACKBERRY'S WITCHES' BROOMS

Curious growths in tops of some trees are witches' brooms in a hackberry (above), and mistletoe (right) in an elm. Witch's broom is an insect-caused gall that usually occurs in hackberry trees. Insect larvae injure a branch which, in growing new tissue, sends out a large number of shoots, making a cluster that has the appearance of an unruly broom. Mistletoe is a true parasite plant. Its seeds, deposited in crotches by birds, germinate and take root in tree. The green-leafed Christmas decoration is particularly partial to elm, birch, tupelo and sycamore trees; Southeast Missouri is about as far north as it grows.

MISTLETOE ON ELM

ONCE-CHAMPION OAK

Stump of erstwhile champion bur oak measures almost seven feet in diameter. Tree was 143 feet tall, had 114-foot spread, was 21 feet 4 inches in circumference. A sprout when the Pilgrims landed, it died after twice being struck by lightning.

POISON IVY

Even poison ivy grows large in the park. This rootlet-covered vine on big cottonwood is 13 inches around. Some huge trees escaped ax because they were too big to handle.

Members of Morning Etude Ensemble open the program with Sibelius' "Dear Land of Home," with Mrs. Henry Kemper, left, conducting. Three largest music clubs in St. Louis area are Morning Etude, in existence 60 years; Rubinstein, 72 years; Musical Research, 44 years old. In Eighth District there are 19 senior (adult) clubs, 32 junior clubs. Combined membership is about 600.

IN BEHALF OF MUSIC

St. Louis Clubs Among 5000 in Nation Boosting the Art in Its Classical Form

By CHARLES MENEES
of the PICTURES Staff

MANY WOMEN who feel the need to do something for the cause of serious music find their way into music clubs. If they don't care to perform at club meetings, they at least get the feeling of constructively rubbing elbows with a great art.

At the club meetings there is usually an hour or so of live music. Piano pieces and vocal numbers predominate, range from works by obscure composers to those of the masters. The performers, who include teachers and former professionals, are mostly amateurs. Politely they are listened to and applauded. The esthetics over, refreshments are served.

Music clubs have objectives other than meetings. Many are quick to defend just about anything musical. They encourage young musicians, present them in recitals, award them scholarships. They help composers get their works performed, sometimes commission compositions. In general, they spread the gospel of music appreciation.

Most of the country's music clubs belong to a national federation. This organization has a half-million members championing music at the grass roots level in every state and the District of Columbia. It has grown to some 5000 separate clubs from a humble beginning in 1893. That year, in connection with the Columbian Exposition in Chicago, Mrs. Theodore Thomas invited leaders of the nation's music clubs to hold their first national assembly. That was the beginning of what, five years later, became the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Missouri's 41 senior clubs, 130 junior clubs and four student groups are divided into nine districts. Clubs in metropolitan St. Louis, Farmington, Festus and Hannibal are in the Eighth District. Every fall clubs of this district hold a "concert tea." This year the event was held at the home of a club member, Mrs. Stuart Chambers, 7 Hortense place. These photos were taken during the afternoon's program.

Seriousness of the music is matched by expressions of audience members in photos above and below. Seated in front row (above) is only man who was in audience (three others were on the program). He is Richard Gebhard, who makes it a point to attend most of the community's musical events. He was a violinist in the St. Louis Symphony some 40 years ago.

The hostess, Mrs. Stuart Chambers, pours. She is a teacher of voice, a Musical Research Club member. Assisting her at left is Mrs. H. P. Stellwagen, vocal coach, piano accompanist and a past president of Musical Research. Missouri state president is Mrs. John W. Mueller of St. Louis; another St. Louisan, Mrs. Fred A. Kennedy, is Eighth District president.

Janice Zimmerman, junior club member who plays Chopin's "Fantasy Impromptu." Each junior club has as counselor an adult club member. Juniors, from ages 6 to 16, are presented in recitals at Baldwin Hall, 916 Olive street, once a month.

One of the vocal soloists, Mrs. John W. Meredith. She belongs to Musical Research Club, is soprano soloist at Maple Avenue Methodist Church. Most member-performers are pianists or singers. Morning Etude has string ensemble; three clubs have choral groups.

Club members chat with Baritone William Dees, one of the program's soloists. Individual clubs hold meetings twice a month between October and the middle of May. There are nominal annual dues—$8 for an active member, who is expected to perform on programs twice a year; $6 for associate members who just listen, help in other ways.

Miss Mayme Giessing, left, and Mrs. Julian P. Cayce, both of Farmington and members of Musical Research Club of St. Louis. Miss Giessing taught piano at Stephens College, Columbia, for 35 years. Festus group is known as Sonateer Choral Club; Hannibal's is called Evening Etude. Convention of all Missouri music clubs will be held in St. Louis next May.

BUSTLE ABOUT A BODICE

Actress' Neckline at Royal Presentation Perturbs London Newspaper

Actress Elizabeth Taylor curtsies as she is presented to the Duke of Edinburgh at the London premiere of a movie. Next in line is her husband, Michael Wilding. On his right is British Actress Jackie Lane. The plunging neckline of the dress worn by Miss Lane at the reception brought critical gasps from the London Daily Mirror, a newspaper not known for its conservatism. The Daily Mirror published the picture of Jackie Lane and her dress, which is shown in the photograph at right. It noted, while censuring entertainers for appearing before the royal family in low-cut gowns, that "the loose-laced bodice of her (Jackie Lane's) dress gaped open and downward into a startling revelation."

Actresses are presented to Queen Elizabeth II at a Royal Command film performance. The bare shoulder dresses worn at this performance also were criticized by the Daily Mirror. The Queen did not attend the function at which Jackie Lane wore her controversial attire.

LENINGRAD'S NEW SUBWAY

Seven-Mile Underground Has Eight Elaborately Decorated Stations

Train stop is lighted by a long row of chandeliers. The Russian radio reported that there are eight stations on the Leningrad line, which is a little less than seven miles long. Moscow has 38 miles of subways, according to the "Great Soviet Encyclopedia." New York City's subway system is 236 miles long, but portions are elevated.

Plainly dressed passengers ride in shining new cars. Metal bars and wide aisles are provided for rush-hour crowds of standees, an inevitable part of subway transportation everywhere. Car contains no advertising placards.
International News Photos

Elaborate arched concourse in a station of Leningrad's new subway is viewed by Russians strolling leisurely along the glistening stone floor. Decorated light standards, lined along the edges like an honor guard, seem to attract the most attention. Lavish underground railways are not new to Communist Russia. Moscow's system, with palatial stations, is one of the city's chief tourist attractions. Last month, the Soviet government cracked down on four leading architects for excessive use of ornamentation in buildings.

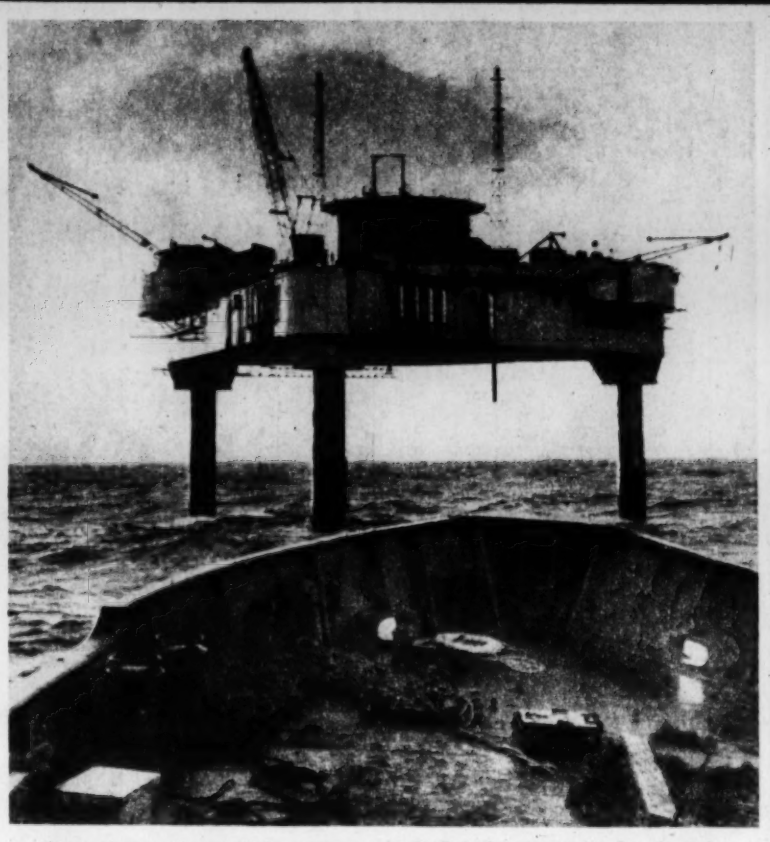
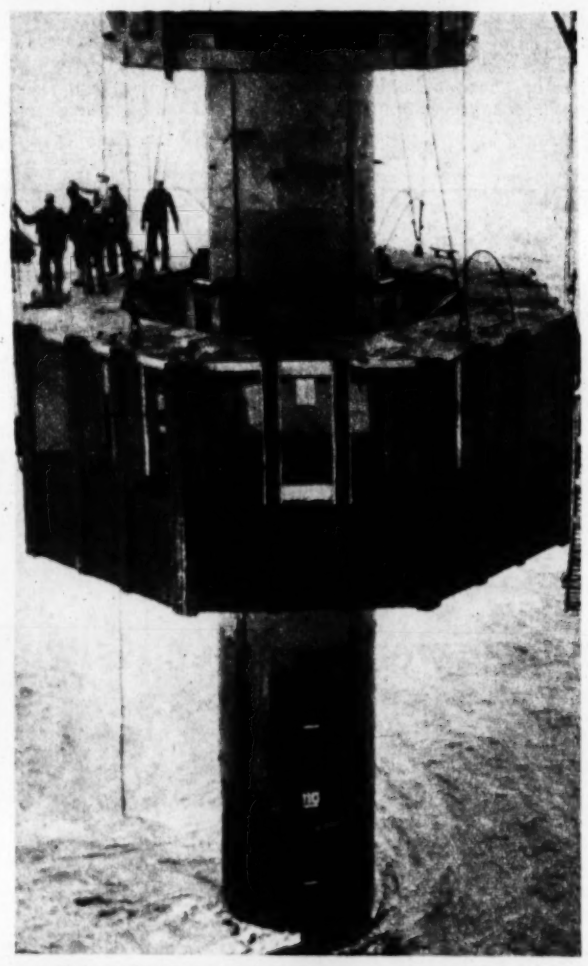
RADAR ISLAND RESCUE

Tug Takes Off Visitors Marooned for Week by High Seas



Viewed from bow of the rescue tug El Sol (foreground), the derrick-bedecked man-made radar island on which 37 visitors were marooned for a week by stormy weather stands on stilt-like legs high above Atlantic Ocean 100 miles off Cape Cod. The triangular platform is supported on 100-foot-high legs in 50 feet of water on Georges Bank.

Five men crowded into a cargo basket are lowered by derrick from the radar island to the pitching deck of the El Sol. Seas still are heavy after the week-long series of storms, one with hurricane velocity winds of more than 80 miles an hour. Most of the stranded visitors were Air Force officials making a final inspection of the installation, first of a chain to be erected as a radar-warning net.



Before the storms hit, crewmen work on 80-ton bumper, or fender, on one of the legs, designed to protect it against collision from a ship. Below, huge waves pound the bumper, which later broke loose and battered the leg, shaking the entire tower. Only one big wave hit the platform.

BLOCKED PUNT!

High Dive by U.C.L.A. Center Leads to Score

This photograph of a punt as it is blocked —a rare defensive coup in the modern offensive-minded gridiron sport—is one of the most dramatic pictures to come out of the 1955 football season. Made during the game between the University of California at Los Angeles and the College of the Pacific, it shows the precise moment that high-flying U.C.L.A. Center Jim Matheny blocked the kick off the toe of Don Cornell. Matheny eluded a block thrown by Ernie Lindo (lower right) and dove headlong into the path of the ball as Cornell punted from his own 10-yard line. U.C.L.A. Tackle Russ Hampton (72) slows his charge toward the kicker, and his teammate, Guard Esker Harris (67), falls after being knocked off balance by Pacific's Junior Reynosa (42), who continues downfield, unaware that the punt has been blocked. The ball bounded off Matheny's chest and rolled back into Pacific's end zone, where it was recovered by U.C.L.A. for its second touchdown in a 34-to-0 triumph.

Since The Jockey Club—guardian of American horse racing—was incorporated in 1894, it has experimented with various systems for identifying horses to prevent ringers (animals running under false names) from being raced. Now in general use is an identification card for each horse on which are photographs of the distinctive "chestnuts" or horny callosities on the inside of the legs. On right side of the identification record above are close-ups of the four chestnuts of a Thoroughbred, Prince John. The chestnuts are photographed to scale with a 35-millimeter camera, and used as are human fingerprints for identification. Other parts of Prince John's data sheet include a broadside photograph of the horse showing his name plate. A front view shows white blaze on his face. His name heads the list of condensed but complete information on card at lower left, followed by foal certificate number. Prince John's tattoo number, which has been indelibly fixed inside his lower lip, is given, and, in code, information on the horse's sex and markings. Last year, the Registry Office of The Jockey Club registered 8734 Thoroughbred horses.

POLITICAL SOUTH AMERICA

Continent Is Weak on Democracy, Military Usually Is Decisive Factor

COLOMBIA. Population: 12,000,000, with 68 per cent of European-Indian extraction. Illiteracy estimated at 37 per cent. Won independence from Spain in 1824. Intermittent civil war plagued country until 1903 when Panama, backed by the United States, seceded. A destructive but unsuccessful revolt swept Bogota in 1948, followed by five years of guerrilla warfare. Gustavo Rojas Pinilla, who seized power in an army coup in 1953, suppressed the guerrilla fighting. Country has been under a modified form of martial law since he took office. He has gradually tightened his rule.

ECUADOR. Population: 3,350,000, 60 per cent Indian. Illiteracy estimated at 60 per cent in 1948. Revolt against Spain was won in 1822. Until 1948, governmental history was largely one of revolutions and dictatorships. Galo Plaza, president from 1948 to 1952, instituted many political reforms and economic advances. If his successor, Jose Velasco Ibarra, also freely elected, serves out his term, it will establish a record for democratic stability in the country.

PERU. Population: 9,000,000, 46 per cent Indian. Illiteracy estimated at more than 50 per cent. Won independence from Spain in 1824. Government generally has been a dictatorship. In 1945, a freely elected president took office, only to be ousted in 1948 in a revolution. General Manuel A. Odria, leader of the rebellion, became president. He was unopposed for a six-year term in elections conducted in 1950.

BOLIVIA. Population: 3,100,000, more than half Indian. Illiteracy estimated at 80 per cent, highest in South America. Since winning independence from Spain in 1825, Bolivia has had more than 60 revolutions, 70 presidents and 11 constitutions; has lost territory to Chile, Brazil and Paraguay. Present president, Victor Paz Estenssoro, got most votes in 1951 election, but had to overthrow military junta to take office. Subsequently, the country's three major tin mining companies were nationalized.

PARAGUAY. Population: 1,500,000. Illiteracy estimated at 60 per cent. Became independent from Spain in 1811. In devastating war with Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, 1865-70, population was reduced from 1,300,000 to less than 300,000. Governments have been dictatorial or semidictatorial. General Alfredo Stroessner, present president, was elected without opposition last year after having led an army coup in which his predecessor was ousted.

CHILE. Population: 6,000,000, with 65 per cent of European-Indian extraction. Illiteracy estimated at 24 per cent. Gained complete independence from Spain in 1818. Has enjoyed long periods of political stability, marred only occasionally by revolutions. Country is governed by popularly elected president and two-house congress. Carlos Ibanez, elected president in 1952, was dictator from 1927 until overthrown in 1931. His present administration has been beset with difficulties, including trouble with congress and severe economic problems.

VENEZUELA. Population: 5,600,000, with 65 per cent of European-Indian extraction. Illiteracy was estimated at 60 per cent in 1949. Won independence from Spain in 1821. Governmental history has been largely one of dictatorships. A brief period of relative democracy started in 1935. However, in 1948 the army ousted the elected president, ruled with juntas until 1952 and then installed Marcos Perez Jimenez, the present dictator, as president.

THE GUIANAS. British Guiana, Surinam (Dutch Guiana) and French Guiana, with a combined population of 725,000, are the only parts of South America left in foreign hands.

BRAZIL. Population: 56,000,000. Illiteracy estimated at about 48 per cent. Became independent from Portugal as a monarchy in 1822. Monarchy was overthrown in 1889. From 1894 until 1930, a succession of elected presidents held office. Then, Getulio Vargas became president by revolt. He was overthrown in 1945, but was popularly elected in 1950. Last year, deposed by the army, he killed himself. He was succeeded by the vice president, Joao Cafe Jr. A month ago, Cafe suffered a heart attack and took a leave of absence. His successor, an acting president, was ousted by the army in a bloodless revolution. Army leaders said move was to insure inauguration next January 31 of Juscelino Kubitschek, who was elected last October. He is widely regarded as Vargas' political heir.

URUGUAY. Population: 2,500,000. Illiteracy estimated at 35 per cent. Revolted against Spain in 1811, but was conquered by Portuguese from Brazil, 1816-20. Rewon independence in 1825. After years of political intrigue, democratic and progressive tradition was established, flourishing after 1911. However, nation was ruled dictatorially from 1933 to 1938, when free elections were re-established. Since 1952, government has been by a nine-member commission patterned on the Swiss system.

ARGENTINA. Population: 18,400,000. Illiteracy estimated at 7 to 10 per cent, lowest in continent. Country achieved independence from Spain in 1816. A dictatorship from 1829 to 1852 provided first stable government. First constitutional president took office in 1862; first election with secret ballot was in 1916. Army revolt of 1943 gave Juan D. Peron his start. He emerged as strong man in 1945, was elected president in 1946 and remained in power as dictator until a military rebellion last September, led by Major General Eduardo Lonardi, who promised to restore freedoms to country. He was deposed last month by a group headed by Major General Pedro Eugenio Aramburu. His faction reportedly was fearful of right-wing influence in the Lonardi government and seized power to insure that aims of the anti-Peron revolt would be carried out as planned.

WHEN THE SOUTH AMERICAN NATIONS began to govern themselves after winning independence, each was much in the position of a passenger suddenly and without previous experience taking over the driver's seat of a bus. Spanish and Portuguese colonial administration left the continent barren of any pattern for democratic development.

The colonists and the native populations had been ruled completely by the two European powers. Even at the local level, there was no significant self government. As might be expected following such domination, democracy did not flourish. Even today, more than a century after colonial status was cast off, democracy is only an empty word for many South Americans.

Revolution, totalitarianism and governmental instability plague the continent. Generally, the stable regimes are dictatorships. When the people do express their will at the polls, carrying it out frequently is contingent on the whims of the most powerful military clique.

Fortunately, there are exceptions. Democracy thrives in tiny Uruguay. Chile has had a stable and usually democratic government for many years.

But most countries are ruled either directly or indirectly by tight military groups called juntas. The juntas are a natural legacy of the old colonial rule. When the nations became independent, there was no great mass movement toward democratic government; yet there had to be government. Into this situation moved the military, generally aligned with the few wealthy landowners.

For the most part, landholdings still are highly concentrated. In Peru, for example, virtually all land of any value is owned by a few families. Seven per cent of Chile's population owns most of the productive land, while the bulk of Argentina's rich agricultural area is held by a few thousand families.

Usually those who do not own land or live in metropolitan centers are extremely poor. Their living standards are among the lowest in the world, and they are largely illiterate. These conditions do not foster mass desire for self government.

Growth of democracy also is handicapped by the Latin American tendency to rally to persons rather than causes. Thus, political parties usually are centered on individuals not issues. Besides the danger that a political leader will misuse his personal following, the development of meaningful parties is hampered.

Another hardly helpful factor in the years of governmental development in South America was intervention both open and under cover by such powers as Britain, United States, Spain and Germany as well as by some South American countries themselves.

Although all 10 of the independent nations in South America nominally are constitutional republics, the South American concept of a constitution often is quite different from that held in the United States. Here, the Constitution is regarded as the supreme law of the land to which the government must adhere in its functions. In South America, a constitution may merely represent the ideas of how the government should operate, given ideal conditions.

In the field of civil liberties, there is also a basic difference between the South American outlook, where they generally are considered grants from the government which may be withdrawn, and the Western democratic conviction that such liberties are the inherent human rights of the individual.

What of the future? Some close observers pessimistically hold that South America is no further along the road toward democracy than it was a century ago. Others, pointing to Chile and Uruguay, contend that real progress has been made. They bolster their argument by saying that, despite the clouds cast by Peron and Vargas, Argentina and Brazil in the main have followed democratic paths for much of this century.

Vegetable Soup—Quantity Helps Quality

1. Miss Kane places the soup meat in the boiling water, then adds the barley and cooks it slowly for about an hour.

2. Carrots are cut coarsely, as are the celery, onion and string beans. Cabbage is shredded, peas, lima beans and corn are left whole. They are added to meat-barley mixture.

3. Tomatoes (unstrained) and tomato puree are also added to the soup and cooking is continued. Salt and pepper are added.

By MERNA LAZIER

VEGETABLES OF EVERY KIND and size are suitable for soup. Miss Delphine Kane of University City prefers to make vegetable soup in a larger quantity than needed for one meal, the greater volume of ingredients seeming to improve the flavor. The remainder can be packed in cartons and kept in a deep freezer.

Miss Kane starts cooking the meat and barley in boiling water while the vegetables are being cleaned and cut to desired size. Carrots, onion, celery, cabbage, lima beans, peas, corn and string beans are added, and are simmered slowly until tender. Tomatoes and tomato puree are stirred in and cooking continued. About a half-hour before soup is finished, the potatoes and parsley are added. Seasoning is adjusted, to taste, at this time. By putting in vegetables in this order they will not be overcooked and colorless.

INGREDIENTS: Two pounds brisket soup meat, one gallon water, one-half cup barley, one medium onion, two to three large carrots, cup cut-up celery, three-fourths cup corn, cup peas, cup lima beans, two cups canned or fresh tomatoes, one large can tomato puree (No. 1½ size), one-fourth of a head of cabbage (shredded), one-fourth pound string beans, one cup diced potatoes (about two large), one-half cup chopped parsley. (Turnips and okra are also very good in soup.) Salt and pepper to taste.

4. Potatoes are diced and the parsley snipped with scissors. They are put in for the last half-hour of cooking.

5. Soup for the evening meal is served from a tureen, remainder is stored in tightly closed containers placed in deep freeze. Crisp crackers are the customary accompaniment. Salad and dessert would complete the meal.

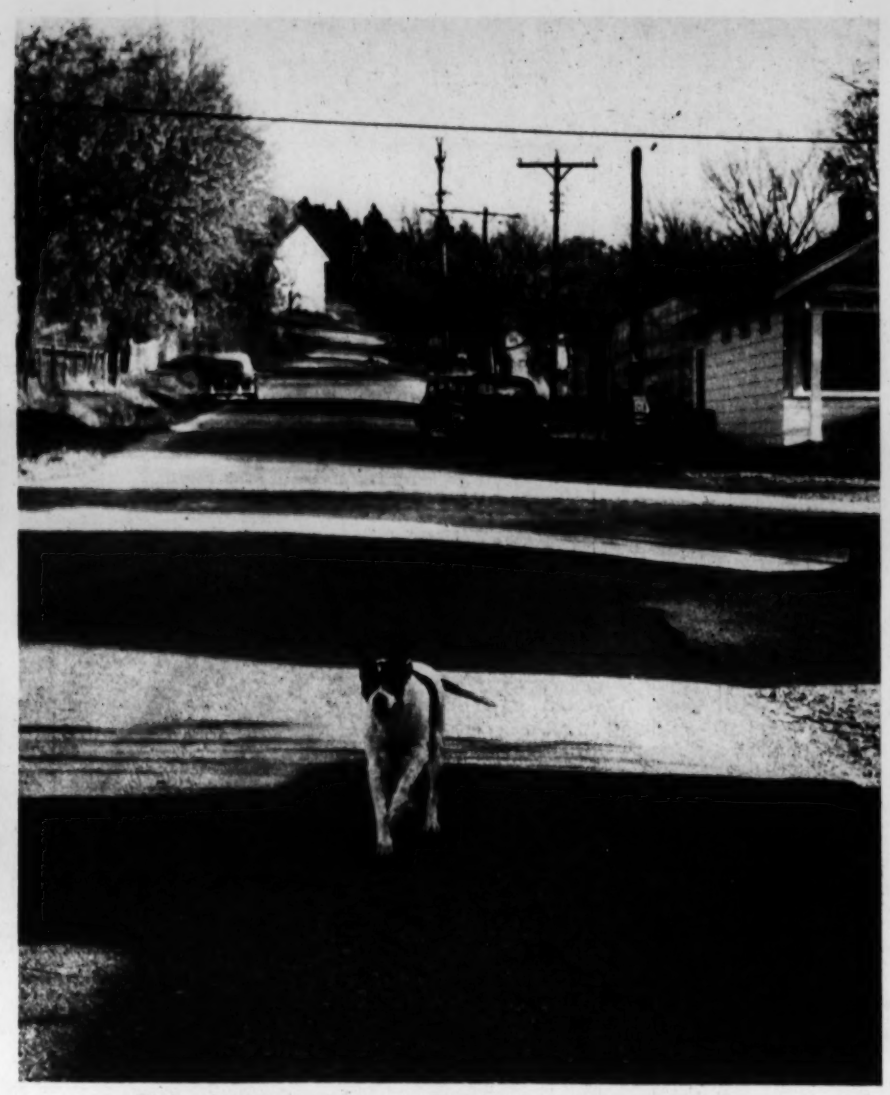
Pointer in Missouri Town Hears Train, Trots to Crossing, Takes Home Quarry

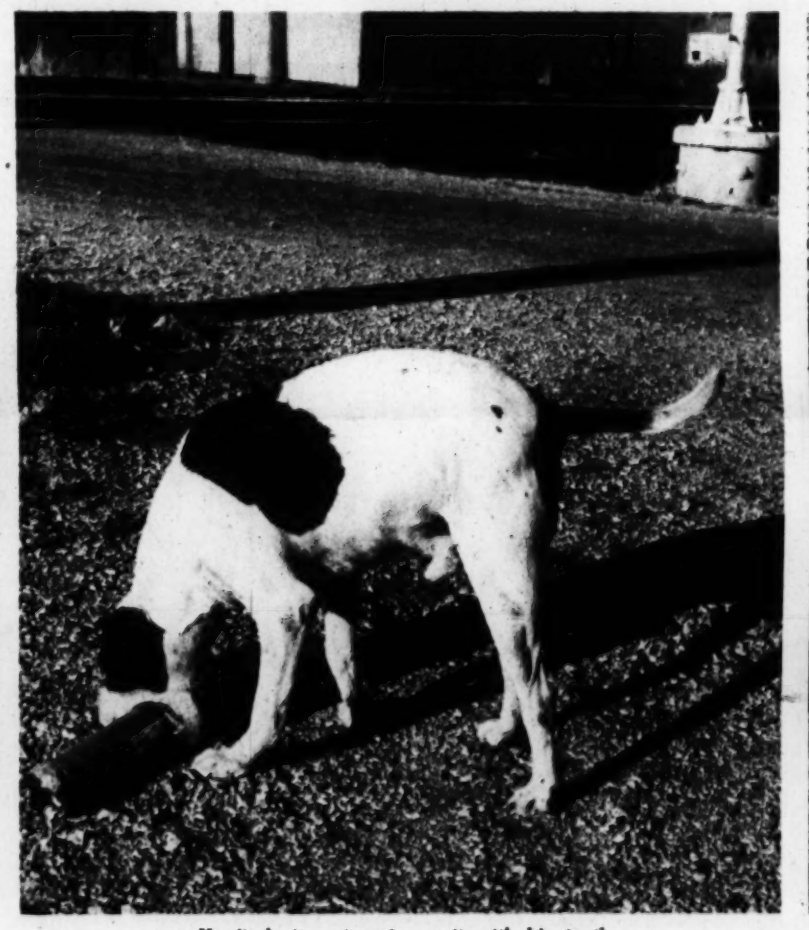
As Missouri Pacific passenger train speeds through Victoria (in Jefferson County about four miles southeast of Hillsboro), rolled newspaper is shown in air after being tossed from baggage car.

Fala, without instruction of any kind, is already on his way. His owner, Mrs. Lulu M. Pinson, lets him out door of general store she has operated alone since her husband died last September.

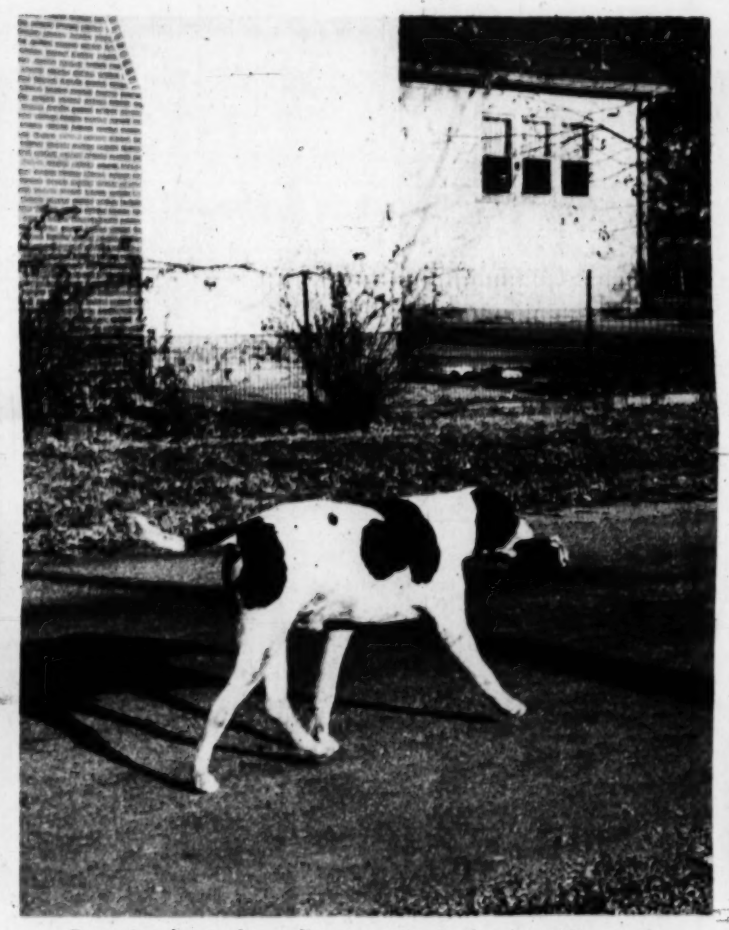


With eyes front and ears up, Fala heads up the street for the railroad crossing. The trip from the store (partly visible at upper right) is a short one—a little over a block.

Fala sniffs along tracks for his newspaper.



He finds it, gets grip on it with his teeth.



Returning home, he walks possessively down middle of street.

AT A MINUTE OR SO after 3 o'clock every weekday afternoon a 14-year-old pointer at Victoria, Missouri, pricks up his ears. The dog's sensitive hearing has caught the sound of an approaching train before it becomes audible to the town's 160 human inhabitants. So Fala—that's the dog's name—stretches, gets to his feet, and trots off to work as a newsboy. By the time Fala reaches the town's main railroad crossing the train has already whizzed away. But the dog knows that what he is after is on the ground somewhere nearby.

Without too much detective work he finds it—a wrapped copy of that day's Post-Dispatch. Getting a tight bite on the paper, Fala sets out for home and delivers it to his owner, Mrs. Lulu M. Pinson.

On Sunday Fala doesn't move a hair at train time. He knows that his owner's paper for that day has been delivered hours earlier by a two-legged paper boy. Fala, of course, is named after President Franklin D. Roosevelt's famous Scottie.

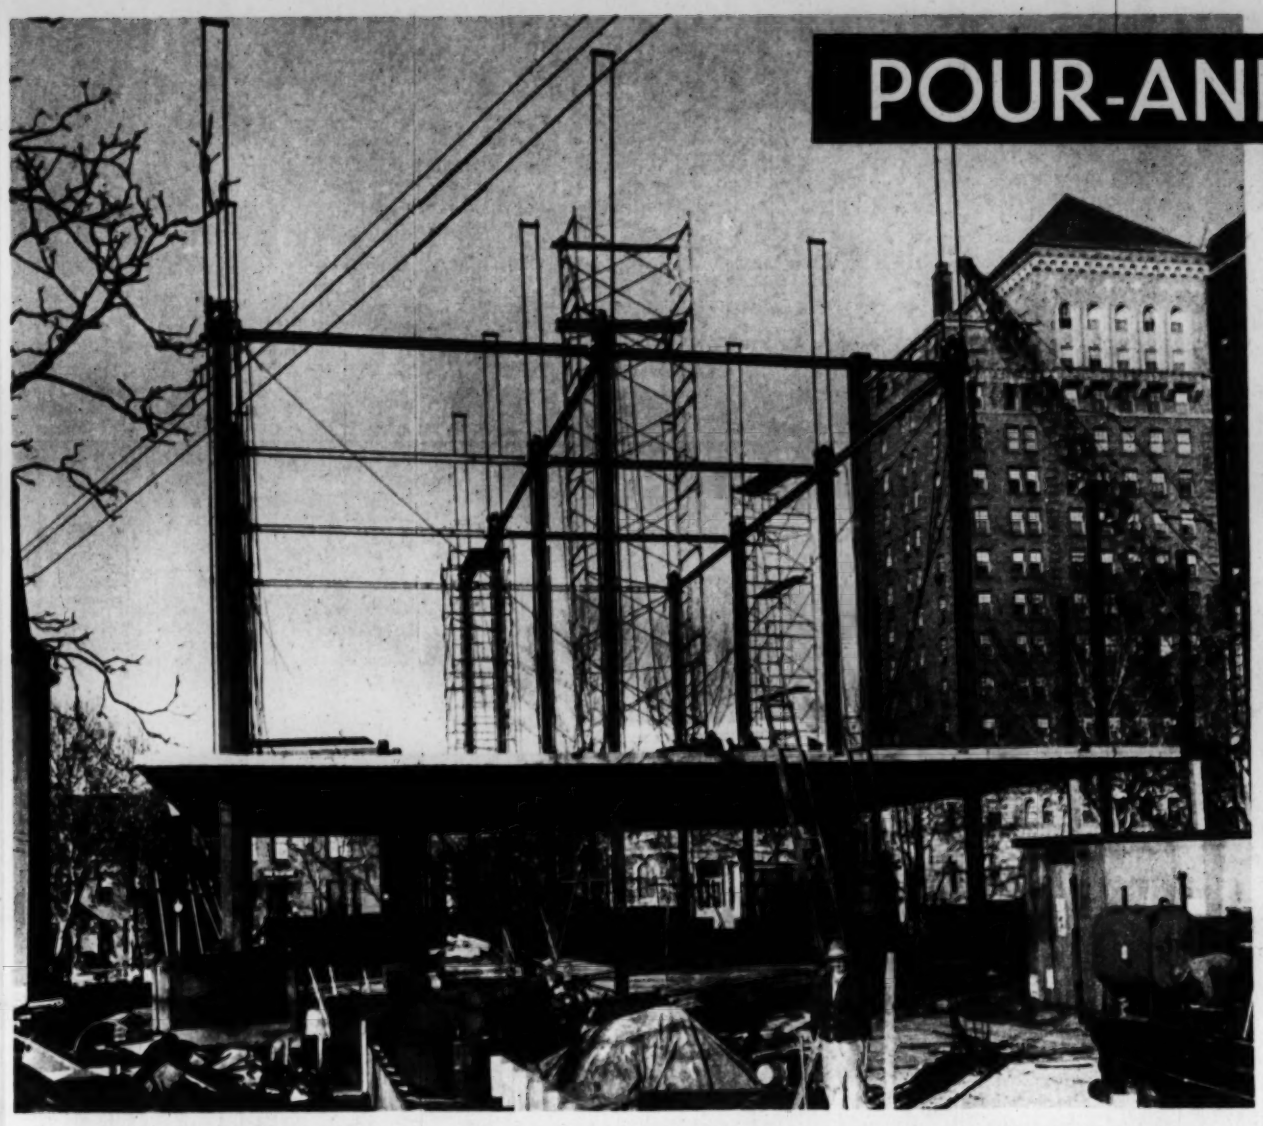
Photos by JACK GOULD of the PICTURES Staff

Upon reaching the front porch of Mrs. Pinson's store, Fala waits proudly for the door to be opened. He prefers to take paper inside before surrendering it.

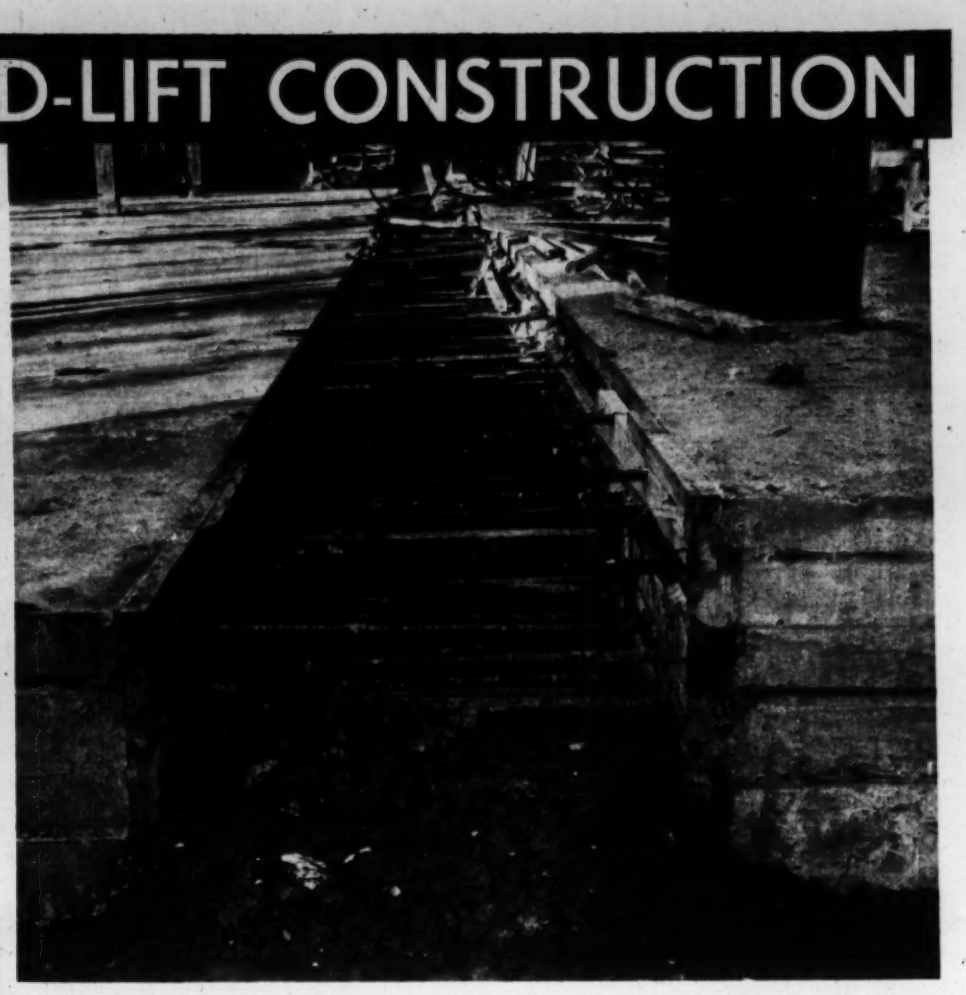
Mrs. Pinson lets her news courier inside. About 10 years ago, the late Mr. Pinson took the dog with him several times to pick up the paper. After several days he said "Go get paper," and Fala obeyed.

Fala always collects his reward. His preferences are a piece of candy, a chunk of ham or a slice of bread. Mission accomplished, Fala usually returns to bin under counter for a nap.

POUR-AND-LIFT CONSTRUCTION



Roof slab of building's west section on the way up. Slab has been halted temporarily. It measures 62 by 87 feet and weighs 325 tons, was formed at ground level on top of third-floor slab. Top of roof will be 40 feet, six inches above ground floor when in position. Horizontal beams between column tops are removed when slab is in place. Hydraulic jacks at the top of each of the 12 columns lift the slab into position.



Slabs for west and center sections are stacked like huge buckwheat cakes, ready for lifting. Roof slab for west part, left, already has been hoisted. Third floor will be raised next, then second floor. Slabs of the two sections will be joined when in position by pouring concrete over reinforcing bars, shown projecting from the slabs.

A METHOD OF CONSTRUCTION, originated in Texas after World War II, is being used in the St. Louis area for the first time on an insurance office building now in process of erection at 3750 Lindell boulevard. Called the "Lift Slab" process, the method consists of making the roof and upper floors with reinforced concrete at ground level and then lifting them into position.

In the customary procedure, reinforced concrete roofs and floors are made in place by using elaborate, temporary wooden forms in which the reinforcing bars are set and the concrete poured. Those favoring the new system say that both time and money are saved by eliminating the need for the complex forms.

With the Lift Slab method, permanent steel supporting columns are set in place, and the ground-level floor slab is poured. The second floor slab is formed directly on top of it, the third on top of that, and so on. Roof slab is laid on top of floor slabs. Paint-thin plastic coatings keep the slabs from sticking together.

At the time the slabs are made, steel collars are molded into them. A collar fits around each steel supporting column. A hydraulic jack, set on top of each column, is connected by two steel rods to each collar for lifting.

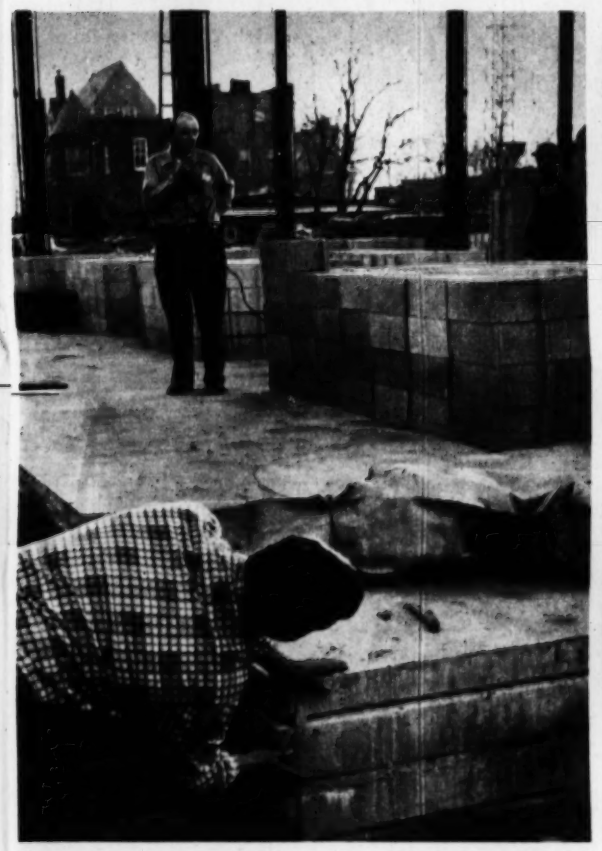
When lifting, the jacks are controlled simultaneously through a mechanism called a console. The slabs are elevated at the rate of about five feet an hour. Once a slab is in place, steel plates, known as shear blocks, are welded to the columns for the slab to rest on. Sometimes, the bottom of the lifting collar is then welded to the plates.

Theoretically, there is no limit — within normal building limitations — either to the area of one slab or to the number of stories. A seven-floor structure is the tallest yet built with the method. Slab dimensions generally are governed by the number of jacks available for a job. When necessary, several slabs can be joined together to attain the desired building area.

The structure on Lindell will be three stories high and will house division offices for the General Insurance Company of America and Safeco Insurance Company of America. The building was designed and is being built by The Austin Company, which is using the Lift Slab method under a license from the United States Lift Slab Corporation, holder of patents on the system.

For the entrance section at the east end, which rises above the rest of the building, conventional type construction was followed, with the various reinforced concrete slabs poured in place. The Lift Slab portion is being erected in two parts.

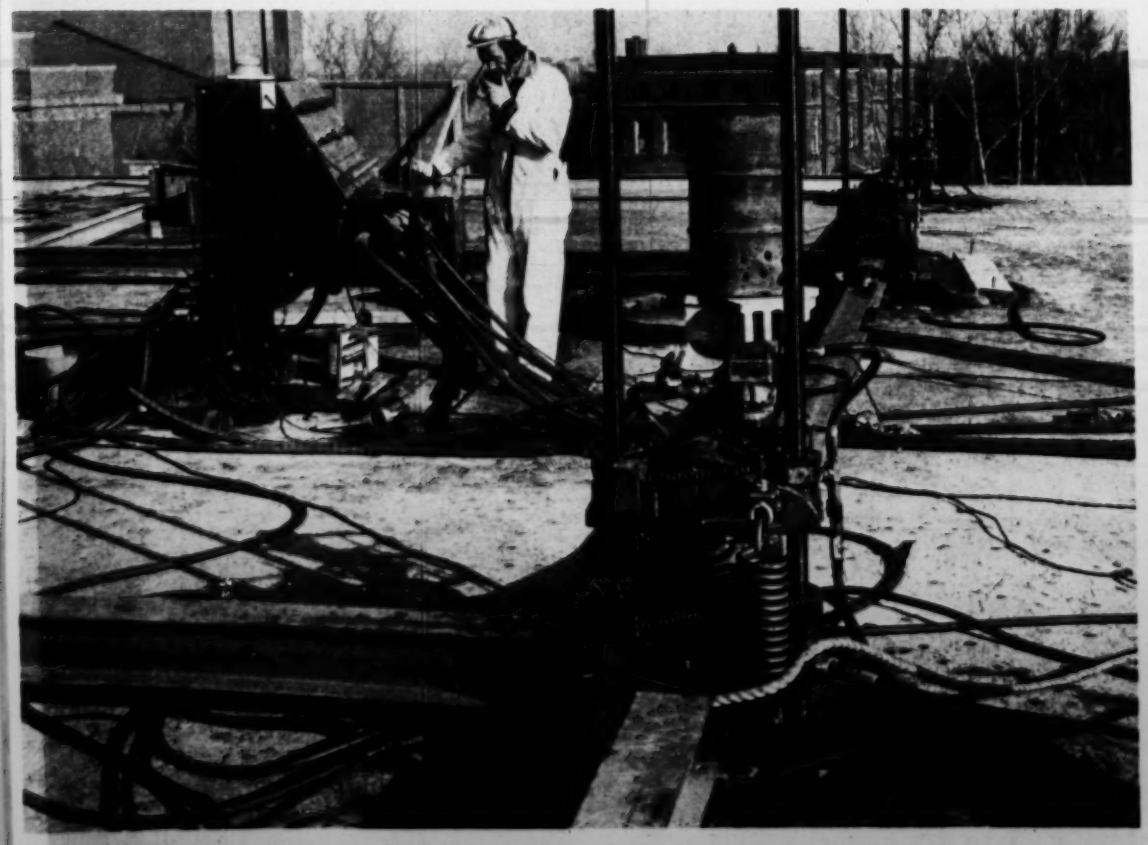
Photos by ARTHUR WITMAN
of the PICTURES Staff



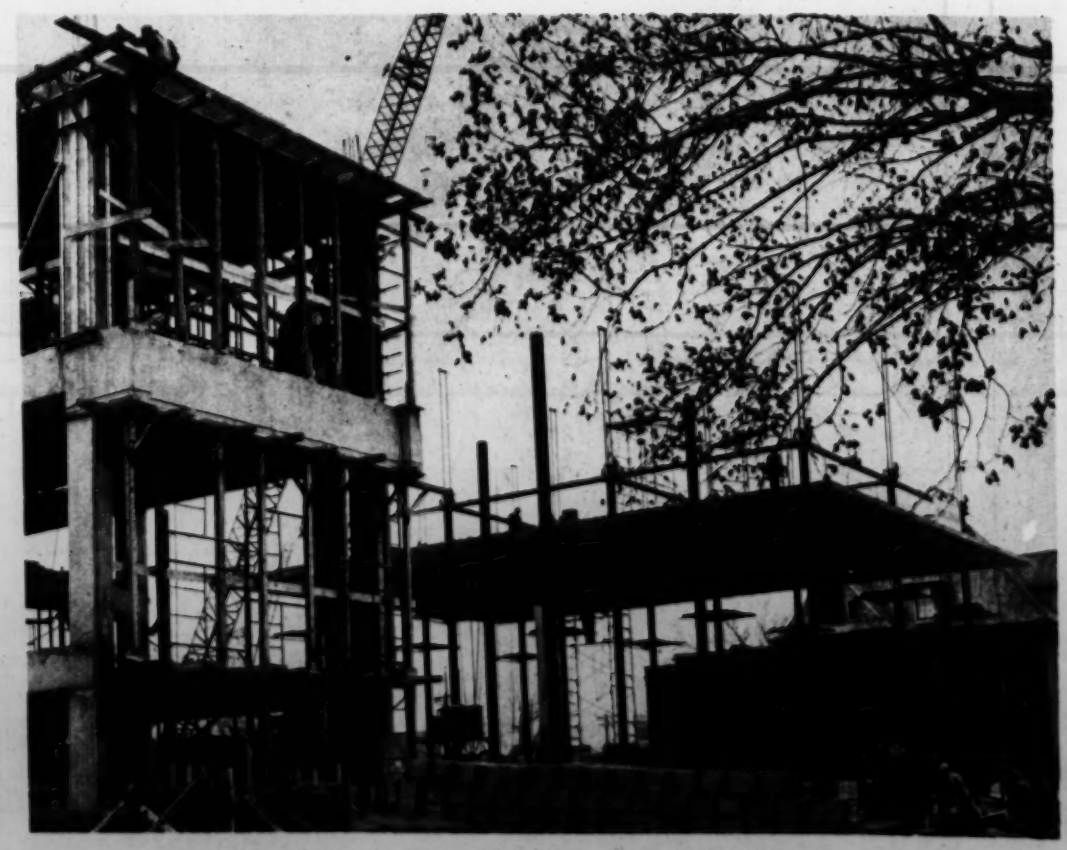
Most difficult part of lift is at start, called "peeling off." Although plastic coating keeps slabs from sticking together permanently, vacuum forms between them. To avoid excessive lifting pressure, slabs are raised slightly, one jack at a time, until free.

Third-floor slab of west section, being peeled in picture at left, rises steadily up columns. Piles of blocks on slab are being carried up for wall partitions, eliminating need for hoisting by conventional means.

With slab in position, welders attach steel plates to column to support slab. Threaded rods, like those beside column in foreground, enable jacks to lift slab. Rods pass through openings in collars, which are set in slab around each column.

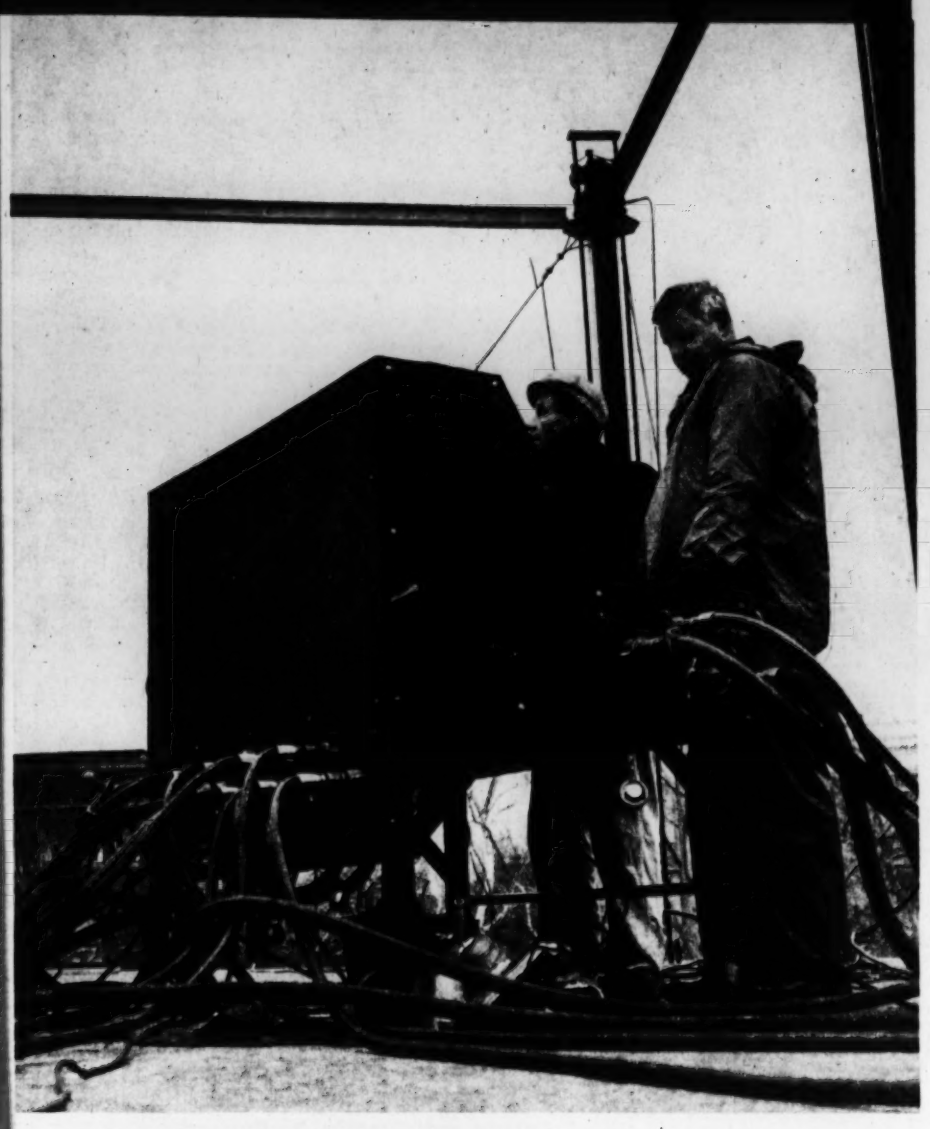


Operator of jack control mechanism talks by telephone with foreman on the ground. Mechanism is called a console. Each jack is connected to the threaded rods by two pairs of nuts. Upper pair holds firm and lifts the rods as top of jack rises. As top retracts, bottom pair keeps rods from slipping. Jacks take three-inch strokes.

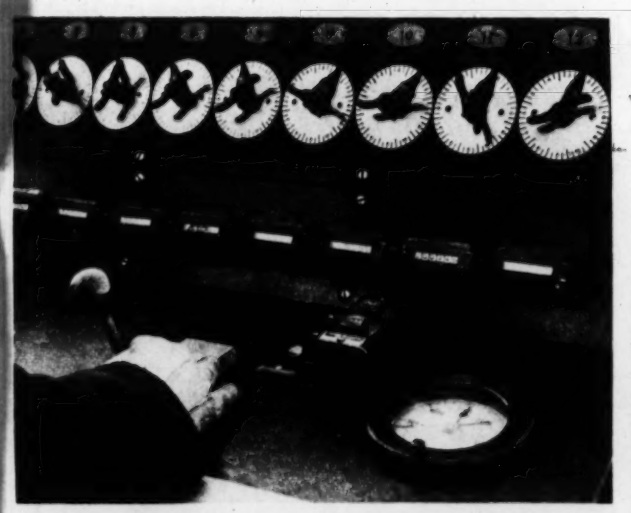


Contrasting construction methods are seen side by side. At left is the entrance section of the building, made the conventional way. At right, roof of west section, made by "Lift Slab" process, is being raised into position.

New Method Used on St. Louis Structure — Concrete Floors and Roof Are Laid on Ground, Pulled Into Place



Edward R. Hamilton, right, engineer supervising the first lift, checks console readings as roof section rises. Maze of hoses connects console with the jacks. Oil pumped by an electric motor gives jacks their lifting power. Console rides roof slab to top on first lift and remains there for the rest of the lifts.



"Keyboard" of console gives the operator control of jacks. Pointers on row of dials at top are valves for adjusting pressure to individual jacks. Mounted with pointers are handles to turn jacks on and off. Counters below dials register once for every twelfth of an inch a jack moves. Operator's hand is on main lifting valve. Pressure gauge is at right. Beside it is the starter switch for the oil pump.

Hamilton adjusts jack control and looks anxiously at jack to check response.

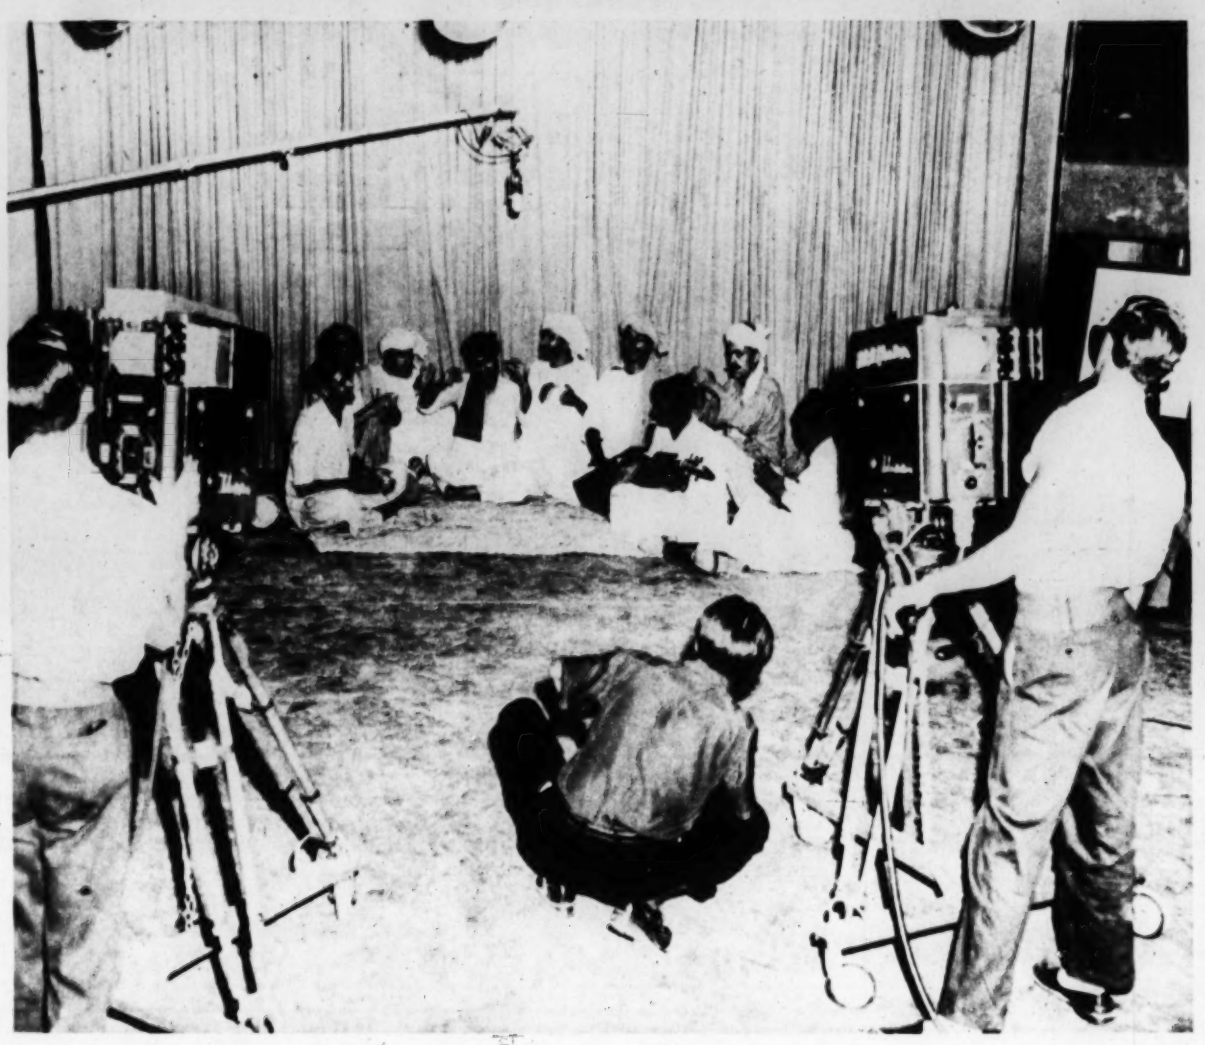
FOLK TV IN PAKISTAN

Karachi Station Makes Weekly Feature of Programs About Village Life



As the program director squats between a pair of television cameras, men from a remote village of Pakistan participate in a TV program in Karachi, the capital. They are singing folk songs to the accompaniment of a string instrument. Their appearance was on a weekly program devoted to bringing viewers in contact with life and customs in the remote areas of their own country.

On the same program a Pakistani woman conducts a TV cooking school. She is explaining how to make a local delicacy. The one-hour program is produced with the assistance of the United States International Cooperation Administration, a semiautonomous unit of the U.S. State Department.

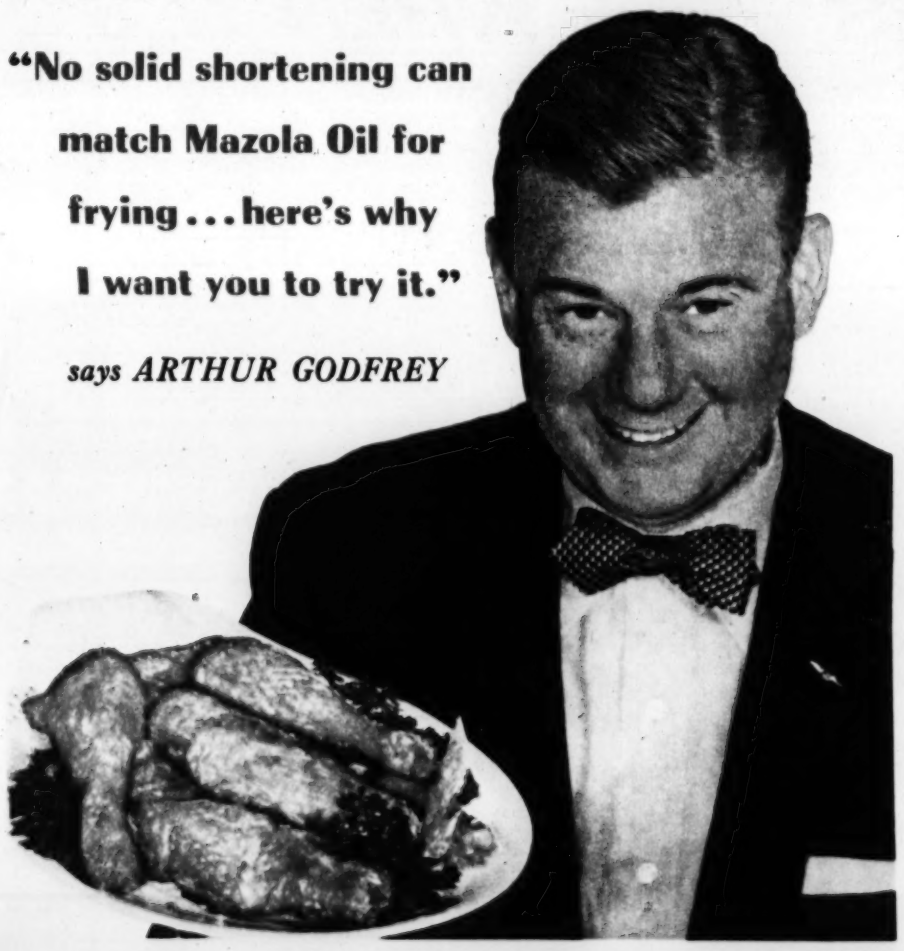
says ARTHUR GODFREY



foods taste better because you fry right . . . at the correct high temperature with no smoking . . . and

"KEEP CALORIES DOWN"

ARTHUR GODFREY's right! With Mazola* you fry food at a higher temperature than ordinary fats allow. And with no smoking or burning!

Food can't get fat-soaked. The quick-crusting action of Mazola oil gives food a golden brown crust fast—seals flavor and juices in, keeps "extra" calories in the pan.

All your Mazola fried foods taste better . . . look better, and are truly digestible, too.

This low-calorie Mazola method works for chicken, fish, French fried potatoes—all your favorite fried foods. So take Arthur's advice: Get Mazola Oil today!

For pan-frying and deep-frying always pre-heat Mazola to 375°F. before food is added. To test temperature, use a frying thermometer . . . or 1-inch square of day-old bread which turns golden brown in 15 seconds when pan-frying, in 30-40 seconds when deep-frying.

Arthur says: "No store-bought dressing can possibly have the fresh flavor, downright goodness of your own homemade dressing . . . so easy with golden Mazola Oil!"

Have you tried the new, easy Mazola No-Roll Pie Crust? Make, shape, bake right in the pie pan. No rolling. Recipe on label. Makes a wonderfully rich, tender pie crust.

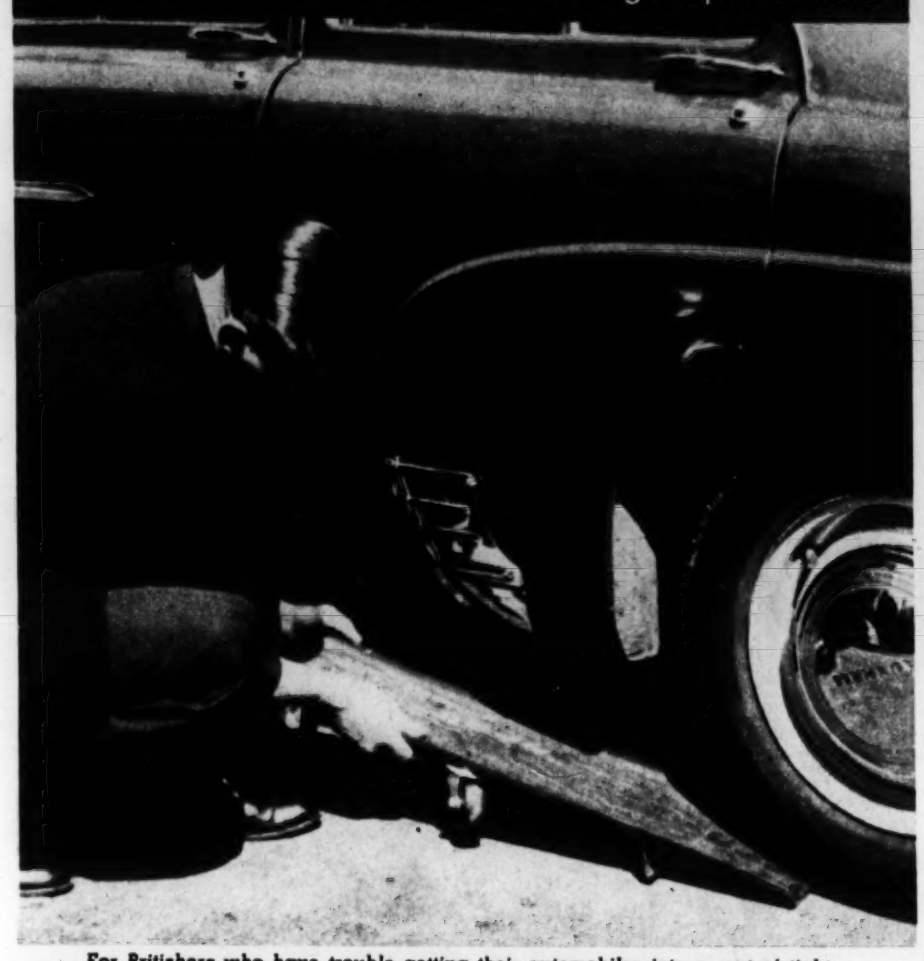
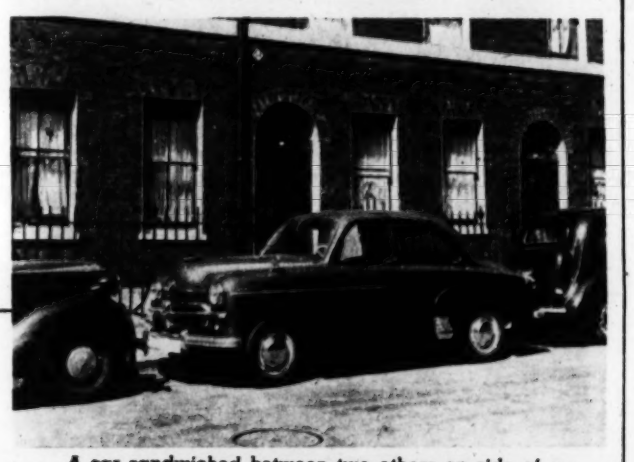
Gadget Gets Car Out of—Or Into—Tight Spot at Curb



For Britishers who have trouble getting their automobiles into or out of tight parking places, a London firm is producing a two-part device called "Car-Stirs." It consists of a couple of steel platforms, each with casters at one end and in the middle. Here a man places one end of "Stir" under rear wheel of car; other platform is placed under opposite wheel. Car would then be driven a few inches forward and up on rolling platforms.

British Official Photos



A car sandwiched between two others on side of a London street, with little room to spare, presents the sort of situation that Car-Stirs were designed for.

With rollers resting solidly under rear tires, the back end of the car is pushed away from curbing. Driver can now safely back out into the street. Reverse procedure could be used to get car into a curbing.

Each of the cadmium-plated steel platforms has four swiveling ball-bearing casters. It is small enough to be stored in car trunk. Size and strength are enough to handle medium-size machine on a smooth surface.

Tollinger had come to the frontier town to find his wife, living there as Nelly Bain and managing a group of dancing girls. Clint finds Nelly (Jan Sterling) still cold toward his roving career of danger, still blaming him for the death of their child.*

2. Clint surprises four of Holman's hands who had come to town to get rid of him. After shooting one of them, Clint proves too quick on the draw for another who tries to trick the deputy by reaching into his hat for a concealed gun.

3. In the Holman-owned Palace saloon, Clint again asserts his threat to the gang by shooting down the chandelier. Fire breaks out and the saloon burns down. Clint is forced to shoot the saloon operator, Rex Stang (Ted De Corsia), when Stang tries to knife him.

4. Holman's lawyer (James Westerfield), posing as a salesman, tricks one of Nelly's dancers, Ann Wakefield (Barbara Lawrence, right), into innocently laying a trap for Clint. Nelly learns about the plot, tries to head off Ann. But Clint, diverted momentarily by Ann on the street, is wounded by Holman, who in turn is shot by a friend of the deputy.

5. Clint is nursed by Nelly, who now recognizes her husband's true qualities and desires a reconciliation with him. Doc Hughes (Florenz Ames) tells them that Clint's wound is slight and that he will live.

TURNABOUT FOR RUNABOUT

Instead of riding across shallow streams in Berkshire County, England, at the risk of their motor's getting wet and stalling, these young women elect to lift the front end of their tiny runabout and wheel it across. The small and light vehicle, known as a "Minicar," is made by a British firm.

WOULD-BE ASSASSIN ON WAY TO PRISON

In Tehran, Iran, the would-be assassin (in long coat) of Iranian Premier Hussein Ala, is led sullenly to prison by police. The man, 32-year-old Mozaffar Ali Zulghaded, was seized after he fired shots that wounded the Premier in the back of the neck. The Premier was participating in funeral rites of another Iranian official. Police described Zulghaded as a religious fanatic.

A St. Louis Water Basin Receives Its Yearly Rinse

At least once a year, in rotation, the settling basins of St. Louis' water purification plants undergo a housecleaning. Chief purpose is to remove mud and chemicals which have accumulated from the purification process. First step in cleaning is to drain the basin of water. Then, a tractor, equipped with a bulldozer blade, is lowered into the basin by a derrick. In this photo, tractor driver Hermit Cavanaugh churns up the mud in basin No. 11 of the Howard Bend plant on the Missouri River. Coated chunks of ice float in the muddy residue as the machine's blade breaks up the mass. As the tractor makes circles and figure 8s, water is pumped into the 160,000-square-foot basin. Water flows in from one side, runs through, carries out the loose silt as the water drains back into the river. The caked mud at the bottom of basin No. 11 is about four feet deep at the end of a year. It takes about eight hours of stirring and flushing to remove the approximately 10,000 tons of sedimentation which settles to the tank's bottom annually. The 15-foot-deep basin, when clean, is filled with 15,000,000 gallons of water. The Howard Bend plant of the City of St. Louis' water division is 15 miles northwest of the city limits. It purifies 22 billion gallons of water each year.

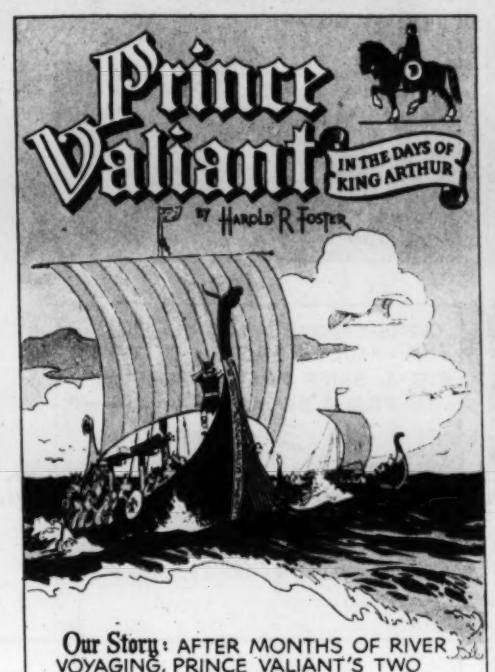
Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R. FOSTER



Our Story: AFTER MONTHS OF RIVER VOYAGING, PRINCE VALIANT'S TWO TREASURE-LADEN SHIPS SAIL OUT UPON THE SPARKLING SEA.

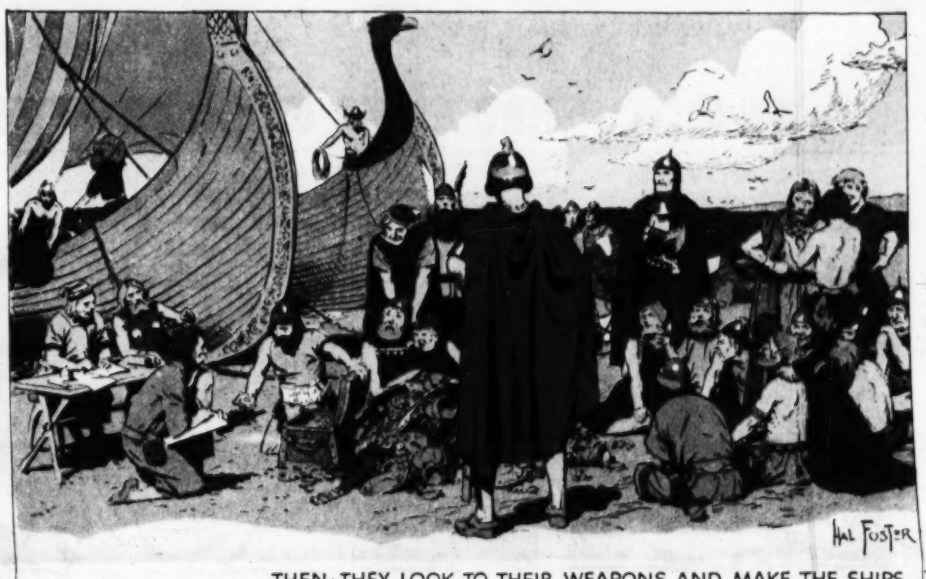
AT EVENING THEY BEACH THE SHIPS ON THE LAST ISLAND BEFORE CROSSING THE WIDE BALTIC.

HIS MEN HAVE BEEN PREPARING A SURPRISE FOR VAL AND REQUEST A FEAST ON THE MORROW.

A HUGH STONE IS REMOVED FROM THEIR SHIP AND ROLLED UP AN EARTHEN RAMP. THEN IT IS TIPPED INTO A HOLE DUG TO RECEIVE IT. AFTERWARDS THE RAMP IS SMOOTHED AWAY. ONLY THEN DO THEY CALL VAL TO REVIEW THEIR WORK.

IN VIKING FASHION THEY HAVE CARVED A RUNE STONE COMMEMORATING THEIR PRINCE FOR BRINGING HIS SHIPS SAFELY FROM THE BLACK SEA TO THE BALTIC; FOR THE RESCUE OF HIS QUEEN FROM THE PATZINAKS AND THE DESTRUCTION OF THEIR WALLED CITY.

THE FEAST IS A MERRY ONE, FOR THEIR SHIPS ARE LADEN WITH ALL THE TREASURES OF THE SACKED CITY.



THEN THEY LOOK TO THEIR WEAPONS AND MAKE THE SHIPS READY FOR WAR. THE PROFITS OF THEIR LONG JOURNEY ARE DIVIDED ACCORDING TO RANK AND SERVICE, FOR THE MOST DANGEROUS PART OF THEIR HOMEWARD VOYAGE IS STILL TO COME.

NEXT WEEK:—The Scotti.

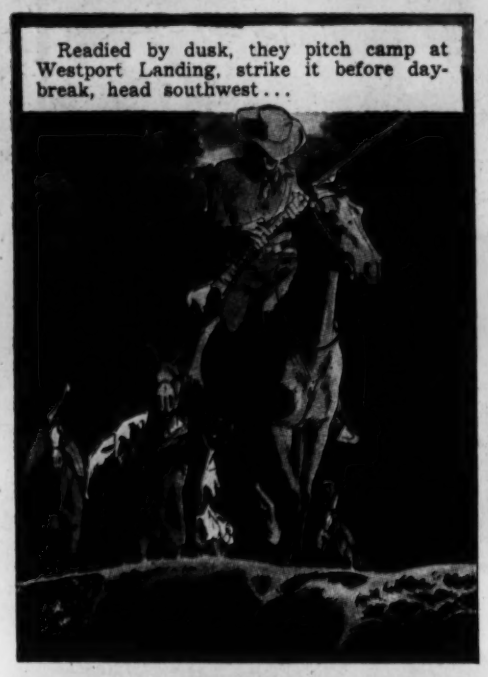
LANCE

The Sioux are moving onto lands claimed by other Indians. The Army wants to know what to expect in the way of trouble. It is Lance's job to find out.

With mountain man Tom Fitzpatrick as guide, Lance and Sergeant Blaze move quickly to shape their outfit.



Readied by dusk, they pitch camp at Westport Landing, strike it before daybreak, head southwest . . .

From a master of movement, Lance learns the true meaning of mobility. Fitz grinds out miles regardless of weather.

Part of the secret is in traveling light. The men live off the land, killing as they need . . .

They march a week without incident. Then one day Lance motions toward the horizon. Storm?

Fitz shakes his head. "Wildfahr."

That night they camp on the Platte. The west wind smells of smoke.

"Comin' this way, ain't it?" Blaze says.

"Don't worry about it," Fitz grunts. Then he rigs himself a shelter and goes to sleep.

Lance and Blaze shrug and do the same.

But they can't sleep. The night teems with sounds of panic as plains animals scurry before the onrushing flames.

"I ain't worried 'bout it," Blaze whispers. "But d'yew reckon this tent will keep out th' fahr?"
